Ribbentrop to Moscow Again; Dardanelles Closing Involved

By G. E. R. Gedye.
Copyright by New York Times.

Moscow, Sept. 26.—The sensational news was revealed this evening that German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop was about to pay a visit to Moscow at the invitation of the Soviet government.

Von Ribbentrop is flying again, arriving here tomorrow. No official information was forthcoming concerning the object of his visit but it is certainly connected, for one thing, with the present visit of the Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu.

Many things pointed to the conclusion that one object of Von Ribbentrop's visit will be to present an agreement whereby Germany would guarantee not to invade the Balkan countries and Russia would also guarantee no occupation, in return for a Turkish guarantee to close the Dardanelles to all belligerents.

From the Balkans, promises doubtless will be extracted that they would place their entire economic resources at Germany's disposal. If so, it would be a "bloodless" but an important victory for Germany, extracted under the threat of bloodshed if the agreements are refused.

To Avoid Balkan War

Turkey would thus escape being drawn into the war but, far more important, she would receive the promise—whatever it might be worth—that neither Germany nor Russia would send troops into the Balkans.

Turkey's fears of seeing Rumania or Greece in military occupation by a great power is based largely on the difficulty of defending Istanbul, owing to her postwar losses to Greece. But Turkey probably will retain freedom of action for the event of Italy entering war.

For Russia such an agreement would give security to the Black Sea not only in event of war with the Franco-British allies but would secure her sea communications there for the transit of goods.

[Diplomatic quarters in Bucharest heard that the subject of Russian-Turkish talks was a Turkish-proposed Soviet-Italian-Balkans pact aimed at keeping war out of southeastern Europe by mutual guarantees of the Balkan status quo, the Associated Press reported. It was added several of the Balkan states have indicated willingness to make concessions in order to remove long standing causes of mutual distrust. —Editor's note.]

Estonia Violently Attacked

Why Von Ribbentrop is coming is any man's guess.

Another possibility is the desire to ascertain Russia's precise intentions regarding Estonia and the other Baltic states.

Tallinu is a valuable ice free port which could be used for sending supplies to Germany—but equally would be valuable as a naval base for Soviet vessels when and if a rift comes in present German-Russian relations.

Extremely violent attacks in the Soviet press on the occasion of the recent escape of a Polish submarine from Tallinn with the entire suppression of stories of Estonian efforts to sink the escaping vessel, and the sudden departure of the Estonian foreign minister yesterday from Moscow after his conference at the Kremlin, followed by the departure today of the Estonian minister to Moscow, all indicate startling proposals have been made to Estonia.

The Estonian foreign minister is returning, it is announced, but that merely indicates the Estonians have had to yield to pressure.

The sudden departure today of the German naval attache to Berlin also

Charles A. Lindbergh Denies He Took Stand On Embargo, Senators Report

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Administration yesterday promised Congress a free hand in shaping neutrality act revisions, as Democratic leaders estimated present Senate support for arms embargo repeal at approximately 2 to 1.

At a press conference President Roosevelt was reticent regarding the pending "cash and carry" neutrality bill. Secretary of State Hull likewise declined to express an opinion in a letter to Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan. Hull wrote:

"The executive branch having performed its duty under the Constitution, the matter of the proposed legislation is, of course, now in the hands of the legislative branch, in whose ability to solve the problem I have complete confidence."

Claim 60 Votes for Repeal

Administration spokesmen at the Capitol said both the President and Hull plainly have left the choice of neutrality methods up to Congress, and intend no executive interference. They claimed a maximum strength for repeal of the embargo of 60 Senate votes as of yesterday, and allowed their isolationist opposition a total of only 30.

Unexpected outside support for the President's neutrality policies meantime came from former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, once a close friend but recently a bitter critic of the President. Smith authorized the Columbia Broadcasting System to announce he will speak over the radio Sunday night in support of the President's neutrality course.

At the Capitol, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh reportedly told a group of six Senators predominantly in favor of arms embargo repeal that his radio speech of September 15 was generally misinterpreted. One of the group said he reiterated his desire to keep this country out of war, but frankly said he did not know the best method. This spokesman said Lindbergh definitely "is no isolationist."

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, who already has declared his general support of the President's neutrality proposals, escorted Lindbergh to the private luncheon in the Commerce Committee office of Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina.

Famous Flier "Disturbed"

Others present were Senators George, of Georgia; Burke, of Nebraska; Gerry, of Rhode Island, and Johnson, of Colorado. All of these except Bailey and Gerry have declared they will support arms embargo repeal. Friends of Bailey and Gerry voiced belief that they ultimately will take the same stand.

During the three-hour conference, Col. Lindbergh gave the Senators his views of comparative European air strength, which they said was "confidential." He was said to have described America's air position as potentially good, but requiring much further development.

"He seemed disturbed at interpretations placed on his recent speech that he was opposed to embargo repeal," said one Senator, who requested his name not be used. "He expressed no opinion on repeal of the embargo, neither did he criticize the new cash-and-carry bill providing repeal. He took the position that he did not know the best method, but was convinced we should do everything possible to stay out of war. I think we were all of one mind."

Lindbergh's name recently had been mentioned in isolationist conferences as a probable ally in their fight for maintenance of the embargo, and he had been tentatively put down for other speeches in their program of "education." He was said to have disclosed no intention to make further speeches at the conference yesterday.

One of the Senators said "the view was expressed by some of those present that Congress should remain in session for the duration of the European war, even after the neutrality issue is disposed of." The same view has been put forward by former Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas.

Fifteen Senators constituting the nucleus of isolationist opposition to the President's neutrality policies, meanwhile, at a strategy conference, decided to concentrate their fire at embargo repeal proposals

French Artillery Blasts Hole in Germany's Main Defense Line

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris (Wednesday), Sept. 27. French artillery was reported today to have blasted a hole in the Siegfried Line fortifications between Merzig and Saarbruecken.

Dispatches said the entire French-German frontier, between the borders of neutral Luxembourg and Switzerland, blazed with artillery fire.

These advices said heavy German counterfire on advanced French positions in the Saar and Palatinate regions was designed to protect feverish efforts by German troops to rebuilt shattered blockhouses backing their line from Merzig to Saarbruecken—a distance of about 20 miles.

Earlier dispatches from the front said French infantry advanced under cover of heavy atillery fire, captured the town of Hornbach and pushed on beyond the main German fortification at that point.

Military sources described the battle this way:

German big guns replied to the French barrage with blasting fire, sending shells screaming into the wooded hills and steep ravines southeast of the German town of Zweibruecken, called Deux Ponts by the French.

French Hold Own in Air

Overhead French and German air forces clashed, the French holding their own against superior numbers.

Despite violent German reaction the French succeeded in consolidating the Hornbach salient, one of the most important strategic positions taken by the French on the northern flank of the front between the Rhine and Moselle rivers.

Hornbach lies a little more than a mile within German territory in the valley of the Horn River.

The general staff's evening communique showed that German firing spread from the sector south of Zweibruecken to a parallel region south of Pirmasens, 12 miles to the east on the other side of France's Hornback salient.

It was through this rugged area that the French had been infiltrating gradually. Moving north from the Bitche plateau, military dispatches said, they seized the border villages and occupied crests around Hornbach, took the town and pushed on to Alt (Old) Hornbach.

Surprise Attack Repulsed

On the eastern end of the north flank, the French communiue said, a German surprise attack at dawn in the Lauter River alley was repulsed.

French troops, after three weeks of fighting through outposts of the Siegfried Line, were said to have come into contact with a principal field of pillboxes and trenches around Hornbach. This is one of the points where the Siegfried Line curves closest to the frontier.

An indication of an increase in activity in this sector was given in military dispatches which formerly reported companies of 250 men in action. They now said battalions of 1,000 were engaging in combat.

Asserting that outlying villages and machine-gun nests of the Siegfried Line had been taken, French observers said their artillery was pounding main fortifications on a 100-mile northern flank running

LAURA INGALLS

Aviatrix Bombards Capital With Leaflets For American Peace

A diminutive but fiery avatrix in a silver monoplane subjected the National Capital to an "English air raid" yesterday afternoon, and was ordered by the Civil Aeronautics Authority on her return to show cause why her pilot's license should not be revoked or suspended.

Laura Ingalls, noted aviatrix and spearhead of the Women's National Committee to Keep United States Out of War campaign, showered leaflets urging Congress to adopt a policy of "mind our own business." Two of the pamphlets, according to the CAA, fell in the White House grounds, news which Miss Ingalls said she was shocked to hear.

2 Air Rules Held Broken

"I am a patriotic American," she said. "I wouldn't think of dropping anything on the White House, the symbol of everything for which America stands."

The "bombardment" violated two sections of the civil air regulations, the CAA explained after issuing the "show cause" order. Miss Ingalls not only dropped material over a municipality without receiving special permission from the authority and consent of the municipality, but flew over a section of Washington which has been restricted since 1935.

Maker of Air History

Boundaries of the restricted area run from Union Station to the House Office Building, the Naval Hospital, the intersection of Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, and back to Union Station between G and H streets. Miss Ingalls said at the airport she did not know of any such restrictions.

According to CAA spokesmen the flier may be subject to revocation

6-Point Program To Assure Peace In West Urged at Panama Parley

By William A. Weilands
Associated Press Staff Writer

Panama, Panama, Sept. 26.—The United States today proposed to the Inter-American Neutrality Conference a program designed to keep the European war at a distance from the Western Hemisphere.

The program, which would be undertaken in co-operation with the other American republics, was presented by the chief United States delegate, Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State.

Six main points provided for:

1. A safety zone for merchant shipping in the patroling of which the United States Navy would cooperate and, in effect, bear the chief burden. An attempt to prevent searches, seizures, commerce raiding and other belligerent activities in this zone would be made.

2. A ban on belligerent submarines in the ports of American republics.

Liberal Trade Policies

3. A joint representation to the belligerents setting forth the neutrality declarations of the Americas.

4. An "inter-America advisory committee" to study stabilization of monetary and commercial relationships among the American republics.

5. Preservation of liberal trade policies in the Western Hemisphere.

6. Suppression of "subversive activities" and activities violating neutrality.

Welles stated plainly the United States Navy would co-operate in patroling waters adjacent to the Western Hemisphere.

As normal shipping lanes which would be covered in the Welles proposal run far to sea from the United States to the northern part of South America, an informed person said it would be necessary for the United States Navy to patrol an area at sea hundreds of miles wide.

However, the routes are close to the South American coast, making a patrol easy in the case of Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, who already have a coastal patrol agreement among themselves.

A large area for patrol also is considered unnecessary by countries on the west coast of the southern part of South America.

Condemns Submarine Attacks

Welles set forth this stand at a meeting of the foreign ministers of American states. The patrol proposal had been advanced by several delegations, the only major disagreement apparently being on the extent of the "safety zone" in which it would operate.

Welles, proposing that the American states completely close their ports to submarines of any belligerent power, condemned submarine attacks as the lowest form of assault in the scale of organized warfare.

Declaring that warships of belligerent nations have been sighted in waters adjacent to the American continent and recalling the attacks on merchant shipping between American republics during the World War, Welles said the United States' proposal aimed at prevention of the commission of any hostile act by belligerents in American waters.

Compliance to Be Asked

Wells proposed that the American republics try by joint representations to the belligerent powers "to secure compliance with this declaration and that when they consider it necessary they will consult together to determine measures which they may individually or col-

Truckers End Strike, 3,000 To Go to Work

Union and Operators Agree to Submit Trouble To Two Arbitrators

Approximately 3,000 building tradesmen will go back to work this morning as a result of settlement yesterday of the two-week strike of truck drivers seeking wage increases and shorter hours.

Representatives of the Dump Truck Operators Association and the Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union, Local 639, meeting under the chairmanship of Dr. John R. Steelman, director of the Labor Department Conciliation Service, agreed to submit their differences to two arbitrators for decision.

"The strike over wages and hours and working conditions is settled," Dr. Steelman said.

Hotel Workers Picket

As the conference got under way, picket lines were established at the Pennsylvania Hotel on Union Station Plaza by Hotel Service Workers, Local 80.

"The hotel refuses to recognize our clearly established majority and will not bargain with us," union officials said.

A jurisdictional dispute between the trucking union and the Operative Engineers Union is being submitted to the building trades division of the American Federation of Labor for settlement, Dr. Steelman said.

Only building which may be slowed by the jurisdictional dispute is that for the Social Security Board and the Railroad Retirement Board.

Chief matters to be considered by the arbitrators are the union demands for a 15-cent hourly increase, the eight-hour day, and determination of overtime payment.

Meanwhile, representatives of the Capital Transit Co. and the Street Car Men's Union continued their negotiations on proposed wage increases.

Vatican Press Lauds Aims Of Roosevelt

By Herbert L. Matthews.
Copyright by New York Times.

Vatican City, Sept. 26.—The friendliness displayed in Vatican circles toward President Roosevelt and his neutrality policies was shown more clearly than ever today in the Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper, by an editorial comparing American policies to the Pope's.

Another column of newspaper comment from the American press showed that the Roosevelt message was favorably received, while Ambassador Biddle is cited in still another column.

The editorial is written by Count Bella Torre, director of the newspaper, who starts with an analysis of a speech by Secretary Hull. He writes that the Roosevelt message "with its noble appeal to religion" recalls the words of the Pontiff.

"It is impossible not to perceive the almost literal identity of the essential points enumerated by the head of state of one of the most powerful and modern nations of the world," continued the editorial, "and the principles enunciated by the supreme religious leader with the highest spiritual authority of the world. For the Pontiff, preaching springs from revealed truth; for the statesman, it comes from concrete experiences."

The Italian press does not share this enthusiasm for Roosevelt. Some of the extreme newspapers are attacking the Osservatore for being so friendly to the American President. In Vatican circles, however, it is said that the Osservatore is taking the line of policy which all Italian newspapers will follow before long, not only as regards friendliness to America, but in its antagonism to Russia and its sympathy with Poland.

Sub Toll Cut, Cargo Seizures Exceed Losses, Churchill Says

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 26.—Great Britain's first lord of the admiralty, Winston Churchill, today told the nation that enemy submarines were being checked with greater success than in the World War and that the empire's merchant marine was being armed for a fight that "is only just beginning."

Speaking in the House of Commons immediately after Prime Minister Chamberlain had made his fourth report on the war's progress, Churchill stole the show from his chief.

He declared that Britain had seized more German cargo than she had lost to submarines. British losses have been reduced from 65,000 tons in the first week of war to 46,000 tons in the second week; 21,000 in the third and only 9,000 in the last six days, he said.

Churchill coupled his comparison of British gains and losses at sea with a pledge to fight sea attackers with guns, convoys and other means.

Chamberlain added "a word of warning against over-optimism," but expressed belief Britain's sea power eventually would cripple German ability to prolong hostilities.

The first lord of the admiralty, back in his World War post, also added the caution that "we must not dwell upon these reassuring figures too much . . . We must expect further losses.

"The whole vast business of our worldwide trade continues without interruption or appreciable diminution. Great convoys of ships are escorted to their destinations and enemy ships of commerce have been

French Outlaw Communist Party, Suppress Its Papers

By John Elliott.
Copyright, 1939, by N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

Paris, Sept. 26.—The Daladier cabinet today decreed the dissolution of the French Communist Party—most powerful foreign section of the Comintern since Fuehrer Hitler suppressed its German branch six years ago.

With the outlawry of the Red Party in France communism now ceases to exist as an organized force in any major country of Europe, with the exception, of course, of Russia.

The action of the French government in proscribing the Communist Party comes as no surprise. It had been foreseen for weeks, ever since Russia signed the nonaggression pact with Germany and followed it up by making an agreement with Berlin for the partitition of Poland.

Josef Stalin's action automatically made the French Communists enemies of their own country, which is waging war for the maintenance of Polish independence and territorial integrity, so long as the French Reds maintained their loyalty to the Third Internationale.

Even leftist papers such as L'Oeuvre have been advocating the abolition of the French Communist Party since the outbreak of the war. Leon Blum, the Socialist Party leader, recently made an urgent appeal to the French Communists to save their party by formally renouncing their allegiance to Moscow.

But this step the Communist leaders refused to take. Senator Marcel Cachin, the veteran chief of the party, while declaring that the French Communists stood solidly behind the French govern-

TUMULT ON THE POTOMAC

POTOMAC CHAFF: Quite a few Members of Congress are collecting over $1,000 each for traveling to and from the session at 20 cents a mile—or a neat profit of $800 over what it actually cost them. . . . But that scarcely covers board and room in Washington. . . . In his next-to-last chat with Hitler before the war began, British Ambassador Nevile Henderson virtually called the Fuehrer a liar when Hitler began to rave about England.

Harlan Miller

* * * *

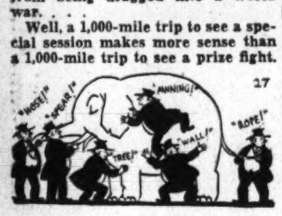
Even a few intelligent people have fallen for the chautauqua pap that repealing the arms embargo will get us into the war. . . . Quite a few celebrities journeyed to the Capital for a glimpse of the special session's early innings. . . . "Historic sessions, like 1917," was their explanation, spoken or implied.

* * * *

It's further proof that if a few yell something loudly enough, a lot will be found to believe them.

These sessions are historic, certainly. But they're likely to become historic because they prevented us from being dragged into a world war. . . .

Well, a 1,000-mile trip to see a special session makes more sense than a 1,000-mile trip to see a prize fight.



"—a-ha! that's neutrality!"

Like the blindfolded wise men with the elephant, almost every Senator has grabbed a different bit of neutrality's anatomy and cried "This is it." . . .

Some think it's a spear for England; others that it's a rope for FDR toward a third term.

Some feel it's a pillar of strength for business; a few think it's an unfair obstacle for Hitler.

Several regard it as a trumpet for idealism; many regard it as a magic carpet for flight to a nirvana of detachment.

* * * *

Amid the confusion, the most realistic clues I can get are these two:

The most honest supporters of FDR say they want repeal of the embargo so American airplanes (but flown by Britons) can help the Allies defeat Germany before this country works itself around to a war fever.

The most honest opponents of embargo repeal admit that to them a more immediate menace than war in 1941 is Roosevelt in 1940.

* * * *

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Senators, though somewhat impressed by the influx of embargo mail, are concluding in many cases that there's a difference between the average constituent and the one who writes in hysterical letters prompted by pressure or prejudice.

So far none of them have heard from more than one per cent of their constituents. . . .

The graver the session, the more likely some Congressmen are to have their small daughters sitting beside them in the House.

"—in on a historic session"

Illustrative of the sort of story that gains swift currency these days is the one based on the false German propaganda broadcast that Winston Churchill ordered a British submarine to sink the liner Athenia. The sequel, even more preposterous, though oftenest told as a humorous example of how far Nazi propaganda can go, has swept the Capital.

* * * *

This tale asserts that after the "British submarine" had sunk the Athenia, she was ordered by Churchill to go to a certain specified point on a remote island coast and submerge at a depth of 25 or 30 feet.

* * * *

Then the British Admiralty lord, according to this lurid and baseless story, wirelessed a British cruiser that an enemy submarine was submerged at that point, and ordered it to drop a depth bomb. His object, according to the tale, was to liquidate the crew of 80 which might disclose how the Athenia was sunk. How do you like that one?

* * * *

One reason why Congressmen attach a profound and solicitous importance to constituents' letters on the embargo is their belief that a large proportion of these letters come from half-frantic parents with boys from 17 to 25 who, they think, would be likeliest to face shot and shell if by some misstep we did get into the war.

Book Recalls Rumor of Clash In War Dept.

Johnson's Foreword Not Administration's View, Says Roosevelt

By Felix Colten

President Roosevelt declared emphatically yesterday that a book entitled "Adjusting Your Business to War," with a foreword by Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, did not bear the imprimature of the Administration.

He remarked also that 90 per cent of the books dealing with strategy were written by people who know less than nothing about such a subject.

Mr. Roosevelt's comment was made at a press conference in response to a question whether Johnson's writing of a foreword to the book indicated Administration approval.

He said Secretary of War Woodring had called the book to his attention at a special meeting with six Cabinet officers shortly before the press conference.

Disagreement Recalled

The author of the book is Leo M. Cherne, executive secretary of the Tax Research Institute of America, Inc., which published the 238-page volume.

Johnson, in the foreword, said the institute, in putting out the book, "has taken an important step forward for the welfare of the business community and, inseparably, for the furtherance of national defense."

The book attempts to acquaint businessmen with the Army-Navy industrial mobilization plan and the consequent adjustments which they would have to make in their business in case this country were plunged into war.

Future Needs Considered

"Our industrial mobilization plan," Johnson said, "attempts to anticipate World War difficulties in any future war, and visualizes an orderly transition from a peace status to a maximum war effort, with the minimum disruption to our peacetime methods and procedure, and with post-war readjustment given careful consideration.

"The need to inform the American business community of these plans and of the reason for their existence is apparent from the very extensiveness of the changes which war must, of necessity, impose upon private enterprise. The intelligent executive not only does his business a service but aids immeasurably the plans for national defense by understanding the adjustments business must make in the event of an emergency."

That an industrial mobilization plan is necessary for adequate preparedness, Johnson said, is the most important lesson learned from World War experiences. The second most important lesson, he declared, is that "temporary executive control and co-ordinating agencies must be set up to act for and under the President, with delegated war powers which expire with the close of the emergency."

Cherne Thanks Strategists

Cherne, in the book, extends thanks for aid in preparing it to officers of the Army and Navy Munitions Board, of which Johnson and Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison are joint chairmen, and to officers of the Army Industrial College.

The officers, he said, "not only contributed their time and knowledge, but the research and data which they have labored years to perfect."

Census to Start Asking Questions On January 2

The Census Bureau announced yesterday the completion of a long list of questions to be asked American businessmen, beginning January 2.

The questions will ask the volume of sales this year and other trade information. Data concerning individual businesses will be confidential.

Enumerators will visit about 1,700,000 retailers, 180,000 wholesalers, 750,000 service businesses, 50,000 hotels and tourist camps, 50,000 theaters and other amusement places and about 200,000 construction contractors. An additional 2,500 sales finance companies will be canvassed by mail.

G.W. Hatchet Faces Reorganization

Membership on the editorial board of the George Washington University Hatchet, weekly student publication, was restricted yesterday to junior and senior classmen pending further plans to reorganize the paper on a permanent basis, it was announced.

The upperclassmen restriction was recommended by the university's publications committee, headed by Dean Henry Gratton Doyle. Coupled with the decision was a further recommendation requiring higher academic qualifications for positions on The Hatchet, and greater participation by full-time students.

Reorganization plans now under way also are expected to link the paper more closely with journalism studies at the university. Members of the Hatchet board of editors now include Ira Brown, Sue Burnett, Murray Burdick, Roy Eastin, Irwin Nathanson and Bruce Skaggs.

Transfer of Moore Stands, Says Brown

Policeman Altus Moore, whose transfer from the Eleventh to the Fourth Precinct had the Southeast up in arms last week demanding his return, is going to stay at his new job, Superintendent of Police Brown said yesterday.

"The transfer was made for the good of the service," said Maj. Brown yesterday, refusing to consider revoking it. Patrolman Moore was transferred last Monday after 10 years as the "favorite policeman" of Southeast children.

The Gallup Poll

Survivors of the S. S. Athenia and contrasting British and German versions as to the cause of the disaster. A national survey shows that the American public, while discounting the German denials that the Athenia was torpedoed by a U-boat, is on the lookout for propaganda from both sides and is not willing to place complete faith in European war reports. Even the above photograph had to be passed by a British censor before it could be released.

Public Skeptical of Foreign News Reports; Poll Discloses Awareness of Propaganda

Propaganda has grown to be one of the most powerful weapons of modern warfare—useful both in demoralizing enemy forces and in influencing the opinion of neutrals. How aware is the American public that propaganda is being used in the present war, and how effective has that propaganda been so far? The following survey throws light on these questions.

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J. Sept. 26.—The overwhelming majority of American voters are aware that propaganda is being used by the belligerents in the present European war and say they are not ready to place complete confidence in the statements and explanations of either the Allied powers or Germany at the present time.

GEORGE GALLUP

This critical attitude is revealed in a national survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion. The results show, however, that while the majority do not have full confidence in the statements of Germany—despite Hitler's boasts of the power of German propaganda. This tendency may possibly be accounted for by the fact that most Americans have in many surveys been found sympathetic with the Allied cause in the present struggle.

The public's attitude is shown in the replies to three survey questions—two of a general nature and one a specific question dealing with the sinking of the Athenia.

The British have blamed the Athenia disaster on a torpedo from a U-boat. The German press, on the other hand, denied the torpedoing and even suggested that the passenger liner was sunk by the British in order to arouse anti-German sentiment. The attitude of American voters toward this controversy is as follows:

"The British say that the transatlantic liner Athenia was sunk by a German submarine. The Germans say they did not sink it. Do you believe the Germans sank the Athenia?"

Germans sank it	60%
Germans didn't sink it	9
No opinion	31

It seems clear from the results that, in this first German propaganda skirmish, the Reich came off second best so far as influencing American opinion is concerned.

But this does not mean that the public is completely hospitable to the statements and reports from the Allied side. The other two questions in the Institute survey shows that only a small handful of voters say they have "complete confidence" in the news from England and France. As many as 30 per cent declare they have "no confidence" in Allied reports, while the rest say they have only "some confidence." As for German statements and reports, a large majority of American voters—approximately two-thirds—declare they have no faith in what the Reich says.

"Do you have confidence in the news from Germany at the present time?"

Yes, complete confidence	1%
Yes, some confidence	33
No confidence	66

"Do you have confidence in the news from England and France at the present time?"

Yes, complete confidence	8%
Yes, some confidence	62
No confidence	30

Only one voter in every 20 (5 per cent), on the average, said he had no opinion on these questions.

The survey found only minor differences in attitude among various groups of the population. The lower income voters, with presumably fewer educational advantages than the voters of wealthier homes, were no more disposed to believe the reports from abroad than the upper income voters. In fact, slightly more skepticism was found in the lowest economic levels.

As for age groups, voters over 50 were found to have a little less faith than other age groups in the reports from Germany—perhaps because of their recollections of the last war—but slightly more faith in the news from England and France.

War Resources Board to Die As It Reports

Presidential Move to Negative War Talk Seen in Announcement

By John G. Norris.

President Roosevelt announced yesterday that the War Resources Board, set up last month to prepare plans for mobilization and control of industry in a war emergency, will be disbanded within the next two weeks.

The Chief Executive said he expected a report from the group of leading industrialists in the next ten days at which time he would commend them for exceedingly good work and then dismiss them. Their work would be done, he added.

His announcement was greeted with some surprise since, when the board was established six weeks ago, the action carried every indication of some degree of permanency. A joint announcement from the War and Navy departments at that time declared that "in an emergency the War Resources Board would become an executive agency of the Government with broad powers similar to those of the old War Industries Board."

To Negative War Talk

The President's declaration was interpreted in some quarters as an Administration effort to negative any suggestion that the United States is preparing for war. This was borne out by a statement from Secretary of War Woodring last night.

Woodring, contending there has never been any intention of making the board a permanent agency, declared:

"We are not setting up any war boards or war machinery and, as far as I am concerned, I hope we never will."

The War Secretary was in Panama when the board, headed by Edward R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, was appointed.

Johnson Indicated Permanency

Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, then Acting Secretary, made the following statement when the group convened:

"In establishing the War Resources Board, we have necessarily had in mind the possibility that an agency of the Government would be required to execute the plans we are now preparing for the mobilization of our material resources for war. Should war occur, we would expect that the War Resources Board would be made such an executive agency and be placed directly under the control of the President, and that he delegate to it such of his emergency powers as appear desirable. In this event, the War Resources Board would become the War Resources Administration visualized in the document called the industrial mobilization plan.

"In this connection, it should be stated that as a result of experience under the old War Industries Board, it appears probable that authority for final decisions would be given to the chairman of the War Resources Administration rather than to the group as a whole. The only exception would be that on price fixing the chairman would be governed by the conclusions of the price control committee."

In Session Since August 17

Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison issued a statement at the same time expressing his "full accord" with Johnson's remarks.

Explaining the apparent conflict between Woodring's statement of yesterday and those of Johnson and Edison, other officials pointed out that the war in Europe had not started when the board was named. Today, the desire to avoid appearance of preparation for war by having a "war board" in existence, may outweigh the advantages of having such a body make a continuous study of mobilization problems and be ready to act at once if war should come, they declare.

Since August 17, the board has been in almost continuous session reviewing the plans of the Army and Navy Munitions Board and preparing recommendations for changes or extensions of the latter's program for mobilization of industry in war time.

Sun Oil Head Reveals Price Differential

Dealers Exclusively in His Brand Pay Half Cent Less, He Says

By the Associated Press

J. Howard Pew, president of the Sun Oil Co., of Philadelphia, testified before the National Economic Committee yesterday that his company sells gasoline for half a cent a gallon less to dealers handling only its brand than to those handling other brands also.

In response to committee questions, he said this policy was not designed to discourage filling station operators from taking rival gasolines.

Buy Smaller Amounts

Instead, Pew declared, it was intended to meet the additional cost of delivering to dealers handling two or more brands. These dealers on the whole, he said, bought smaller amounts from his company than did stations handling its products exclusively.

Wendell Berge, representing the Department of Justice, asked whether the arrangement did not actually constitute a discount for quantity purchases.

The witness replied that it did not, that a quantity discount would be equally satisfactory to him but that charging the higher price to meet the higher average cost of delivering to "split dealer" stations was a practice which had grown up in the industry.

"I think you will find," Pew added, "that the Federal Trade Commission has looked into the matter and decided that this was about as good an arrangement as could be worked out."

Some members of the committee suggested that ownership of pipe lines gave the large companies an advantage over so-called independent firms, especially those operating in only one branch of the industry.

Pipe Line Controversy

Willis Ballinger, economic adviser to the Trade Commission, observed that an argument for divorcement of oil companies and pipe lines might come to the front eventually, and that if it did, he did not think it should be contended that the pipe lines could not be sold.

Pew testified that the cost of transporting oil by pipe line was lower than by rail. Hugh Cox, of the Justice Department, asked whether independent operators had been able to move oil over pipe lines of the major companies. Pew said he knew of no instances where they had been unable to do so.

A F L Union Declares Embargo Hurts Democracy, Asks Repeal

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 26.—The A. F. of L.'s metal trades union in a strongly worded report terming the neutrality arms embargo act unfair to "democratic nations" today asked Congress to revise the measure to permit free sale of American goods to all nations.

The report as adopted said the neutrality law's operations gave "negative aid to the dictatorships" of Russia and Italy while barring Great Britain and France from buying American arms because they were at war.

The report made no mention of the "cash and carry" plan favored by President Roosevelt in the sale of munitions to foreign nations, and left to Congress the determination how the free sale of American merchandise could be carried on without involving this Nation in war.

The resolutions committee which drafted the report said maintenance of the arms embargo against belligerents made the neutrality act "definitely unfair and unneutral."

Russia and Italy, described in the report as "the two largest European dictatorships," were left free under the embargo to buy American goods carried on American ships while England and France were cut off from purchasing American arms because they were engaged in a war. It also criticized the law because it embargoed finished munitions, permitting at the same time trade in other commodities equally necessary for war uses.

"For these reasons and many others," the report stated, "we believe the present so-called neutrality act to be extremely unneutral and discriminatory against the democratic nations . . ."

In its request for Congressional action, the report called for the removal of the "unneutral provisions" from the law to allow free sale of goods to all nations "in such a manner as will prevent the United States from becoming allied with one group of warring nations against another . . ."

In U. S. 4 Months, Wife Naturalized

Mrs. Annie Buffum, 44, who has been the wife of an American foreign service officer for 15 years, was granted United States citizenship by Chief Justice Wheat in a special session of Naturalization Court yesterday.

Mrs. Buffum came to America four months ago but was eligible to apply for citizenship immediately because the law says she has been technically a resident of this country since her marriage, when her husband, David H. Buffum, was American consul in Leipzig. She was born in Poland.

Her husband is on temporary assignment to the State Department in Washington.

'Mr. Roosevelt, Won't You Run Again?' Song Topic

The same composer who wrote the music for "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" has now come forth with a ditty which may serve for the calliope on a bandwagon—"Mr. Roosevelt, Won't You Please Run Again?"

A show window of a downtown music store is arrayed with the sheet music of this song—an undecided expression on Mr. Roosevelt's face on the cover.

The music, with directions for playing in "spirited march time," is being heard by a rim of listeners at the music store's counter, but customers did not divulge whether their interest was musical or political.

Garfinckel Stock to Go On Market

110,000 Common, 20,000 Preferred Will Be Offered

The first sizable security issues since the outbreak of war in Europe is expected to reach the market tomorrow with the public offering of 110,000 shares of common stock and 20,000 shares of cumulative convertible 6 per cent preferred stock of Julius Garfinckel & Co., Inc., it was announced yesterday.

The common stock is being offered at $10 per share by a banking group headed by J. G. White & Co., Inc. The preferred is offered at $25 per share by a group headed by Robert Garrett & Sons, Baltimore, and Alex. Brown & Sons, Baltimore.

The underwriters of the common stock, most of whom are also underwriters of the preferred stock, include J. G. White & Co., Inc., New York; Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, Washington; Robert Garrett & Sons, Baltimore; Alex. Brown & Sons, Baltimore; Baker, Watts & Co., Baltimore; Y. E. Booker & Co., Washington, D. C.; Childs, Jeffries & Thorndike, Inc.; Barrett, Herrick & Co., Inc., New York; Johnston, Lemon & Co., Washington, D. C.; Kirchofer & Arnold, Inc., Raleigh, N. C.; Scott, Horner & Mason, Inc., Lynchburg, Va.; Stein Bros. & Boyce, Baltimore.

Proceeds to Buy Store

Proceeds of the above issues are to be devoted to the purchase of the business and real estate of Julius Garfinckel & Co. (unincorporated), which has operated, since 1905, a retail department store business in Washington. The business of the predecessor company will be purchased from the Riggs National Bank of Washington and others, as executors and trustees of the estate of Julius Garfinckel.

The balance of the purchase price of $4,349,000 will be provided through a $2,200,000 deed of trust to the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, secured by a first lien on the real estate and improvements thereon, and by delivery of $750,000 par value of cumulative convertible 6 per cent preferred stock to the estate of Julius Garfinckel, and $84,000 in promissory notes. Upon completion of the financing, the company's outstanding capitalization will comprise 50,000 shares of cumulative convertible 6 per cent preferred stock, $25 par, and 110,000 shares of $1 par common stock.

The business to be purchased and operated by Julius Garfinckel & Co., Inc., is a high-grade specialty store dealing primarily in women's wear and accessories. The store operates 53 retail departments and 5 service departments, including fur storage vaults.

The real estate comprises the property and nine-story building owned by the predecessor company and located at 1401 F street northwest. The building has approximately 143,500 square feet of selling space, or approximately 20,000 square feet per floor, and of this amount 127,000 square feet are now in use. Four-fifths of the seventh floor is not being used and is available for expansion. All of the major executives who have been responsible for the continued growth of the business since the death of the founder in 1936 are expected to remain with the new company.

The cumulative convertible 6 per cent preferred stock, $25 par value, has voting rights and preference as to assets and cumulative dividends. It is redeemable at $27.50 per share at any time on 15 days' notice. Each share of preferred is convertible into two shares of common stock at any time, except that in the case of stock called for redemption, and the right of conversion expires five days prior to the redemption date. Conversion rights are protected against dilution of the common stock.

Tracing the steady growth of the business since its founding in 1905, the prospectus states that gross business of $166,779 for the first ten months of operation compares with gross of $3,401,501 for the 12 months ended July 31, 1939. Net income before provision for income taxes, for the latter period, was $235,402.

After giving effect to certain adjustments of charges against income, as described in the prospectus, the indicated net income in the 12 months ended July 31, 1939, was equivalent, after estimated income taxes, to about three times the dividend requirement on the preferred stock, and the balance remaining after preferred dividends was equivalent to $1.42 per share on the common stock presently to be outstanding.

New Cadet Chief Was a Sergeant Only Last Year

Fifteen-year-old Barnett Broughton, who last year took orders as a line sergeant in Company D (McKinley High School) Second Battalion, Second Regiment, now will give orders to the whole High School Cadet Brigade. He is the new cadet colonel.

Brown-eyed, of slight build and with a back like a ramrod, young Broughton topped six other candidates for the highest cadet rank in an oral examination before the military board, headed by Lieut. Col. Wallace M. Craigie, Monday.

However, he hopes later to function in the law, having no mind for a military career. He will try, though, to obtain a reserve officer's commission. Broughton is a native of Washington but now lives in College Park, Md. His father is Dr. L. D. Broughton, dean of the school of arts and sciences, Maryland University.

Lost Ship's Crew Of 32, Missing 19 Days, Rescued

Bahia, Brazil, Sept. 26 (AP).—A 19-day mystery surrounding fate of the sunken British freighter Royal Sceptre's crew was cleared up today when 32 survivors reached port aboard the British steamer Browning.

They reported their captain had been killed. Nine of them were seriously wounded.

The crew was picked up near the island of Madeira after the freighter had been sunk by the German submarine U-48 on September 7.

Jeanne, Julianne and Joyce, Three of a Kind, Even to Teeth

And, These Triplets Are Almost Three; Their Mother Emphasizes the Trouble of Handling Them—Smallest Is Most Aggressive

JJJ, the alphabetical agency, was 3 years old—less one month—yesterday, though you may never have heard of it.

JJJ stands for Jeanne, Julianne and Joyce, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Armstrong's triplet daughters, who have blossomed into a trio of very coquettish subdebs, an inspection revealed yesterday.

Glutted with war news and heavy reading, this reporter went out to dig up something light.

"What's it like to bring up triplets, for example," he asked.

And that is where the Armstrongs came in. Only triplets aren't such light subjects—at least not to their mother. It's something like the man who slips on a banana peel—funny to the onlooker only.

"What I mean," explained Mrs. Armstrong, looking out for her daughters as they played in the yard of their home in Arlington, Va., "is that they take a lot of watching. They eat fine and hardly ever get sick, but I wouldn't trust them to a maid's care.

"Julie is the most impish one. Joyce settles the arguments. Jeanne is the most aggressive."

That makes Jeanne have something in common with Marie, of the Dionne quintuplets. Both were the smallest, at birth, in their respective sets, and both are the most aggressive ones. Jeanne weighed only 3 pounds 1 ounce when she and her sisters arrived at Columbia Hospital on October 26, 1936. Today she tips 26½ pounds, about 3 less than Joyce and Julianne.

The biggest worry in their lives at present is the concurrent emergence of four molar teeth. They cry in unison when the pain begins and they stop together.

Mrs. Armstrong claims she has been able to tell them apart since infancy, and her husband likewise. To the stranger, however, the girls appear almost identical.

Both parents are artists, the father with the Federal Housing Administration and the mother an instructor in a Washington art school. And the triplets—they have already modeled clothing at fashion shows.

France Outlaws Communist Party

ment in prosecution of the war, refused to break with the Kremlin.

He justified his attitude in a letter to Blum by throwing the blame on Poland for Russia's deflection into the Fascist camp, arguing that Warsaw's refusal to let the Red Army enter the country to fight the Nazis made it impossible for the Soviet government to come into the "peace front" with Britain and France.

The proscription of the Communist party is not likely to have any immediate political consequences. A number of Communist deputies and journalists had resigned from the party, and French workers all over the country have been switching over to the socialist party in disgust. The French Federation of Labor— the famous C. G. T.—already had broken off relations with the Communists.

Nevertheless, the French Communist Party, founded in 1920 as the result of a secession from the Socialist Party at the Congress of Tours, was the third largest political organization in France, ranking next to the Socialists and the Radical Socialists. It was represented by two senators and 72 deputies in the French Parliament, and polled 1,200,000 votes in the last parliamentary elections, held in the spring of 1936.

The paid party membership was estimated at more than 500,000 and it controlled some 800 municipalities throughout the country. It published hundreds of newspapers and periodicals.

Today's government decree confirms the suspension of the chief party organs L'Humanite, a morning paper, and Ce Soir, an evening paper, both published in Paris. Both were banned at the outbreak of the war. The decree prevents henceforth the appearance of all the other Communist publications throughout France.

It is not expected that the Communist deputies will be expelled from the Chamber, nor will they be prosecuted as Communists. If they attempt to keep alive the party organization, or propagate their doctrines, they will be brought to book for violation of the law as private citizens. But the 800 Communist-dominated municipalities will be purged of their red elements.

Hitler Reported Weighing Return Of Envoy to U. S.

Berlin, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Fuehrer Hitler is considering returning his ambassador to Washington as a "peace gesture" toward the United States, it was rumored tonight.

The German Ambassador to Washington, 55-year-old Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff, was ordered by Hitler to return to Berlin November 18, 1938, to explain President Roosevelt's "strange attitude" toward Germany's anti-Jewish crusade.

Previously the United States Ambassador to Berlin, Hugh R. Wilson, had been recalled to Washington for "report and consultation."

Calif. Storm Deaths May Rise to 100

Many Feared Lost On Unreported Pleasure Boats

Los Angeles, Sept. 26 (AP).—Deaths resulting from the tropical storm along Southern California's coast may approach 100 if the fierce gales of Sunday sank the numerous small ocean-going craft still unreported today.

More than two dozen boats, mostly pleasure cruisers and yachts, had not been heard from since the storm broke.

Aboard these craft were parties ranging from two to ten persons each. Best available information indicated the average number was at least four or five.

Already more than 35 persons are known to have died or are believed dead, most of whom perished in boat wrecks. These include 24 lost when the fishing boat Spray capsized near Oxnard.

At least 14 boats are known to have been sunk or wrecked.

The U. S. Coast Guard began a systematic search today from Santa Barbara to San Diego for missing craft—along the beaches, in coves and on island shores. Eight patrol boats put out from Los Angeles Harbor. Two Coast Guard vessels from San Diego and one from Santa Barbara were assigned to aid the search.

Several pleasure boats previously listed as missing were reported safely moored today.

Heat Prostration Here, Snow Falls In Central States

One heat prostration was reported in Washington yesterday as snow flurries blew across North Central States and a ball game was called off in Pittsburgh because of cold.

Washington's heat victim was Leander Little, 31, colored, of 1028 Twelfth street southeast, who collapsed while walking in the 700 block of E street northeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

The temperature rose 21 degrees in five hours to a high of 86 at 1:30 p. m., but dropped to 60 again last night. Showers and colder weather are forecast for today, with clear skies and a rising mercury due tomorrow.

Cards Required for Seats In Congressional Galleries

By James D. Secrest.

Spectators who crowd the Capitol next week to listen to the Senate debate on neutrality will be admitted to the galleries only if they present cards signed by one of the Senators, Chesley W. Jurney, Senate sergeant at arms, disclosed yesterday as Capitol police prepared to guard the legislators against cranks.

Jurney explained that two public galleries which, in ordinary times, are open to first-comers, regardless of credentials, will be placed under the same restrictions as those limited to families and friends of members.

Capt. William S. Orthman, chief of Capitol police, said similar restrictions have been placed on House galleries, although sessions of that chamber will not attract much attention until the neutrality bill is acted on by the Senate.

Orthman, a veteran of three wars, was inclined to pooh-pooh the idea of danger, but admitted police are on a constant lookout for mentally unbalanced persons who might cause trouble.

Old-timers at the Capitol recall the bombing of the Senate reception room by Frank Holt, an unbalanced university instructor, on July 2, 1915, when the United States was watching the World War with anxiety.

Holt, who shot J. P. Morgan the next day, subsequently confessed that he had planned to kill Mrs. Morgan and the Morgan children in a mad attempt to persuade the international banker to use his influence to stop this country from exporting munitions to European nations. He then took his own life while in jail.

While it is doubtful Holt's action influenced any Senators, the bombing resulted in rigid checks on spectators who thronged the Capitol corridors. Visitors were compelled to leave all packages at the door.

Capt. Orthman said there is no immediate prospect of renewing this order, although it has been considered.

Kenneth Romney, House sergeant-at-arms, has discussed with Speaker Bankhead a plan for setting up a special squad of trained detectives who would devote themselves exclusively to guarding the Capitol and legislators against saboteurs and spies. G-men may be borrowed for this purpose until an appropriation can be obtained.

House members recall the day a department store clerk gave them a scare when he flashed a pistol in the galleries when relief problems were acute. Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, emerged as the hero when he walked to a spot just below the man and persuaded him to drop the gun.

While police are anticipating a continuation of Capitol visitors due to the extra session, the professional guides are looking rather bleakly toward the end of a profitable season.

The presence of Congress, they say, hurts, rather than helps, their business, as tourists would rather see the Senate and House in action than gaze at the inanimate objects in Statuary Hall.

The tourist season begins about April 1 and ends customarily around October 1, so far as the guides are concerned. During that period, they serve about 250,000 visitors at a quarter a head.

Visitors to the Capitol aggregate nearly 1,000,000 a year, police estimate, as many do their own sightseeing. This year the figure is up 25 per cent, Orthman estimates, due to Washington being included in World's Fair excursions.

House for Arms Embargo, Says Fish

Chicago, Sept. 26 (INS).—No matter what happens in the Senate, the House of Representatives will stand firm for the arms embargo, Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, declared in a Nation-wide radio broadcast tonight. Any traffic in arms, he said, is "blood money and . . . the same as digging the graves of American soldiers in foreign lands."

Justice Pierce Butler 'A Little Improved'

He was said to have spent a comfortable night at Garfield Hospital, where he has been for a week.

Italy Clings To Hope Allies May Give Up

Diplomacy to Continue To Aim at Proposals For Return of Peace

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Sept. 26.—Italy is going to go on with its peace campaign, it was indicated today, whatever the British and French governments say about it.

There is a genuine conviction in high official circles trat there is a chance the British and French will give up, or in other words, will admit that they are beaten and make the best of a bad bargain.

Of course, the situation is not put as crudely as that. Italian statesmen have a very high opinion of Germany's strength. They feel certain that the Germans, even without the Russians, are much stronger militarily than England and France combined and that they are in a position to carry on indefinitely.

Going on that basis, Italian diplomacy has been aimed at suggesting a way out. The idea that, Poland being liquidated, there is no longer any reason to fight for her is one of the arguments.

Appeal to Allied Peoples

The moral weakness of warring on Germany and not Russia is another. Humanitarian reasons are held to be strongest of all. Why waste the lives of hundreds of persons, if not millions of men, in a "useless" war? the Italians ask.

In that connection they are appealing over the heads of the British and French governments to the people and all Italian correspondents in London and Paris obviously have been instructed to write dispatches saying that the appeal is succeeding. Today one reads long accounts telling of the profound effect Il Duce's speech has had, but when the correspondents give excerpts from British and French newspapers, they all dismiss the appeal as well-intentioned, but quite unacceptable.

Since this sort of campaign cannot be dragged out indifinitely there must be a new move—diplomatically or in the form of another speech by Il Duce.

There have been steady hints in the newspapers of friendly relations between Egypt and Italy. There is indeed reason to suppose that Italy is carrying through a whole series of such friendly moves in the near east and the Balkans.

U. S. Neutrality Criticized

Rome, Sept. 26 (AP).—Italy, Fascist leaders said today, is taking advantage of her nonbelligerent status in the European conflict to gain business and build up her industrial and commercial power.

Il Lavoro Fascista, organ of Fascist labor, said Italy's present position not only gave her political actions greater influence in Europe, but also gave her a tremendous economic influence since she was the only big European country not at war.

Il Lavoro Fascista forecast gains for Italian exports but adds that throughout any period of quickened industrial activity the nation must remain ever ready to march to war and its industries must remain ready to turn out war supplies.

At the same time some Fascist newspapers criticized President Roosevelt's neutrality plan on the ground that it favored Britain and France and others on the ground that the United States sought to make money out of the war.

War Ends Attempt At Beerless Germany

St. Louis, Sept. 26 (AP).—The war has halted the late Dr. Francis L. Steuver's attempt to wean the German people away from schnapps and beer.

Dr. Steuver, who died in Vienna in 1928 at 96, provided in his will that $4,000 a year be paid from his $300,000 estate to further legislation against the use of intoxicating liquor in Germany and Austria.

Pan-American Plan Is Urged

lectively take regarding observance of it by all belligerents."

One measure for the defense of the Americas' economic position against the shocks of the European war, also suggested by the United States, was aimed at "preservation of trade and liberal commercial policies by the American republics."

Co-operation Advocated

Under this, Welles said, the governments "would resolve to co-operate with each other to lessen or offset any trade dislocations which may arise from war."

An advisory monetary committee would study "any problems of monetary relationship, foreign exchange, and the management or balance of payments which may be presented to it by any one of the governments of the republics and offer recommendations to that government.

Intending to help Latin-American countries to close all doors against attempts by belligerents to abuse the rights of any American nation, Welles further suggested "the suppression of violations of neutrality and subversive activities."

Under this, the American nations would resolve to take action against persons, whether native or alien, committing acts endangering the neutrality of American nations. The measure also provides for the prevention of enlistment within American territory of persons to serve in belligerent forces and for prevention of the fitting out of expeditions in the interest of any belligerent.

It also would prevent the arming of belligerent vessels by American neutrals and the use of their territories or waters as bases.

Red Cross Included

One resolution expressed the hope that American nations consider broadening the scope of the Red Cross for the relief of war sufferers.

Peru's Foreign Minister, Enrique Goytizolo, proposed to the conference that the most-industrialized nations of the American continents take measures tending to stabilize prices of manufactured articles destined for exportation to other American nations.

He also recommended that governments "dictate in conformity with their own laws" measures to prevent steamship companies operating between countries on the two continents and insurance underwriters in their territory from increasing rates or premiums unduly.

Patience Exhausted by Irritation on Western Front, Nazis Say; Expect Fuehrer to Order Real Hostilities on Land and Sea Soon

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 26.—Adolf Hitler returned to Berlin tonight to concentrate his energies on the war on the Western Front while his foreign minister prepared to leave for Moscow to discuss "political questions" arising from the German-Soviet Russian occupation of Poland.

The Fuehrer, self-styled first soldier of Germany, had been absent from his Berlin chancellery since he joined his troops in the east on September 3, the day Britain and France declared war on Germany.

The taking of Warsaw appeared to be the most serious business remaining in the east. A communique today said German forces had started to storm the city after failing to win a negotiated surrender.

Buffer State Doubted

It was announced officially that Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop would leave for Moscow tomorrow at invitation of the Soviet government. The question of whether anything of Poland would remain as an independent state was expected by some Berlin observers to be raised in the talks in the Soviet capital.

There was some speculation whether Germany and Russia would want a buffer state between them. Opinion in some quarters was that such a state would be a center for Polish patriots agitating to revive their nation and it might be to Germany's interest to wipe it out entirely. It was emphasized, however, there had been no decisions on this score. Hints were heard, meanwhile, that "German patience," about which Hitler speaks frequently, was approaching the exhaustion point over the situation along the Western Front and at sea and that England soon would be called upon to declare positively whether she wants war or peace.

Ultimatum to Britain Weighed

Today's military communiques mentioned only artillery fire and minor scouting operations on the Western Front.

In official quarters it was pointed out that Germany thus far has not recognized a state of war between her and England and France, but it was expected in many quarters that the German attitude toward the Western opponents soon would be clarified.

There were informal reports in informed quarters, but without official substantiation, that an ultimatum to England either to make war or peace was among suggestions being weighed by the German government.

Hitler was represented as being particularly exercised over the British sea blockade of Germany—which Germans call a war on women and children.

Western Front "Irritating"

In this connection it was recalled that official quarters have intimated that in its air force Germany has a weapon as powerful as the British navy and that in event it came to a "serious war on women and children" Germany was in a position to "retaliate with the weapons at her disposal."

Military quarters observed that action on the Western Front up to now merely was irritating but that it presented a situation which a first-class power could not with dignity tolerate indefinitely.

It was emphasized that in the west Germany had refrained from undertaking a single offensive exploit. There were broad hints, however, that with Hitler back in Berlin more energetic counteraction on sea as well as on land might be contemplated.

German military authorities were saying that the East Front "has disappeared." Warsaw, a small Polish detachment in the Hela peninsula, and Polish troops in a few other spots still were resisting, but these were regarded by the German high command as details which could be cleared up by mop-up troops.

Neutrals Skeptical

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Berlin, Sept. 26.—Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop's trip to Moscow impressed neutral observers but left them stubbornly skeptical. The Russian initiative suggested to them that the Soviets may now try to localize and end the war in Europe, by threatening to throw their Red army against whichever side refuses to settle on Stalin's terms, or may move to extend the war, especially into southeastern Europe. Neither possibility is likely to make Nazi hearts rejoice.

These keen neutral observers have guessed the meaning of Soviet moves in the last two months with a batting average of exactly zero.

They admit tonight that the Bolsheviks may be simply eager to thank the Germans for conquering two-thirds of Poland for them, and to cheer the Nazis on to greater glories elsewhere.

Russo-Italian Bid for Balkan Pact Reported

Turkish Diplomats Conducting Talks, Bucharest Says

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Sept. 26.—Diplomatic circles here disclosed tonight that negotiations are under way for a Soviet-Italian-Balkans pact designed to insure against spreading of war into southeastern Europe.

The negotiations, initiated by Turkey, aim at arranging mutual guarantees of the Balkan status quo.

Foreign Minister Saracoglu of Turkey, who now is in Moscow, was reported by diplomats to be discussing the final terms of the proposed pact with Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff.

This stage was reported reached after extensive diplomatic soundings during which a tacit approval of the plan was said to have been received from all the interested nations.

Would Form Balkan Union

Under the plan as disclosed by diplomatic sources, Turkey, Rumania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Hungary and Greece propose to form a Balkan union under the aegis of Italy and Soviet Russia with the objective of remaining a strong neutral bloc and keeping the war from southeastern Europe.

The five vitally interested Balkan union states and Russia, Italy and Turkey would guarantee the status quo of the eastern Mediterranean and control the Dardanelles Straits, entrance to the Black Sea and the mouth of the Danube.

Concessions in land claims and boundary disputes which have caused Balkan wars and prevented the nations from completely trusting one another were scheduled to be made, it was reported.

To enable the Bulgarian government to enter the proposed union, Rumania was reported willing to make a token rectification of the Rumanian-Bulgarian boundary, but would not be required to give up Dobruja, the province Bulgaria has desired.

In exchange for Rumanian and Bulgarian frontier rectification, Rumania was reported to have requested Russia to recognize Rumania's annexation of Bessarabia, which she obtained from Russia after the World War.

Hope to Bar Nazi Hegemony

Hungary was understood to be willing to waive her claim to Transylvania, which she ceded to Rumania in the World War, providing she obtains a guarantee of her present territorial integrity and the support of neighboring nations against aggression.

Russia's interest in obtaining such a pact lies in her desire to insure protection against German dominance of the Balkans and the eastern Mediterranean. By annexation of Austria, Germany placed herself astride the Danube and took a long step toward reviving the old "march to the east" policy, which would seriously threaten Russian interests.

The pact would protect Italy against similar threats to Italian interests in the Balkans and southeastern Europe by her axis partner, Germany.

[Recent dispatches from Rome indicated great concern over the possibility that Russia may re-assert her ancient role as "protector" of the Balkans—according to the International News Service. There are indications that Balkan states which formerly turned to Rome for guidance are now turning toward Moscow, with the hope of using Stalin as a moderator of Hitler influence. —Editor's note.]

Negotiations for the pact have been conducted in Italy and the Balkan countries by Turkish envoys, it was said here.

Report Balkan Understanding

Bucharest, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Informed private quarters tonight reported that Germany and Soviet Russia have agreed upon a division of zones of influence in eastern Europe whereby Rumania and the Balkans will come under the Nazi sphere.

Estonia's Anxiety Rising

Copyright by New York Times

Tallinn, Sept. 26.—General anxiety has increased in Estonia as the result of alarming rumors of an impending Russian diplomatic offensive in the Baltic region.

It is believed the Kremlin at the last moment made its signature to a new trade pact, which had already been regarded as completed, conditional upon certain important political concessions on Estonia's part.

Although official quarters are extremely reticent it was reported Premier Molotoff claimed the need of a revision of the status of the Estonian islands in the Gulf of Finland, although it is unknown how far reaching such claims may be.

It is possible that the Soviet proposed their demilitarization.

President Paets had long conferences with Commander in Chief Gen. Laidoner and his cabinet while the parliament was fully informed of the Moscow talks.

Estonian Premier Eenpalu declared through his secretary he was confident Russia would respect Estonian neutrality—and said Estonian officials were not aware of oft-reported Soviet troop movements near the frontier.

Gen. Laidoner, in a radio broadcast to the army, declared, however, the nation would "defend itself valiantly and valiantly, if attacked, "just as we fought 20 years ago to win our liberty."

Military Pact Feared

Moscow, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Moscow government tonight lifted the veil on mysterious negotiations with neighboring Estonia by charging that country with harboring unknown submarines in her Baltic waters.

An indication that Russia was demanding from Estonia special privileges in the Gulf of Finland and in the Baltic, including the banning of "enemy warships," was given in the midnight broadcast of the Soviet radio.

It disclosed that the "question of guarantees" to the U. S. S. R. in these waters against "diversions of foreign warships" is "assuming much significance."

Some observers expressed the belief that Nazi Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop was following up his August 23 visit, when he signed the German - Russian nonaggression pact, to negotiate a military pact between the two governments.

The accusation against Estonia was included in a communique which said negotiations had begun with Estonia when her explanation of the escape of the interned Polish submarine Orzel proved "unsatisfactory."

The submarine made a dash to freedom from Tallinn, Estonia, September 18, after having taken refuge in the harbor there. The Estonian government said the craft escaped under fire, but Russia accused the Tallinn regime of "abetting."

In view of dissatisfaction at the Estonian explanation, the Soviet communique tonight said the negotiations were opened "regarding measures ensuring the security of Soviet waters against diversionist acts on the part of foreign submarines hiding in Baltic waters."

The communique said that, according to the Estonian account, the submarine was damaged when it entered Tallinn harbor, and added that "it is incomprehensible how, under the circumstances," it could have escaped.

There was speculation in some quarters whether Russia, in the suddenly suspended conversations with the Estonian foreign minister, sought to effect a blockade on the Gulf of Finland, on which Estonia is located.

Soviet troops were understood to be on the move toward the frontier with Rumania, now extended by Russian occupation in Poland. The Russian army strength in the Rumanian sector was unofficially estimated at 40 divisions, either near the frontier or on the way.

(In Bucharest Rumanian authorities said that Russian and Rumanian troops on the border were on the best of terms.)

Writers Find No Threat to Belgian Border

6 Neutral Newsmen Tour Westwall, Say It Looks Impregnable

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the German Army on the Western Front, Sept. 26.—German officers told me on a tour of the German border facing Belgium and Luxemburg today that their preparations had left nothing undone to smash any attempt of Britain or France to break through these neutral countries.

But from the German side of the border I saw no signs that these two countries were making preparations which might indicate fear of a German attack.

Together with two other American, one Netherlands, one Norwegian and one Finnish newsmen I was able today to go where no Americans hitherto have set foot—on the Siegfried Line for 200 miles from Cologne to Trier and more particularly on 100 miles of German soil directly and immediately along the Belgium-Luxemburg frontier.

Whole Border Unguarded

More than that, we were taken into the depths of that gigantic fortification and were shown things that, according to conservative estimates, not more than 100 living persons have seen to such an extent and over such a space.

On the visit to the front we were unable to see that Belgium or Luxemburg had taken precautions to protect themselves against Germany along the very frontier from which the Germans poured into both countries in August, 1914.

We drove along roads skirting the Belgian frontier within 10 feet.

Along 100 miles of the Belgium-Luxemburg border we saw exactly six persons in uniform. They were Belgian customs officials.

We did not encounter a single German tank or any indication of an impending attack.

Troops Practice Maneuvers

But we did see plenty of German troops engaged in artillery practice, in infantry maneuvers in sham battles with an imaginary enemy, in antiaircraft practice, in signal corps drill. German officers explained that these merely were exercises.

Informed Germans in Berlin yesterday explained the massing of German troops along the Belgium-Luxemburg border was a precaution against any British or French design to seek a "soft front" for invasion of Germany. They said it would be against German interests to conduct a war so close to vital Ruhr mines and industries. The comment was in answer to reports from Paris that Germans were massing troops at Aachen possibly for an attack through Belgium around the left end of the Maginot Line.)

Right next to the soldiers so engaged were farmers peacefully harvesting their autumn crops.

None of the cities through which we passed, notably Cologne, Aachen, or Trier, had been emptied of civil inhabitants, neither had any of the numerous villages through which we rode on our 200-mile journey.

Line Looks Impregnable

Women were doing their shopping, children were playing on the sidewalks, cows grazed in the pastures.

On all buildings and industrial plants of this area, however, antiaircraft guns were stationed and manned.

Another angle I noticed was the detailed mechanism of the German fortifications.

It is difficult to imagine how any maneuvering can develop amidst a maze of barbed wire entanglements, concrete blocks of every conceivable size and shape strewn into the landscape like so many dragon's teeth, pill boxes or bunkers of concrete and steel subterraneously connected with each other and fortress-like, amrom-plated dugouts with all the supplies, gadgets and conveniences of—for example—a supersubmarine.

Assuming that the Maginot Line of the French army is similarly fortified, an attack either way would seem coupled with enormous sacrifices of men and materials.

Bailey Advocates Credits to Britain To Buy Tobacco

Extension of Federal credits to British purchasers of American tobacco has been requested of President Roosevelt and Secretary of Commerce Hopkins by Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina.

Impelled by a "really distressful" situation among North Carolina tobacco growers, whose normal sales to British buyers have been halted by the war, Bailey revealed he had asked Hopkins, as well as the President, to work out some method of tiding the British purchasers over exchange difficulties.

Lebrun Establishes Croix de Guerre

Paris, Sept. 26.—President Lebrun today signed a decree establishing the Croix de Guerre to be conferred on all soldiers and sailors cited for gallantry during the war.

No indication is yet given of the nature of this decoration but it is believed it will be the same medal as the one created in 1915 but with a different ribbon. The ribbon of the World War Croix de Guerre is red and green in narrow vertical stripes—the same color as the St. Helena Medal conferred on Napoleon's veterans.

Text of Churchill's Report on U-Boat War

Britain Winning Naval Struggle, Sea Lord Asserts

London, Sept. 26.—Following is a partial text of the statement made in Parliament today by Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty:

The war at sea opened with some intensity.

All our ships were going about the world in the ordinary way when they were set upon by lurking U-boats carefully posted beforehand.

In the first week our losses in tonnage were half the weekly losses of the month of April, 1917, which was the peak year of U-boat attack in the late war. That was a very serious proportion.

We immediately replied in three ways. First, we set in motion the convoy system. This could be very quickly done for all the outgoing ships, but it took a fortnight to reorganize from the other end the convoys of homeward-bound ships. This system is now in full operation both ways * * *.

Arm Merchant Ships

Our second reply to the U-boat attack is to arm all our merchant vessels and fast liners with defensive armament both against the U-boat and the airplane.

For a fortnight past armed ships have been continually leaving the harbors of this island in large numbers. Some go in convoys, some go independently.

This applies not only to the United Kingdom, but to our ports all over the world. Thus in a short time the immense mercantile marine of the British Empire will be armed.

As we usually have 2,000 ships on salt water every day this is a considerable operation. However, all the guns and equipment are ready at the various arming stations together with the proportion of trained gunners to man them and to instruct the crew * * *.

Our third reply is of course the British attack on the U-boat. This is being delivered with the utmost vigor and intensity.

A very large number of attacks have been made by our flotillas and hunting craft * * *.

It is no exaggeration to say that the attacks on the German U-boats have been five or six times as numerous as in any equal period in the late war in which, after all, they did not beat us. The prime minister mentioned last week the figure of six or seven U-boats destroyed. That was, as he said, probably an understatement and since then we have had some fruitful and hopeful days.

Attack Just Beginning

But even taking six or seven as a safe figure, that is one-tenth of the total enemy submarine fleet as it existed at the declaration of war, destroyed during the first fortnight of the war, and it is probably a quarter or perhaps even a third of all the U-boats which have been employed actively.

But the British attack upon the U-boats is only just beginning. Our hunting forces are getting stronger every day. By the end of October we expect to have three times the hunting force which was operating at the outbreak of the war, while at the same time the number of targets open to U-boats on the vast expanses of the seas and oceans will be greatly reduced by the use of convoys and at the same time the U-boats' means of attacking them will be heavily clogged and fettered.

In all this very keen and stern warfare the R. A. F. and the fleet air arm . . . played an important part both in directing the hunting destroyers upon their quarry and in actually attacking it themselves.

It was to bridge the gap between what we had ready at the beginning and what we have ready now that the admiralty decided to use the aircraft carriers with some freedom in order to bring in unarmed unorganized unconvoyed trafic then approaching our shores in large numbers.

Have to Run Risks

Risks have to be run all the time in naval warfare and sometimes grievous forfeit is exacted. The Courageous was attended by four destroyers but two had to go and hunt a U-boat attacking a merchant ship coming toward England and when the Courageous turned into the wind at dusk in order to enable her own aircraft to land upon her landing deck she happened, by what may have been a 100 to 1 chance or more, to meet a U-boat in her unpredictable course . . .

But this hard stroke of war in no way diminishes our confidence in the methods now at our disposal. On the contrary, our confidence in them has grown with every day they have been employed and I believe that their potency will become the more apparent in proportion as the great numbers of new vessels come into action and in proportion as our hunting officers get the knack of using depth charges by frequent practice. . . .

In the first week our losses by U-boat sinkings amounted to 65,000 tons. In the second week they were 46,000 tons, and in the third week they were 21,000 tons. In the last six days we have lost only 9,000 tons. . . .

Foe Swept From Seas

Meanwhile, the whole vast business of our world-wide trade continues without interruption and without prospect of diminution. Great convoys of troops are escorted to their various destinations, the enemy ships and commerce have been swept from the seas. Over 2,000,000 tons of German shipping is sheltering in German or interned in neutral harbors.

Our system of contraband control . . . is being perfected and so far as the first fortnight of the war is concerned . . . we have actually arrested, seized and converted to our own use 67,000 tons more German merchandise than has been sunk in the ships of our own.

Even in oil, where we were unlucky in losing some tankers, we had lost 60,000 tons in the first fortnight and have gained 50,000 tons from the enemy, apart from the enormous additional stores we have brought safely in the ordinary way. . . . We have now got more supplies in this country this afternoon than we should have had if no war had been declared and if no U-boats had come into action.

I will now speak a little about the character of this war. From time to time the German U-boat commanders have tried their best to behave with humanity.

Ruthless Acts Done

But many cruel and ruthless acts have been done. There was the Athenia, later there was the Royal Sceptre, whose crew of 32 were left in open boats hundreds of miles from land and are assumed to have all perished. There was the Bazelside, the day before yesterday, 12 of whose sailors were killed by surprise gunfire in an ordinary merchant ship, and whose captain died in so gallant a fashion, going down with his vessel.

We cannot recognize this type of warfare . . . as other than isolation of the laws of war to which the Germans themselves in recent years so lustily subscribed.

But it is a measure of the success of our attack on the U-boats in the last few days that they seem, as the prime minister has told us, to prefer neutral shipping to our regular merchant ships.

Finnish, Dutch, Swedish, Greek, Norwegian and Belgian ships have been sunk on the high seas in an indiscriminate manner and with loss of life. In all the far-reaching control, becoming increasingly more intimate, which we ourselves are exercising over the movements of contraband, no neutral ship has ever been put in danger and no law recognized among civilized nations has ever been contravened.

Let it be noted that in the last war one-third of the whole catalogue of damage done to British and neutral commerce through U-boat attacks was due to 25 experienced professional captains of the old submarine service to Germany.

Building Outstripping Losses

It would seem from this that it will be much easier for our enemies who seek our destruction to build more U-boats than to replace a limited class of highly skilled professional officers and crews of U-boats who are now being captured or destroyed.

Moreover, if we are losing tonnage we are also taking steps to replace it on a far larger scale. Old ships which were laid up are being refitted and prepared for sea.

An enormous building program of new ships of simple character, capable of being rapidly built, is already in full career. . . . We therefore hope to have a much larger margin in the future to meet new forms of attack or new scales of attack.

The House will observe that I have confined myself entirely to U-boat warfare . . . But, after all, the U-boat attack on British oceanwide commerce was one of the most heartshaking hazards of the last war. It seemed in the early months of 1916 that it might compass our total ruin. Only those who lived through it at the summit know what it was like . . .

We have no reason on the information and the experience now to suppose that such a situation will recur. If this surmise, and it cannot be more, should prove correct, what does it mean?

It means that one primary danger is falling into its proper confines and amid all our anxieties we can feel a certain steady measure of assurance that so far as the submarine is concerned the British Empire and all its friends in every quarter of the globe, will be able to develop their immeasurable latent forces and that the whole strength, wealth, resources and man power of those many communities can be concentrated in an ever-growing intensity on the task which we have in hand, in which task we have only to persevere to conquer.

B'nai B'rith First To Hear Freud, Letter Reveals

That the Vienna lodge of B'nai B'rith was the first group to hear Dr. Sigmund Freud, world-famous author of psychoanalysis, discuss his then revolutionary theories, was revealed yesterday at B'nai B'rith headquarters here. Excerpts from a letter Freud wrote in 1921 to the Vienna lodge were made public following his death.

The letter explains how he became a B'nai B'rith, how members of that organization were the only people who did not ostracize him for his unorthodox views, and how he found cultural stimulation in supporting the Jewish people through B'nai B'rith. The letter states unequivocally that "you (B'nai B'rith) were my first audience."

The Vienna lodge, of which Freud was a member, was liquidated when he went into exile after Hitler's seizure of Austria in 1938, and hundreds of fraternity brothers were thrown into concentration camps.

Amsterdam, Sept. 26 (AP).—One Swedish passenger was killed today when a K. L. M. (Netherlands) passenger plane was fired on by an unidentified seaplane off Helgoland, German island naval base in the North Sea.

Rickenbacker Urges 'Absolute Neutrality'

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, air line executive and former World War flier, urged the Nation tonight to maintain "absolute neutrality" and a "sense of balance in thought and activity" regarding the European conflict.

Briton Says Hitler Is 'Our Propagandist'

Fuehrer Advancing England's Cause in U. S., Lords Told

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 26.—Britain's minister of information, Lord MacMillan, told the House of Lords today he considered Adolf Hitler "our propagandist" in the United States.

Discussing the information ministry's functions in wartime, MacMillan said:

"We have always regarded the position of the United States as quite different from other countries.

"The policy is that there shall be no propaganda in the United States of America. We contend that Herr Hitler is our propagandist and no one could be more efficient.

Britain Supplies Facts

"We prefer in the case of the United States that facts should speak for themselves, but that does not absolve the ministry from a very important duty.

"In so far as the American people desire information from us on facts, it is our duty to supply these and we do our best to put at their disposal the information that they desire, but the request must come from them."

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard, in a front page statement and editorial, today vehemently attacked "the still blundering" ministry of information.

The statement told of a mixup today over the release of news of the return to London of Queen Elizabeth.

The editorial said:

"Nine out of ten men and women in the street are baffled, bored and fed up or furious . . .

"Against a debit (the sinking of the liner Athenia and the aircraft carrier Courageous and about 200,000 tons of shipping) we set the dashing raid on Kiel, some propaganda flights over Germany and the bare report of half a dozen U-boats sent to the bottom.

"Many ask what else have we done?"

The paper said "this ministry of information has three separate functions:

"One, to censor news. This it does stupidly.

"Two, to prepare propaganda. This is unprintable trash.

"Three, to transmit news from the government, especially from the defense ministries. If some 'sealed lips' in a Sam Browne belt holds up that news, the ministry of information can do nothing but bleat protest . . .

Admits Need for Inquiry

"News is the lifeblood of a free people and we are not fighting a big Hitler on the Rhine only to set up little Hitler's here."

Attacks on censorship in the House of Commons brought an admission from a government spokesman that of 999 employes of the ministry of information only 43 were "professional journalists."

Amid jeers from all sides of the House, Sir Edward Grigg, parliamentary secretary to the ministry, said "the minister of information realizes that the situation requires investigation."

Justice Department to Purge Reds in U. S. Posts, Dies Says

By the Associated Press

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, said yesterday the Roosevelt Administration had asked the Justice Department to begin "purging" about 2,850 "known Communists" who hold key government positions.

He based his statement, he said, "on information which comes from a very authoritative administration source."

In addition, he said he had received word that one of the country's most prominent labor leaders had decided to conduct a similar purge in his organization's "high command."

Labor Leader Not Named

"Communists will be asked either to renounce communism or step down from their positions," Dies asserted.

He did not name the labor leader.

Amplifying his remarks about the Government "purge," he said the Justice Department would proceed quietly to eliminate from Federal employment a list of persons it has been checking for many months.

"The investigation will come to a head now that Germany and Russia have gotten together and the Communists are considered as known enemies," Dies said.

He referred to the German-Russian nonaggression pact and the partition of Poland by those two countries.

Dies said that as a result of the European conflict and of testimony before his committee, the committee probably would ask Congress to "outlaw" the German-American Bund and the Communist Party of the United States.

Mask for Spy System

"The political activities of these organizations are merely a masquerade for a spy system and possible sabotage," he said.

Dies also said that Fritz Kuhn, German-American Bund leader, was "afraid to reappear" before the committee "because he knows we've got him."

Kuhn said in an interview in New York that he would no longer "cooperate" with the committee because he had been "treated so unfairly." To this Dies said:

"He is afraid to reappear because he knows we've got him. If he does not show up, he'll be cited for contempt."

Swedes Protest Sinkings; Seek Shipping Pact

Action Follows Finnish Move; Could Cut Off Iron Ore for Reich

By the Associated Press

Copenhagen, Sept. 26.—Sweden protested to Germany today against the sinking of two ships in what diplomatic observers here believed to be the forerunner of pressure by neutral northern countries for an early agreement of the future of their maritime commerce.

The Swedish ships and two Finnish ships were sunk within the last week by, their crews said, German submarines.

Finland lodged a protest in Berlin Saturday.

Three of the ships were carrying wood pulp to England. Germany referred to the cargoes as Cellulose, which she said was included in her contraband list. The nature of the cargo of the fourth ship has not been disclosed.

Sweden was expected to take the lead in seeking a settlement with Germany regarding sea trade, since Germany gets more than 70 per cent of her ore requirements from Sweden.

Could Shut Off Ore

Some observers said Sweden could halt all exports until negotiations with Germany were completed. Whether she would use the ore as an argument was not disclosed.

Germany was said to have received a Swedish promise to maintain ore exportation when the war started, although informed sources believed the Stockholm government based this on maintenance of normal trade connections.

The question of assigning naval convoys was raised in Stockholm but the defense ministry said such action was not considered because it might be interpreted as meaning Sweden was entering the war.

Denmark still was managing to export large quantities of food to England.

Reich Defends Sinking

Copyright by New York Times.

Berlin, Sept. 25.—Proof of the seriousness of Germany's intent to enforce the blockade of Great Britain, even at the expense of neutral shipping, has been furnished by sinking of two Swedish and two Finnish ships loaded with cellulose for Britain.

German official and semiofficial comment tonight proceeded to draw up a defense of the action, warning at the same time that "although the Reich regrets the necessity of hindering neutral traffic," nevertheless it means business. The responsibility is placed on Great Britain, which "forced" Germany to follow her example in order to protect her vital rights."

The German contraband list, it is asserted, is clear enough to permit of no equivocation regarding the nature of materials Germany considers war goods. It is pointed out that Germany sent a detailed list of these materials to neutrals, that included in these lists were "all materials suitable for the production of gunpowder and explosives." Cellulose is foremost of these materials, it is stated here. Wood also is included in these materials.

Russian Advance Lagging in North Poland

By Melvin K. Whiteleather,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Nowogrod, Poland, Sept. 26 (German-Russian demarcation line.—Soviet troops tonight were from one to two days behind schedule in their advance toward this northernmost end of the several hundred mile boundary that at least temporarily again gives Russia and Germany a common frontier.

The Communist forces were due at the shot-to-pieces town of Nowogrod at noon today but none showed up. The last German troops, except for an outpost, crossed the improvised shaky plank bridge across the Narew River, where the Pisa River flows into it, at 11:45 a. m. (5:45 a. m. E. S. T.), a company of Germany's modern cavalry on bicycles.

With tanks, armored cars, artillery and infantry divisions they were returning from Bialystok. They said they had seen no Russians in Bialystok and the progress of their advance had not been reported.

The battered German tanks and armored cars were decorated with Polish souvenirs, especially red lion shields taken from postoffices or other public buildings.

Entrain for West

The troops went to border railway stations in the East Prussian lake region where tonight the artillery units entrained for the west.

Pontoon bridges and similar military equipment were removed but improvised wooden bridges were left behind for the Red army.

Heavy fighting took place only two weeks ago all along the northern front which Poland had fortified with chains of what the German officers said were especially-built and strategically-arranged bunkers.

The bunkers were designed to prevent the Germans from crossing the 100-foot wide Narew River between the fort of Modlin, north of Warsaw and Bialystok.

The German high command's communiques several times mentioned this fighting at Pultusk, Lomza and Nowogrod.

One of the most bitter smaller engagements of the campaign resulted when Germans forded their way between September 7 and September 10 across the Narew below Nowogrod, a town of 4,000 inhabitants, in the face of terrific fire from the bunkers.

Several Hundred Men Fall

Several hundred men fell in the crossing.

Today German officers were swarming over the Polish strongholds with pads and pencils and precision instruments, carefully noting the sizes of the bunkers' machinegun turrets and what effect German artillery fire had on the steel and concrete defense structures.

So strong were the bunkers that only one shell had completely pierced one bunker in this region.

All guns and munitions had been removed by the Germans—but some occupants were neither shot nor taken captive. Hordes of mice, hopping around in the straw, were left for the Soviets to claim as booty.

Immediately behind the bunkers lay Nowogrod, now a charred mass of ruins.

By some fluke, one house of the public square stood undamaged above the debris.

Here and there sad-looking Poles were piling up burned timber, working, it seemed, against fate to salvage what they could of their former homes.

Some had made shacks and were living in them.

Fate of Men Unknown

Whether the men were dead or captives, their wives did not know. The fears of the women increased each time they passed the town's edge on their way to the next village, where they were being sheltered—for there was a large mound of fresh dirt with a cross and a steel helmet on top.

On the cross was written:

"Two officers and 27 men."

In a heap nearby were their helmets, gas masks and other equipment.

These Poles did not know that once again after 20 years of freedom they were under Russian rule.

They watched the German troops retiring along roads back toward home but they did not know why.

West of the demarcation line, the German Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler, is sending reserve divisions as occupation troops to replace younger soldiers more needed for the Western Front.

Complete calm has not been restored because, the Germans assert, of a continuation of sniping activities which bothered the invaders from the start of the war.

Farther west in the former corridor region, battalions of labor service men were rebuilding bridges, clearing debris, and repairing roads.

Farmers are at work in their fields as if nothing had happened.

In this region, wagon loads of refugees, including many children, could be seen slowly returning to their homes, many bringing cows with them.

By the United Press.

Budapest, Sept. 26.—The City of Warsaw is "entirely in ruins" after day-long bombardment by German guns and 200 planes, the Warsaw radio station announced tonight before it went off the air suddenly.

The announcer was telling how hundreds of horses killed by the shelling were being butchered and distributed among the destitute population when he halted his account and said:

"Sorry, we must close down now for the night."

The radio reports said the defenders of the shattered city still were determined to resist "until death" and that the old Russian fortress at Modlin, 18 miles northwest of the city, continued to hold off Nazi assaults from that direction.

In Warsaw, it was said, the Polish defenders fighting hand-to-hand against the Germans, repulsed a German attempt to seize the suburb of Mokotow on the western outskirts.

Legionnaires Want Congress To Continue

Foreign Relations Unit Also Seeks Expansion Of Armed Forces

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 26.—The American Legion's foreign relations committee in a "pronouncement" tonight demanded that Congress continue in session in view of war in Europe and that U. S. armed forces be "expanded immediately to maintain our neutrality."

The expression, adopted unanimously by 62 members of the group, demanded also that "appropriate action be taken to preserve the peace, sovereignty and dignity of this Nation" during "the present grave crisis."

In arriving at its pronouncement, the committee avoided recommendation of specific legislation concerning neutrality, avowedly believing that any such proposals would be of no lasting value due to the swiftly moving world events.

Ray Murphy, of Iowa, past national commander of the legion and chairman of the committee, said the pronouncement probably would be introduced on the convention floor tomorrow. He emphasized, however, that it was a "pronouncement" and would not have the formal status of a resolution.

The legion, champion of peace and preparedness, paraded its martial might today.

Company after contingent moved down Michigan avenue in the big parade of 1939, veered across Grant Park and trooped through the gigantic Soldier Field amphitheater while hundreds of thousands cheered.

The colorful cavalcade started south in the broad boulevard at 9 a. m. as chill winds and a slow drizzle formed a setting reminiscent of rainy days in France. The sun broke through the low-hanging clouds at noon, however.

The participants—75,000 strong, with 100 bands and 500 drum and bugle corps—proceeded without break long after darkness settled over the 3-mile line of march.

Police estimated 1,000,000 persons saw the procession through the streets while 50,000 others watched it from seats in the stadium.

The annual extravaganza afforded a varied spectacle. There were grim notes: A party of disabled veterans, a float from Appleton, Wis., presenting a tableau of hand-to-hand fighting. Chattanoogans in the mud-flecked steel helmets and stained uniforms and grimy brogans of 1917 and 1918.

There was comedy. Clowns—one in his bare feet—frolicked. A cowboy whisked hats from onlookers with an accurate lasso. Trick bicycle riders regaled the throngs. A quartet from California trudged along carrying coats on their arms and mopping goose-pimpled brows, while spectators, bundled in topcoats and furs, shivered in sympathy.

Peace Is the Motif

There were personalities, too. Gov. John W. Bricker led Ohio's delegation. Jimmy Dykes, Chicago White Sox Manager and last Legionnaire on the active players' roster of the major leagues, grinned from the foremost of the Pennsylvania troupe. Gov. Frank Dixon, who lost a leg in World War aerial combat, paced the Alabamans.

As they tramped, unit by unit, on the twenty-first anniversary of the start of the Meuse-Argonne offense, many of them marched with their memories today. And graying heads were tilted back, shoulders squared, aldermanic abdomens held in.

The trappings—uniforms, small cannons, bugles, camouflaged tanks—were those of war. But peace was the motif.

of the new Pittman cash-and-carry bill.

The opposition group was divided on the wisdom of the other drastic cash-and-carry provision of the bill, but found unanimous accord in opposing repeal.

"There's just one thing I'm interested in—that's the fight against repeal of the arms embargo," said Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, in whose office this group met.

"We will not be distracted by any other issue. We are going to have a bully fight. We think it will last a long, long time, and we expect to win."

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, declared after the meeting: "We are not going to permit all this window-dressing to distract the public mind from the one and only issue. That is the arms embargo."

Embargo Called Main Issue

Said Vandenberg on leaving the conference: "So long as the arms embargo is repealed, this bill has upon its face the trademark of unneutrality and malice. Most of us believe that the purpose of dressing this bill up was to befuddle the issue—befuddle the debate."

Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, echoed: "Repeal of the arms embargo is the issue and so far as I am concerned, the real issue."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, said he "would like to see the arms embargo retained, with a cash-and-carry provision on everything else."

Others present at the isolationist strategy meeting were Borah (Republican), of Idaho; Clark (Democrat), of Missouri; Shipstead and Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota; Bulow (Democrat), of South Dakota; Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut; Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia; Capper (Republican), of Kansas; McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota.

As intermediary between isolationist bloc leaders and Senate Democratic chieftains, Senate Minority Leader McNary last night was reported to be attempting to work out an agreement on procedure that would assure a Senate vote by the last week in October.

McNary's Proposal

McNary reportedly was proposing that debate open in the Senate next Monday or Tuesday and conclude after approximately four weeks, with normal Senate sessions from noon to 5 p. m. six days a week. Under this arrangement, leaders would consent to apply no Administration pressure, and opponents of the bill would agree not to filibuster. Time would be consumed meanwhile in "legitimate debate."

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee meets to consider the bill tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. First day's business is expected to be limited to consideration of minor amendments, and a vote on reporting the bill was confidently expected by leaders on Friday.

Secretary Hull's reply yesterday to Senator Vandenberg's request for his views on the new cash-and-carry bill was interpreted as definite indication that the Adminsitration, having presented its case, will not again step into the controversy in Congress.

"I really have not in mind at present any particular comment in addition to the personal and official communications heretofore presented to the Congress and its committees, relative to the problem to which you refer," Hull wrote Vandenberg.

The deluge of mail that poured down on the Capitol as Congress convened appeared to be slacking. Senate letters that had reached a 187,000 total last Thursday had fallen off to an estimated 58,000 a day. Some Senators reported a leveling off also in the high majorities against embargo repeal, but opposition spokesmen said they could discover no change in the trend against repeal.

Mr. Roosevelt at his press conference offered no extensive comment on the bill. Asked if he could explain the clause permitting 90-day commercial credit extensions to belligerents, he said it was a complicated question, of which he had no knowledge as yet.

A reporter asked if he considered unconstitutional the provision giving Congress as well as the President the power to determine whether a state of war exists, prior to invocation of the neutrality law. Mr. Roosevelt said this was a moot question which an attorney general and a Supreme Court might be called on to decide in the dim future, long after the present Administration is out of office.

Prior to his regular press conference the President reviewed with six members of his Cabinet preparatory steps taken to maintain American neutrality, including the new naval patrol of the American coast. Domestic problems springing from the war also were reported to have been discussed.

Attending this conference were Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of War Woodring, Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Secretary of Labor Perkins and Attorney General Murphy.

Hayden at White House

Also called to the White House was Senator Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona, who is already committed for embargo repeal, and Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, who has not yet announced his position. Representative Scrugham (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the House Democratic Steering Committee and head also of the House Naval Appropriations subcommittee, was invited to discuss House neutrality procedure once the Senate votes on the bill.

Some criticism of the new bill came from quarters already committed to support embargo repeal.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, for example, said it appeared to him to have been "drawn by a Caspar Milquetoast."

"I think it is cowardly to relinquish all of our trade rights on the seas," said Adams. "The bill would make felons out of men who exercise our right under international law to trade with belligerents."

Adams said he will vote "of course" to repeal the arms embargo, "but I will have to hang my head if it is included in that bill."

Famous Yachtsman calls Camels—"The best cigarette buy"

"THEY BURN LONGER, COOLER, AND THAT'S IMPORTANT"

SAYS JOHN S. DICKERSON, JR.

Copyright, 1939, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina

Whatever price you pay per pack, it's important to remember this fact: By burning 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them—CAMELS give a smoking plus equal to

5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK

Cigarettes were compared recently . . . sixteen of the largest-selling brands . . . under the searching tests of impartial laboratory scientists. Findings were announced as follows:

1 CAMELS were found to contain more tobacco by weight than the average for the 15 other of the largest-selling brands.

2 Camels burned slower than any other brand tested—25% slower than the average time of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands! By burning 25% slower, on the average, Camels give smokers the equivalent of 5 extra smokes per pack!

3 In the same tests, Camels held their ash far longer than the average time for all the other brands.

MORE PLEASURE PER PUFF . . . MORE PUFFS PER PACK!

Penny for penny your best cigarette buy

NATURALLY, a cigarette noted for its generous content of better tobacco gives you better cigarette value, doesn't it? Especially when that same brand smokes longer, slower—gives more smoking—than the average of all the other 15 brands compared in laboratory tests! Yes, there is such a cigarette. Its name is Camel. Full details are told at right—the results of recent searching tests by impartial scientists. These tests confirm what many smokers have long observed for themselves. For instance, "Jack" Dickerson (above, left), prominent in yachting circles of the Eastern seaboard, says: "Yacht racing is one hobby of mine and you might call Camel cigarettes another. I turned to Camels because they burn longer, smoke milder. They go farther—give extra smoking and always have a fresh, appealing flavor." You get real cigarette contentment with Camels. They are mellow and fragrant with the aroma of choice tobaccos in a matchless blend. Turn to Camels, the cigarette of costlier tobaccos that burns longer, giving more pleasure and more smoking.

President Asks Vital Materials Not Be Sold

Word to Wise Enough, He Says; Refers to Export of Tin, Rubber

President Roosevelt yesterday called upon owners of commercial stocks of certain strategic raw materials needed for this country's defense to refuse to sell them to foreign buyers.

The President, noting attempts of foreigners to buy crude rubber, ferro manganese, ferro-manganese ore, pig tin, chrome ore and several other materials, told his press conference the Administration opposed their export.

Reading from a memorandum, he said he had prepared at the request of Secretary of War Woodring and Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison, the Executive said he felt it sufficient for the present to call the policy to the attention of those in position to control the sales.

A word to the wise should be sufficient, he added, refusing to be drawn out by a barrage of questions whether he might resort to legislation should his plea for a voluntary embargo go unheeded.

The President declined to disclose the nationality of foreigners seeking to purchase the war materials. Trade circles said they understood efforts to buy them were being made on behalf of Germany and Japan.

Only Drop in the Bucket

Stock piles of such materials which the last Congress authorized the War and Navy Departments to acquire represent only a drop in the bucket as far as the national needs are concerned, the President said.

In response to a question, he said he does not contemplate asking the special Congressional session to increase the $100,000,000 voted for the Army and Navy stock piles.

With regard to a submarine reported sighted by merchant ships in the Atlantic 43 miles off the Delaware breakwater, the President said his first word of its presence came from International News Service.

He said the Atlantic "neutrality" patrol had no confirmation of a submersible's operation in the area described.

Illustrating the patrol's usefulness, he revealed a destroyer had sighted a gray-colored tanker, flying no flag and with its name obliterated, running inconspicuously off the Cuban coast.

On Legitimate Mission

Regarding the vessel as a definite object of suspicion, he said, the destroyer trailed it until it ascertained its mission was peaceful and legitimate. He said it was not his business to reveal the nationality and destination of the tanker.

Earlier in the day, Chairman Scrugham (Democrat), of Nevada, of the House Naval Appropriations subcommittee, talked with the President about the next naval appropriation bill and said hearings on it probably would begin in November.

Scrugham said he expected the regular appropriation measure to remain about the same as the current act, which appropriated $773,000,000, or possibly a little more.

Supplementary appropriations brought the fund under which the Navy is operating in the current fiscal year close to a billion dollars.

Scrugham said he did not think there would be any substantial boost in naval appropriations although "it depends on developments, of course, in the next few months."

"As I see it," he said, "we are pretty well prepared. Money does not seem to count anymore. It is man power and the ability of the nation to support which counts."

Ziegfeld Beauty Here to Make D. C. Glamour City

Miss Diane Hunter, beauty from the 1936-37 Ziegfeld Follies, comes here to change Washington from a stenographer city to a glamour town. She thinks Washington can qualify for the change.

Miss Hunter discussed it over cocktails and caviar at the Washington Hotel yesterday and was pleased that 50 per cent of the glamour applicants she saw in a morning tryout made the grade. In preparation for staging a show with her trained glamourites shortly at a leading department store here, Miss Hunter warned women that the hair was practically all important.

60 Students At G. W. Start Flying Course

Norman Ames, Major In Air Corps Reserve, Directs Training Class

Nearly 60 George Washington University students, including two women, had visions of getting their wings yesterday as they met for their class in civilian pilot-training under the direction of a World War pilot.

Their first meeting together was similar to like classes being held this week in 300 colleges under the Civil Aeronautics Authority program for teaching 11,000 students to fly.

Answering rapid-fire questions was Norman B. Ames, professor in the George Washington school of engineering, who briefly discussed aims of the training course he is supervising. He explained that none of the group would be permanently enrolled until each had passed a rigorous physical examination.

Objectives Explained

Stimulation of private flying, airplane production and a reserve of well trained pilots in the event of war are the aims of the program, Ames said. He holds the rank of major in the Army Air Corps Reserve.

"The biggest experiment in the country on whether a part-time student can fit into the training program will be here at George Washington," he declared.

Hopeful of learning to fly is Miss Myrl O. Rhine, of 1717 R street northwest, an advertising production clerk in the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., and publicity chairman of the American Association of University women. She fears that she may not pass the eyesight test for piloting, but wants to take all the ground school courses.

Experimental Program

Inclusion of women into the training program was announced recently by Robert H. Hinckley, chairman of the authority. He estimated that not more than 3 per cent of the total of 11,000 students would be women, and termed the effort "experimental."

"We expect no Amazon war fliers, no battalions of death in case of war," commented another authority official yesterday. Observing there was no expectation of women taking over civil aviation in the event of war, he summed up the inclusion of women in the program as "giving them their rightful chance."

A pretty girl student in yesterday's George Washington class couldn't decide whether she wanted her "highful chance." Withholding her name, she said, "I just can't make up my mind."

A sweatered undergraduate said, "That's a woman's privilege—but, something the Civil Aeronautics Authority never took account of."

U-Boat Toll Cut, Says Churchill

The admiralty's three-way reply to German attacks, Churchill said, was the convoy system "now in full operation both ways," the arming of merchantmen, and British counter-attacks, which he said probably had removed already "a quarter, and perhaps a third, of the U-boats which have been employed actively" by Germany.

By the end of October, Churchill disclosed, Britain hopes to have "three times the hunting force that was operating at the outbreak of the war."

Both Churchill and the prime minister stressed the importance they placed on shutting off Germany's essential supplies as a long-range war policy.

The Allied Supreme War Council, which met in England September 22, reached "complete agreement" on munitions and supply problems, Chamberlain said, and also on "the course to be followed" to meet developments since the first council meeting in France September 12. Since then Russia's march into Poland has been the major development.

Effects Have Become Clearer

The effects of that Soviet action "have become clearer," said the prime minister, noting that more than half of Poland had been allotted Russia in agreement with Germany and that Polish oil wells were in Russian hands.

Leaving details of the war at sea to Churchill, Chamberlain reported "continuous air patrols" had proved of utmost value in combatting the submarine menace.

Munitions and food supplies are being provided Britain by her dominions "in ever-increasing volume," he said.

The prime minister defended the British blockade as a legitimate method of warfare when England-bound shipping is being attacked with "callous disregard of humanity."

On the home front, Chamberlain said, "practically the whole force of our industry" has to be concentrated on war needs. He pleaded for the co-operation of "the work people."

Negotiating Trade Pacts

The newly formed Ministry of Economic Warfare and the Board of Trade are negotiating wartime trade agreements with neutral nations in an attempt to divert their trade with Germany to Britain and her allies.

A high source stated today that attention was being focused on trying to reach an agreement with Sweden from whom Britain obtains about 90 per cent of her wood pulp imports.

Britain was said to be urging that such agreements would prevent interference with the foreign trade of neutral countries caused at present by confiscation and searches under British contraband regulations.

Authoritative quarters declared "there already is evidence that Germany has threatened some neutral countries with reprisals if trade agreements are signed with Britain."

For this reason it was said to be "more than likely" such agreements would remain secret treaties if they are concluded.

"No one can doubt that in modern warfare it is upon the determination, courage and endurance of ordinary men and women that victory ultimately depends . . .

"Never have our people been more united or more determined . . . to rid themselves once and for all of the perpetual threat of German aggression of which Poland is only the latest instance."

Loss of the aircraft carrier Courageous, which was sent to the bottom with more than 500 men nine days ago, "in no way diminishes our confidence," said Churchill, declaring it was "a 100-to-1 chance" that enabled the submarine to attack her while two of her four protecting destroyers were away chasing another submarine.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

TROIKA ARRIVES. Singer Illeana, former wife of Stan Laurel, has just joined the floor revue of the Troika, opening tonight. Also basso Anatol Groscheff, who sang with Ed Wynn in "The Perfect Fool." Considering that the revue is headed by the gorgeous Olga Baclanova and includes a half-dozen other glowing acts, it seems an understatement just to say that the new Troika revue is set to crack records for brilliant night spot diversion. We attended a rehearsal and came away with the feeling we'd seen a fireworks display.

P. S.—Celia Villa, daughter of the famed Pancho Villa, will appear at the Troika before so very long.

Opening of the fall season in the Shoreham Blue Room will be celebrated next Saturday evening. There will be two floor shows and a full line-up of new entertainers.

AHOY! THE JOLLY ROGER! When the Pirates' Den opens tomorrow eve there'll be action! . . . One buccaneer will make the rounds with a cannon and bombard anyone you mention . . . Another rascal will be hoisted 40 feet to the rafters in a sea anchor and left there to play "hot trumpet." . . . There's be a free-for-all with cutlasses . . . The brig will probably be jammed with pretty wenches.

Cafe Caprice will offer an intriguing and glittering new musical group at its fall opening tomorrow evening. Star of Caprice will be Evalyn Tyner, whose piano improvisations reflect a rare musical gift. Dancing to the music of the new Swing Sophisticates headed by George Smith. Smart vocals by prize-winning Adele Van, also the Sophisticates.

DORIS EATON of the famous Eaton Sisters starred by Florenz Ziegfeld, will appear at the opening of the Pall Mall Room next Tuesday, October 3. Miss Eaton will lead the Arthur Murray Dancers in a special interlude of entertainment at Pall Mall. The Murray teachers will instruct customers in those favorite tropical dances, the rumba, tango, samba and conga—also the new "Boompsa-daisy." If you're apt at picking up new steps, you may win some of the handsome prizes provided by the Raleigh management. Music by Bert Bernath's new All-Stars.

Wardman's Metronome Room is being transformed into a new setting for the King's Jesters who will arrive on Friday night. Just 48 hours are being taken for the doing-over. There'll be a royal canopy for the Jesters, ermine banners, new murals that'll include a fat, jolly, old king in back of the bandstand.

JOE MARSALA, whose individual swing music has placed him right up among the top-notchers, will bring his orchestra to the new Lafayette Club on Saturday evening. The Marsala clarinet playing is rated right along with that of Benny Goodman. Other stars at the Lafayette opening will be Adele Girard, swingtime harpist; Impersonator Patricia Oakley, direct from the Rockefeller rainbow room; Tony Ryan, sightless pianist of N. B. C. The Lafayette Hotel's cocktail lounge offers new entertainment, too, with pretty Libby Frazier singing and Howard Tophan at the piano.

BERT BERNATH, will lead his new orchestra in the Pall Mall Room, opening on next Tuesday, October 3

The Frances Allis Girls, now at the Lotus, have added a startling can-can to their futuristic and tap numbers. One minute you think you're in the Moulin Rouge and the next you're right on Broadway.

THE GREAT WALTZ. Tonight's waltz contest at the Shoreham marks the last of the prelims of the Harvest Moon Ball. Chief Judge Leroy Thayer has enlisted various of the town's well-known dancing teachers in awarding contest honors and they've all responded nobly. Among them were Adelaide Courtney, Marion Venable, Julia Cunningham, Jack Hargrove and Jack Rollins.

P. S. There's a great floor show at the Shoreham this week, too. The Great Rocheys dance the rumba on stilts that bring them up to 11-foot height. Vonne whirls first in a sequin cape weighing 16 pounds and then in a sarong that weighs nothing. Nitza and Ravel do a waltz that will inspire the waltz contestants.

"Ferdinand the Bull" will play a special engagement at the Ambassador Hotel's tenth anniversary party next Monday eve. There'll also be a beautiful blonde singer from Chicago, but Oscar can't remember her name. We're going to buy him a memory course.

FASHION LUNCHEONS will be in order soon. With notable girl scribes as commentators. Nancy Archibald will describe the fashions shown at the Raleigh Pall Mall Room and Marshall Adams will be the commentator at the Shoreham's fashion luncheons. Arthur Murray dancers will offer novelty interludes at the Pall Mall luncheons.

The forty-sixth anniversary of Kann's department store was celebrated at Bamboo Gardens the other evening by the entire staff of the drapery department, with their chief, Sam Feldman, playing the host. Marian Dawn sang a special song in their honor and one and all had a wonderful time, departed vowing they'd be back for Bamboo's fall opening week, beginning next Monday.

TOURING THE TOWN. Art Baker's Trio at Mayfair are playing many Hungarian dances and czardas in compliment to Hungary for being so good to the Polish refugees . . . Hal Atkinson, guitarist with Bill McCune's band at Shar-Zad, organized his own band while he attended the University of Pennsylvania . . . Jerry Roades, bass player with Pete Macias' band at the Lounge Riviera, comes from Pittsburgh and is glad of it (?) . . . Hazel Warren sings in Hawiian at the Hour Glass but can't speak Hawaiian. She leraned the words from the Cocomos, but doesn't know what they mean . . . The Mayflower Lounge is full of architects this week (American Institute of Architects' meeting in the hotel). We understand they admire Singer Patricia Ryan's architecture . . . Chief annoyances (we used to be one) of Johnny Rousseau with Lou Williams' work at Maryland Gardens, are people who spell his name Russo . . . Lyde Swygert has returned to the Rainbow Room after a four-day trip to Columbia, S. C. . . . A wedding party, complete with bride and groom, recently descended upon the Uptown cocktail lounge. The chef locked up the rice . . . Adelita Varela of the Madrillon is the only girl mistress of ceremonies in town. And she's very smart at it, too . . . Clyde Rounds of the Neptune Room's Couriers, recently completed a band tour that took him to Peru, Chile and the Argentine. He went up the Amazon, also, but that was on his own hook . . . Al's sound-off slogan at the Brown Derby, "Hold your hats, kids. Here we go!"

A shag contest starts at the A. T. & S. Barbecue on next Tuesday evening. Prizes will total $50. This nice round sum should inspire some of the most frenzied shagging ever seen in these parts. The contest will run for about four or five weeks.

LOG TAVERN DOINGS. All ready for the fall and winter is the Log Tavern. The verandas for outdoor dancing have been enclosed snugly against cold breezes. Stacks of firewood have been laid in for the big open fireplaces. Dick Davis' orchestra plays for dancing on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Schoolgirl Tells Of Kidnaping And Slaying

Florida Jury Hears Tale of Captivity and Terror

By the Associated Press

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 26.—A blonde school girl's calmly told story of captivity, terror and repeated assault today climaxed Florida's drive for the life of Charles Jefferson, bogus movie talent scout on trial for slaying Frances Dunn.

An all-male jury listened intently while Jean Bolton, 17, and pretty, said Jefferson turned swiftly from suave promiser of film fame to pistol-wielding kidnaper a few minutes after he enticed her and Miss Dunn from their Miami homes early last month.

Late in the day, Attorney Jack Salisbury opened the defense by telling the shirt-sleeved jurymen they could not vote a death sentence because the State had failed to prove premeditation or that Miss Dunn was killed in commission of an attack.

The 29-year-old prisoner, man of many aliases, many jobs and a record that includes a criminal assault conviction, took the stand to recite the story of his checkered career.

Miss Bolton, a night-club singer, said she and Miss Dunn left Miami with Jefferson to go to West Palm Beach for photographs to start a movie "build-up." Instead, she said, he drove to a lonely beach road near Boca Raton, drew a gun and dropped all pretense by crying:

"I'm not a movie producer. This is a kidnaping. I've fooled you as long as I can."

Then, she said, she and her 17-year-old chum were bound with adhesive tape and Jefferson began making threat-supported advances.

"After night fell," Miss Bolton continued, "he told us we would have to take his advances or else be put on a boat with eight or nine men. We told him we would rather die.

Hears Girl Scream

"He told us a story that seems crazy now, but I was so frightened I believed him. He said he was a member of a gang and when we heard birds call it was messages from his gang.

"He attacked me first. Later he took Frances off. I heard her scream. When they came back, I saw Frances had a very swollen eye. It was nearly closed. She cried and said: 'Jean, I'm ruined.'

"Next morning he told Frances if she didn't keep quiet he would shoot her."

Early in the morning of the second day of captivity, she said, Miss Dunn and Jefferson left and she did not see her schoolmate alive again. She heard three screams. When Jefferson returned, he said Frances had been put on a boat with his "gang" and she did not know until later that her pretty brunette friend had been beaten to death.

The second night, she said, she and Jefferson spent in a nearby hotel.

Frequently she saw people in the following day's wanderings, but she added:

"I didn't want to get shot. I didn't make an outcry."

Late that night, her story continued, she was released and walked to the fire station at Boca Raton. From there she summoned her family and police.

A search continued until dawn the next day, when the nude, beaten body of Miss Dunn was found.

Jefferson was arrested in early morning as he trudged northward along the coastal highway.

Defense Attorney Salisbury brought out, through questioning Jean, that she had in her pocket a wrist watch taken from Frances.

She said Jefferson gave her the watch the day after Frances was bludgeoned to death.

or suspension of her license, and fines up to $1,000.

The CAA was in session considering proposals to extend the restricted zone when advised of Miss Ingall's pamphlet-dropping flight and the show cause order was issued without delay.

Miss Ingalls was greeted at the airport by Catherine Curtis, chairman of the Women's National Committee to Keep U. S. Out of War, woman's "Hands Off the Supreme Court Committee" of two years ago.

The 37-year-old flier broke the women's East-West non-stop coast-to-coast record in 1935 and made air history with an adventurous flight over the Andes Mountains in 1934.

Her red, white and blue pamphlets, dropped in more hundreds than she could remember, read:

"American women do not intend to have their men again sent to die on foreign soil!

"Therefore, we ask that in considering changes in the embargo act . . . you go slowly, carefully, cautiously and that Congress remain in continuous session during this critical period."

Several hundred leaflets fell along downtown streets and some were found as far south as the Lincoln Memorial. Those who witnessed the "bombardment" scrambled after the messages as they hit the ground and anyone who had one in his hand was surrounded by a crowd of curious passersby.

French Claim Advance to Main Forts

Attained Objectives, French Say

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 26 (AP).—French forces were reported in advices reaching Basel today to have attained a number of limited objectives set at the beginning of a series of attacks launched Saturday along a 40-mile stretch of the Western Front.

Only before the towns of Zweibruecken and Pirmasens, in the central sector 15 and 30 miles east of the industrial town of Saarbruecken, were the French attacks said to have been thwarted.

The central area was reported to have been the scene of a heavy German counterattack this afternoon following three days of stubborn German resistance to the French attacks.

Dispatches reaching Basel said the fighting had been so intense between small, picked forces since Saturday that the village of Bottenbach, just north of the frontier between Pirmasens and Sweibruecken, had changed hands five times.

These reports related that several squadrons of German planes co-operated with Nazi land forces which were said to have struck south from the main Zweibruecken-Pirmasens road, bombing trenches and pillboxes around the French fort just north of Rolbing.

The main German position which formed the keystone defense of Zweibruecken, according to information received here, was high on a hill east of the Breitfurth-Blies Creek area. It was said to have remained in possession of the Nazis despite repeated day and night assaults by French troops and heavy shelling by gun batteries in the Maginot Line.

Basel, wondering for three weeks whether it would hear a shot or see action on the heretofore dormant Rhine front, stretching north of the city, both saw and heard today.

A French plane flew over the German side of the frontier nearby, apparently to see how far it could go. Several observation planes and even bombers had made flights recently up the Rhine valley toward Strasbourg along the French side within easy reach of German anti-aircraft guns without being fired on.

The French plane winged its way about a quarter of a mile over Nazi territory, then circled back, then turned over the border again.

Its second sortie across the border brought such a concerted burst of German antiaircraft fire that thousands of Basel citizens scrambled to rooftops in anticipation of witnessing their first air battle.

A French squadron, however, roared into sight, crossed the Rhine and escorted the plane safely back to the French side. Apparently none was hit by the German guns and the Nazis failed to send challenging planes into the air.

Artillery Fire to Continue

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, Sept. 26.—French heavy artillery pounding on the Westwall in the Saarbruecken and Zweibruecken areas is likely to continue for some time.

It is what artillerists call "destruction fire," and is reported to be very effective.

But it must not be imagined that there has already been a "breach" in the German line and that French troops are about to pour through there. It must be remembered that the Westwall in that region consists essentially of concrete pill boxes and casements in which machine guns and artillery are mounted.

Fifty Pill Boxes Per Mile

In some sectors there are as many as 50 pill boxes to the square mile. In front of these pill boxes are the advanced works, which the French already occupy. Behind them, it is reasonable to suppose, the Germans have raised their field fortifications.

So that the entire system of defense may have a depth of several miles.

The main difference between the Maginot Line and the Westwall is that the former, constructed at leisure, is, for the most part, sunken, while the latter, for the most part, has superstructures. The Westwall, therefore, offers a better target. Heavy French guns are now engaged in razing these superstructures.

But it by no means follows that when a sector has been leveled there will be a mass advance. The lessons of the World War have not been forgotten.

In the initial phases of a war of position the idea on both sides was to make a gap at one point in the enemy line through which to pour troops. But the enemy, warned of the intention by the very intensity of the artillery fire, would bring up reserves behind the threatened sector and lie in wait behind the breach.

Against Rash Offensives

Both the French and the British have declared themselves against rash offensives; it is generally agreed that storming the Westwall now would come within that definition. Continuation of the present cautious tactics therefore is likely—an artillery action to conquer ground, an infantry advance to occupy it, then a lull for digging in; then more artillery action, more infantry advance and another lull. It is slow but sure and above all it is economical in the use of troops.

The Germans, naturally, are striving to break that rhythm of progression by activity in other sectors.

Swiss reports continue to speak of German troop concentrations north of Basel. In this connection some significance is attached to a Swiss general staff communique today reporting that fortification work is proceeding in the interior of the country "which will necessitate some troop movements." Though the communique explains cautiously "these measures are not taken by reason of present events" the word "interior" is emphasized by French commentators.

October 10 Thrust Predicted

Paris, Sept. 26 (INS).—French military observers tonight predicted that October 10 is the date on which the Nazis will strike, via Holland, Belgium and Switzerland, in a desperate attempt to flank the French defenses.

Reich troops are concentrating in the vicinity of Aachen (Aix la Chapelle) across the frontier from Belgium, and a similar concentration is in progress north of the Swiss border.

It is almost unanimously believed in French military circles that the Germans contemplate a "double envelopment" attack, with one assault launched through Belgium and the other through Switzerland.

Military circles in Paris are of the opinion that it will require at least another two weeks for the Nazis to mass sufficient men and equipment to give this sort of a gamble any chance of succeeding. And such an attack must be made by October 10, or very shortly thereafter, because of weather conditions.

It is felt the Nazis will need a minimum of 15 crack divisions, including efficient mechanized groups, to project such an assault in the northwest; 6 divisions are considered the absolute minimum to assail the Swiss; a minimum of 40 divisions must be held in the Seigfried Line and 30 more maintained in reserve in the interior.

The German maximum armed strength is believed to be 115 divisions, and such requirements as envisaged by the French would not leave many troops to protect German conquest in Poland.

Arms Ban Held As Good as a Fleet to Nazis

Sen. Pepper Discounts Repeal Effect, Saying Hitler 'Already Is Mad'

America's present neutrality legislation "gives Germany an Atlantic fleet perhaps more powerful than the British," Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, charged last night.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee member said the arms embargo "places this country as much as Russia in alliance with Germany."

If Germany should win, he saw this country, menaced by aggressive states both east and west, living under a controlled economy, "forced to spend all its resources on the cold instrumentalities of war."

Pepper pointed out that Germany continues to receive supplies by land from her European neighbors while the American arms embargo denies war materials to the powers whose maritime position gives them access to the United States.

Hitler 'Already Mad'

He dismissed the effect of embargo repeal on German opinion with the statement that "Hitler is already mad at us—because he knows in our hearts we hate every fiber of his immoral soul."

The Senator spoke beneath a banner quoting, in letters a foot high, President Roosevelt's pledge: "No Blackout of Peace in America." An audience of 400 heard his speech at the Press Club, sponsored by the Washington Committee to Revise the Neutrality act.

Dr. Arthur Lovejoy, Johns Hopkins philosophy professor and leader of a Baltimore delegation at the meeting, called on the country to "preserve a correct, legal attitude of strict neutrality and do all possible within these limits to insure the speedy victory of France and England."

A warning against "profiteers" who would lead the country into war "for protection of their investments," while crushing democracy on the home front, was voiced by Morris Watson, vice president of the American Newspaper Guild.

Wire Pressure Denounced

Watson joined other speakers in urging repeal of the arms embargo and enactment of the cash-and-carry principle, but cautioned against "a blank check to British and French imperialism."

Pepper denounced but did not name "a man who went on the radio last Sunday afternoon, invoked the Divin Spirit, and called on his listeners to flood Congress this week with 10,000,000 communications against repeal."

On a single day in September, 1916, the Senator related, 250,000 identical telegrams in favor of an embargo on war shipments arrived at the Capitol. They were financed by Count von Bernstorf, then German Ambassador, he said.

"Far be it from me to impugn any man's motives today," Pepper said, "but I should like to feel confident that everyone of these letters now reaching Congress is from an American citizen interested in the welfare of this country."

Navy Increase in Hawaii Linked to Oriental Situation

'Pretty Fair Sized' Force Ordered to Pearl Harbor After Ranking Officials Confer With President on Conditions

Decision to shift a "pretty fair sized" force of naval vessels to Hawaii was reached yesterday at a conference of ranking naval officials with President Roosevelt.

This was disclosed by a highly placed Government official, who asserted the purpose of the move was to decentralize and train the fleet and that it involved "no ulterior motive."

Other Government circles, however, viewed the impending movement as having considerable international significance, especially in light of the tense situation in the Far East, where Britain and France are on notice from Japan to take their armed forces out of China.

Fleet Stays on Coast

The main body of the fleet will remain on the Pacific Coast, with the force to be moved to Hawaii retaining California ports as their home bases, but operating the larger part of the year from the naval base at Pearl Harbor. An announcement of the number and names of the ships to be sent there is expected within a few days.

Pearl Harbor, principal advance base in the Pacific, now has only 18 submarines, 8 mine ships, and about 75 Navy planes, and is guarded by strong Army fortifications. The strengthening of this naval force, on the heels of the dispatch of 12 large patrol bombers and the aircraft tender, Langley, to the Philippines, and the impending movement of six submarines to the U. S. Asiatic Fleet, will act as a warning of American interests in maintaining the "open door" in China, some officials stated.

It also was revealed yesterday that the expansion of Navy personnel ordered some weeks ago by President Roosevelt to provide full-strength crews for ships and man reserve destroyers was proceeding at rapid rate. During the first two weeks of expansion, enlistments totaled 2,856. About one out of three have had prior Navy experience, it was said.

Secret Maneuvers Start

San Pedro, Calif., Sept. 26 (AP).—One hundred and one ships of the United States fleet, with 400-odd fighting planes, put to sea today for four days of secret maneuvers.

Ten battleships, 3 aircraft carriers, 10 heavy cruisers, 11 light cruisers, 43 destroyers, 11 submarines and 13 auxiliaries and minesweepers put out from the San Pedro base.

Neutral Zones At Sea

The idea of proclaiming neutral zones in waters adjacent to the American republics appears to have been enthusiastically received at the Panama City conference. All of these American nations are eager to avoid war, and, so far as possible, to protect themselves from the consequences of the European conflict. It is natural and proper for them to work out a mutual defense policy that will serve the interests of each country as well as those of the New World in general.

In effect, Undersecretary of State Welles called upon the 21 American republics to inform belligerent nations that the New World will not permit its security and its commercial rights to be jeopardized by warfare in close proximity to its shores. Other delegates to this meeting of foreign ministers of American states came out for specific plans to extend neutral zones various distances from the shore line. If American ships are free to operate in such an area without molestation, it is believed, the prospect of avoiding involvement in the war would be notably improved.

That is an appealing view which may well be explored to the full. It is well to remember, however, that the establishment of a neutral zone in American waters would involve serious practical difficulties. Two of the belligerents, Great Britain and France, own rather extensive areas in what may be reasonably considered American waters. British Honduras is a part of Central America, as British and French Guiana are part of South America. In addition, the British own Jamaica, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Barbados, Trinidad and many other islands in the Caribbean and west Atlantic. France owns Martinique, Guadeloupe and other islands.

So long as ports in these areas are open to use by the British and French navies the adjacent waters could not, of course, be considered neutral. If the American states are to establish a zone from which belligerent activities would be barred, they may find it necessary to ask Great Britain and France to keep their warships away from their own possessions on and near the American coast. That may appear unreasonable, but if vessels of the Allied powers operate in this area German submarines can not be expected to refrain from attacking them.

Some statesmen at Panama have talked rather glibly about pushing a neutral zone far out into the Atlantic. The larger the area included, however, the more difficult the problem becomes. Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands would have to be included in the neutral zone as a matter of course. Even a restricted zone, therefore, would apparently include such islands as British Jamaica.

Obviously the problem will have to be carefully studied before the proposed neutral zone can be proclaimed. And conferences with London and Paris on the matter will be essential.

Cyril Wynne

None can say with assurance how much the strain of contemporary events contributed to the tragic death of Edward Cyril Wynne, chief of the Division of Research and Publications in the Department of State. But it is a reasonable assumption that this was a real factor in depriving Secretary Hull of a valued associate.

The war in Europe has intensified the burdens of every Government office. In none is the extra load as heavy as is the case with the Department of State, charged with primary responsibility for keeping the United States at peace. Long working days and constant anxiety have for the last month been the rule in this department, which even under normal circumstances is pitifully short-handed and penuriously restricted for the vital duties it must fulfill.

Dr. Wynne was one of those faithful, competent workers on whose individual effort rests much of the efficiency of the entire organization. To the general public his name was not well known. But to him personally is due much of the credit for recent notable improvements in Department of State publicity, on which in turn depends no small part of the public understanding of the aims and methods of our foreign policy.

Dr. Wynne's monument stands already in such widely used documents as the weekly pamphlet series and the nearly contemporaneous foreign relations publications of the Department of State. His work has made its contribution to the intelligent conduct of foreign policy by this democracy.

Neutrality Pitfalls

In the last analysis there are only two questions which need to be asked about any legislation designed to protect the neutrality and preserve the peace of the United States. The first question is whether each specific legislative provision will actually operate to keep us out of war. The second question is how each of these provisions will affect basic and long-range national interests.

Both of these questions involve looking ahead rather than looking back. Both of them involve intelligent anticipation rather than emotional recollection. Both questions are based on the reasonable assumption, justified by all evidence to date, that the course of the present war is going to be very different from that of 1914-18, and that a policy patterned solely on the experience of the last war is likely to prove not merely short-sighted but also self-destructive.

The essential trouble with the present neutrality law is that it was formulated solely on the experience of the last war and virtually without reference to the two all-important questions noted above. In consequence we have on the statute books today neutrality legislation which, if in force in 1914, might possibly have kept us at peace in 1917. It does not for a moment follow that this legislation, in force in 1939, is necessarily calculated to preserve American peace throughout the present war.

Realization of this is spreading. Realization that the neutrality law now on the statute books is neither really neutral, nor in any way a reliable guarantee against war, explains the rising tide of sentiment for its amendment. The public notices, to cite only one anomaly, that under the present law much contraband of war can be shipped to war zones in American ships while certain other forms of contraband (munitions) cannot be shipped to belligerents in their own ships, or even by rail to Canada for that matter. Legislation so drawn arouses much bitterness while accomplishing little or nothing to safeguard peace.

The move to revise this legislation is following the reasonable argument that we should strengthen the safeguards against involvement in war while simultaneously dropping the unneutral embargo. The arbitrary distinction between manufactured munitions and basic munitions, such as cotton, copper, oil, coal and wheat, would be eliminated by the bill now before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. All contraband would properly be placed on the same footing, but with proper precautions, now largely lacking, to insure that any and all risk involved in purchase and shipment should fall on the belligerent purchaser.

This method of revision effectively answers the first of the two questions which should be put with regard to all neutrality legislation, and which would have averted a lot of dismal fumbling if they had been applied from the outset. The draft bill now before Congress would make American involvement in the war distinctly less probable, to say nothing of its effect in making our policy far more neutral from the viewpoint of international law.

But the second question, of how this bill would affect our basic national interests, remains for consideration. And it is from this viewpoint that the new legislation, as drafted, deserves the closest scrutiny.

Obviously the foreshadowed restrictions on shipments in American bottoms, the stringent limitations on credits and the prohibition of export before transfer of title, will work hardship on American manufacturers, farmers and shippers. Just as obviously the larger objective of national peace outweighs the sum of these private interests.

Under the bill as drafted, however, there would be many cases of interference with normal relationships which by no stretch of the imagination can be called either unneutral or dangerous. This is bound to cause the more irritation and bad feeling because the commerce and travel obstructed could not possibly draw the United States into war.

If a Washington clergyman travels to Montreal to visit a cousin, taking with him a suitcase containing only clothing and toilet articles, it could scarcely be said that such a trip is likely to involve the United States in war. Yet under the bill as drafted it would seem illegal for our hypothetical clergyman to transport even his own pajamas into Canada "until all right, title and interest therein shall have been transferred to some foreign government, agency, institution, association, partnership, corporation or national."

Many other absurd consequences seem possible under the bill as drafted. An American coasting steamer could not proceed from Seattle to Vancouver. An American airplane, traveling to Latin America, could not alight to fuel at Trinidad. No American ship, because of the war in Europe, could move passengers or freight from Manila to Hongkong.

To put the stamp of law on restrictions as arbitrary as these would not safeguard peace. It would, on the contrary, tend to bring the new legislation into discredit as soon as enacted.

Regardless of various viewpoints on the subject of neutrality it is in the interest of everybody that legislation on the subject should be both practical and workable. To make it so the present draft bill will need to be subjected to careful analysis and criticism. Otherwise it may do far less to preserve peace than to cause needless and injurious dislocation, particularly so far as our relations with Canada are concerned.

Not A Question Of Face

For the first time the National Assembly at Manila this week seriously debated postponement of Philippine independence beyond the 1946 date provided in the present law. There has been much quiet talk as to the desirability of such a move during the last two years. Now, at last, some leaders in the Philippine Legislature are ready to face the issue realistically.

It was Assemblyman Jose Romero, a prominent member of President Quezon's party, who raised the question. Mr. Romero served as a member of the joint preparatory committee on Philippine independence. But he now believes that the time is unpropitious for a complete separation from the United States. With the Philippines surrounded by foreign military bases, he fears that independence in the near future would be a move away from freedom instead of toward it.

"We talk about the ignominy of slavery," Mr. Romero cried. "We are not slaves now. We are free in all but form, but we may yet be slaves if we refuse to recognize the logic of contemporary events." His proposal of an immediate Filipino conference to deal with realities instead of wishful thinking met with sharp criticism. But to charges that a reversal of policy would cost the Filipinos heavily in terms of prestige he pointedly replied:

> I know how much we can lose face—not only face but body and soul. That is by another foreign conquest.

There will be keen disappointment throughout the Philippines if the 40-year dream of independence has to be forsaken because of the reversion to the law of tooth and claw among nations. But such disappointment is insignificant compared to the destruction that has been visited upon Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and China. For the moment there may be fulminations against Mr. Romero, but there seems little doubt that, in the end, his advice for reconsideration of the whole issue will be taken.

Warsaw's Epic

The heroic defense of Warsaw adds another incredible event to a roster which has already so sorely taxed the world's capacity to believe. Previous to the siege of Madrid, in fact, there was great doubt that a complex modern city could withstand alone the advance of a mechanized army in the way in which medieval walled towns formerly fought. Although it is improbable that Warsaw can hold out much longer, its resistance in many ways has been even more remarkable than that of Madrid.

After the complete collapse of the Polish defense elsewhere, after the government had left the capital without officially informing the citizens, and even after Marshal Smigly-Rydz, supreme chief of the Polish forces, had fled to Rumania, Warsaw still struggled on. As everyone knows, the city held out against shelling and bombing from without, as well as fire, sabotage, hunger, death and disease from within. And above all, it did this despite the virtual certainty of eventual capture.

A possible reason for this suicidal fight to the finish has been offered by Walter Lippmann. The partition of Poland, he points out, allots to Russia that territory running to the very suburbs of Warsaw in the east. Mr. Lippmann takes note of reports to the effect that this resistance is being conducted by a Socialist workers' emergency government. It is very possible, he says, that the defenders of Warsaw have been waiting for the Russians to arrive. In any case, it has also been reported that the Soviet army is avoiding participation in the siege of the city.

Whatever the purpose and whatever the result, the defenders of Warsaw will undoubtedly go down in history with Poland's greatest heroes, that is if future historians continue to use our standards and values. These men have added to the best traditions on which Poland has always relied. Far from being of only symbolic significance, this sort of tradition may very well play an important part if the time comes when Poland's restoration is being considered.

The Danzig Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can we place our faith in the words of the leader of the German people? To quote him: "And any Englishman who thinks the German nation can be weaned away from me is downright insane," is to say that he has the complete confidence of the German people. It is interesting to note how different some of the reports emanating from Berlin paint the picture.

We hear constant rumblings of the fomentation of discontent on all fronts. We read that there are efforts of suppression of protests of businessmen who cry out at the confiscatory methods of appropriating capital held in foreign countries by these men, and we hear of the protests of the workers of Germany. Only because of the guarded suppression of German public opinion is it impossible definitely to measure this opposition and offer it in rebuttal to Der Fuehrer's boastful declarations.

He further says "England may be sure that the propaganda she is now waging will utterly fail of its mark. If they want to conduct effective propaganda, they had better first come to Germany to learn a few lessons." Thus by his own admission the perfidious methods of the Nazi infiltration of propaganda is disclosed and incriminated. Openly he boasts of the ability of the Nazi machine to disseminate this poisonous publicity. Yet in the same breath he cries out for understanding and confidence.

Again he says that for every bomb which England and France drop on German soil, they, the Nazis, will drop five in retaliation. Upon threats like these, can confidence be bred? But this man cries out that Germany wants peace and attempts to place the burden upon Britain and France for their alleged failure to trust him.

Now we turn back the most recently inserted pages of history to witness a subjugated Austria, a disrupted Czech nation, a war-torn and battered Poland, and of course what tomorrow may uncover on the new pages yet to be inserted we do not know; but Hitler still cries out that he wants peace and asks that confidence be reposed in him.

Reaction To A Reaction

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under the heading "Lindbergh Versus Thompson" in your issue of September 23 you published eight letters, seven of which defended Lindbergh against Thompson. Of these seven, one in his anger at what he refers to as Miss Thompson's "stuff," goes so far as to cry at you petulantly: "Don't care whether you publish this or not, for I'm not going to read The Post as long as it publishes articles that aren't fair."

It is perhaps time for all of us readers who must try to cope with the problems that are posed for us in these distressing days to begin reining in our sympathies and forbear rushing to express with a great deal of emotion the opinions that we cherish in private about the lives and thoughts of our prominent citizens. To get any wisdom for ourselves, each of us needs to ponder what is being said on all sides with as much calm reasonableness as he can muster.

However, as long as your paper carried not only Lindbergh's speech and Thompson's appraisal of its background but also a definite indication of the popular reaction in those eight letters from readers, I think it is only a bigoted observer who might find in its presentation of the day's happenings of moment anything that is "unfair." Let me say, anyhow, that I shall not stop reading The Post as long as it continues to give space to those who have something to say on both sides of important issues, who know how to say it as well as Miss Thompson does, and who command attention, as both she and Col. Lindbergh do, by just being whom and what they are. At present, I very much like your newspaper.

Ukrainian Position Stated

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An Associated Press dispatch from Pittsburgh, published in The Post on Sunday, September 17, brought a statement allegedly made by a leading Ukrainian in this country, Prof. Alexander Granovsky, of Minnesota University, to the effect that the Ukrainians in Europe "welcome" the German invasion of Poland as a first step in the liberation of Ukraine. And a proper and quite correct reference to that dispatch has been made by Mr. M. Sichynsky, a countryman of mine, in his letter to The Post of September 22, in which he disclaimed any such feelings among the Ukrainians and expressed hope that Prof. Granovsky was misquoted.

Indeed, it would be absurd to think that any such statement could have come from a person of Prof. Granovsky's scholastic and political standing. Misquotations are highly possible nowadays and Prof. Granovsky has been misquoted in the worst manner. Since that report indirectly also affects the activity of our bureau in this city, I took upon myself to contact Prof. Granovsky. Before he had a chance to effect a proper correction by the Associated Press, I am authorized by him to make the following statement:

The remarks made by Prof. Granovsky in reference to the Polish-German war during a lecture, and not in a direct statement to the press, have been badly misinterpreted by the Associated Press reporter. He never said that the Ukrainians "welcome" German invasion of Poland as a stepping stone to the liberation of Ukraine. Instead, he said that "it is to be expected that the German aggression of Poland will affect the Ukrainians as tragically as the Poles, in view of the so far mysterious German-Soviet pact. But the Ukrainians wait for and will welcome a real opportunity for their liberation that might present itself in the course of the future war developments."

I am glad that The Post has afforded Mr. Sichynsky an opportunity to express his opinion in regard to the dispatch in question and made my task of refuting this misstatement that much easier. For his reaction may be looked upon as that of any Ukrainian in the United States or in Europe. Before and after the outbreak of the European war the Ukrainian press and our bureau in its bulletins voiced no illusions as to the possibilities to be derived by the Ukrainians from the German and, then already certain, eventual Russian occupation of Poland.

We Ukrainians would be most happy if the American people would properly evaluate all such reports and base their opinion on the Ukrainian problem on the statements and communiques officially released in writing by the competent and legitimate Ukrainian national agencies and organizations.

Such allegations tend, further, to spread the rumors that there are Nazi sympathizers among the Ukrainians of this country. No conservative Ukrainian group can be called Nazi any more than a Socialist Ukrainian group can be called communistic. Both Nazi-ism and communism are destructive forces to the American democratic institutions, cherished also by the Ukrainians, and both of them spell doom to the Ukrainian efforts for liberation.

Football Predictions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So this is 1939 football season! Ten of the "Big Shots" start with new coaches—namely, Pitt, Duquesne, Holy Cross, Navy, Oklahoma, Temple, Tulsa, U. C. L. A., Wyoming and Gonzaga. This eliminates them of course for this year from any top-notch honors in football. Coaches never in their first year put out a champ team. It just isn't done.

With this and many other facts in mind I dare to give forth my selection of "tops" in football even before they begin to play. So if you doubt my word just clip and save this prediction of mine until the season's close and then I shall have the joy of saying "I told you so."

I select as follows for the top of the heap by the end of the season and in the order I consider they will rank by record: Notre Dame, Tennessee, Northwestern, Fordham and Southern California. All of these five teams will make a strong bid for national supremacy and I expect to see at least three of them go through the season unbeaten and untied.

I have not mentioned Duke for the simple reason that it reached its super-brilliant peak last year and can hardly repeat for at least some years to come. Great teams are not built in a day but take three to four years in the making. I expect to see Notre Dame have the greatest team this year since the end of the great Rockne dynasty.

I'm going to tip you off to two of the great stars of the first firmament who will shine brilliantly in the football heavens of 1939—namely, Bill De Correvont, of Northwestern, and Jim Blumenstock, of Fordham. Look and see if I'm not correct as the season advances.

Now before I cease firing I must confidentially tell you something more. And this is based not on mere guesswork but study, comparison and consideration. I'm going to tell you the rank of the "Big Ten" at the close of this season even before it starts.

Here it is without comment: Big Ten final standing, 1939: Northwestern, champions; Michigan, second; Minnesota, third; Wisconsin, fourth; Purdue, fifth; Ohio State, sixth; Iowa, seventh; Illinois, eighth; Indiana, ninth; Chicago, tenth.

Looks To Congress

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congress has been called into extra session. Congress can declare war, but an undeclared war has been going on in the United States for sometime past.

The tactics of the enemy are very subtle. In every direction new propositions are being offered, each ostensibly to remedy some evil, or to make some improvement, but, in fact, to undermine or destroy the very foundations of our civilization and reduce us to slavery or serfdom.

These veiled attacks are directed against our present form of government, our private property, our business, our rights, our morals and religion. In every case they are presented in a way to attract adherents who never dream of the ulterior motives hidden beneath the surface.

The usual method of attack is to propose some increase in the powers of the executive branch of our government. We do not want a Hitler or a Stalin in the White House. Congress must not be stampeded. Congress must not abdicate. Congress is our hope and must not fail us.

Seeing A Fair

I WENT TO Grover Whalen's show—my fifth world's fair. I had visited the first one in Chicago, the St. Louis one, the one at Wembley and the second at Chicago. I do not attend world's fairs fluently or blithely, or long enough to be just to it or find out anything. So in a half day on Long Island I did it, I merely acquired a new set of confusions and possibly some corns. Any big fair will give any hurried visitor a terrific case of scenic indigestion.

One comfort in the case of such hurried glancers as myself is that one knows one didn't see the fair. All the quick departer sees is that there really is a fair (or something) going on. He is in no position to tell anything about it. He has glanced at the shells of enough things to have him investigating the insides of them for a month. But he hasn't seen anything and he knows no more than he knew before he went.

So, merely expecting to put a new dent in my ignorance without really damaging it, I went to Grover's show. I bet it's a honey. Anyway, it made me think of the poverty-stricken old woman from the hinterland who, on her first glimpse of the ocean, could hardly be dragged away from it. When pressed for a reason, she said it was the first thing she ever saw that there was enough of.

And I have a little plan I wish seriously to present to anyone who has only a half day or so to spare: Go in the afternoon, take in the gardens, go see the Aquacade, eat dinner, and take a tour of the grounds when the magnificent lights have been lighted. After you have done this, round up at the fountains at 9 and see the lights and fireworks.

Do not attempt to see it from the French restaurant terrace. No lamb chop is worth a dollar ninety and no duck is worth four-fifty. Besides, you can see it better from the street level than you can see it up there with two large, opaque waiters between you and it. I never could see through the French anyway.

After having seen the thing as a magnificent whole, at night, finishing with the flamboyant fountains, you will at least carry away a beautiful picture that will never die. That's something.

But you will have had a lifetime's joy at Billy Rose's Aquacade even if you never glance toward the stage or the pool—and I dare you to keep from looking at either.

What I refer to is the typical New York hawker-concessionaires. They are a breed to themselves. Fifteen minutes after a boy is born in New York or Brooklyn, I bet you they can tell if he's going to be some sort of barker. If there is something in his first cry that makes you reach for your pocketbook and buy something you don't want, you'll know he'll be a Congressman or a barking concessionaire.

I watched them fascinatedly that day as they peddled their wares and gave cries that, even if you didn't understand the words, would excite you and make you believe something of great and urgent moment was going on.

They sold souvenirs of various kinds, drinks and redhots, and cushions to break the hard news about the seats as gently as possible to your sedentary portions. Only the cushion salesmen were of the silent, light-running, all-moving-parts-working-in-oil variety. They just came to you and with a positively maternal smile offered to place a cushion under you. They told you what were the best seats to see from, and all that. And when you had sat down on the cushion, they said timidly, as though it were an apologetic afterthought, "The charge for the cushion is 10 cents."

But the others were leathern-lunged plus. They cried their wares so seductively and euphoniously that the urge to buy was almost irresistible. One in particular who was selling keyrings was worth the price of the Aquacade ticket. He was bareheaded and wore a mustache and reiterated ceaselessly:

"Keyrings—no more a quahtah! A dime only! Why the chain alone is worth 10 cents! Load right up with 'em now! No more a quahtah—10 cents! A soo-veneer of the Ockwuh-cade! Why the chain alone"—ad infinitum. His barking was so outstanding that the others began kidding him while doing their own hawking. His "load right up with 'em" became a chuckling byword. Now and then one would remark, not too sotto voce, after the statement that the chain alone was worth the price, "You don't say!" then resume his own howling of "Red hots! Hot dogs!" or selling envelopes containing the groundwork for the huge blimps marked "Billy Rose's Aquacade."

One unique cry, by a soft-drink salesman, was: "Y'll be sick if yuh don't drink it, y'll be sick if you do."

It was with reluctance that we heard the megaphoned announcement from the stage that nothing would be vended during the performance. One wished the barkers might keep on barking continuously. These noisy merchants are as much a product of N'Yawk, as much a race unto themselves, as are the Tahitians or Papuans. Either that or, after having been born with indestructible vocal chords, they are dropped on their heads by careless nurses or befuddled parents.

But, of course, after the show had begun, we would have resented the barking or anything else that would have prevented our seeing a solitary feature of what is perhaps the best show there is or has ever been. Too bad they thought it necessary to smut it up a bit just so as to put the New York theatrical trade-mark on it.

So I went to the World's Fair of Tomorrow. The above complete description of everything in it ought to satisfy the most curious.

I must add, however, that tears of incurable sorrow dimmed my eyes as I went through the Polish building so that, when I came out and looked toward that hypocritical statue of a workman atop the Russian propaganda palace, I couldn't see anything but a deceptive blur.

Truth About Atheists

SOME OF OUR most prominent citizens seem to have arrived at a thorough misunderstanding of the status of atheists under the American form of government.

There is a careless or sometimes a deliberate dishonest assumption that because the communists are atheists all atheists are communists. And because the communists are devoted to the purpose of destroying the Government by civil war and to the suppression of religion by terror and burning, all atheists are lumped together as enemies of the state and religion.

The truth is, however, that some thorough Americans, good citizens and honest traders, who have fought for the country in war are either lackadaisical atheists or convinced unbelievers. Such persons are not hostile to those who do believe in God and feel no mission to combat religion or belittle the faith of their neighbors.

Some Of Atheists Noted For Tolerance

THEY MAY BE extremely tolerant by contrast with the extreme intolerance of conspicuous individuals on the other side of the question. Some of them get along on terms of warm personal friendship with enlightened and tolerant members of the clergy.

An atheist of my acquaintance who died long ago was a bosom friend of a noted Catholic priest. They spent many hours together over a period of years, and the priest's personal admiration for the character, honesty and citizenship of his friend was such that he obtained special permission to deliver at his bier a eulogy which was not religious. That the priest, privately, offered a mass or a prayer for the repose of the soul of his friend I take the liberty of suspecting.

A statement or reminder of the rights of atheists in the United States is not a defense of atheism itself, nor can it honestly be stoned as a sly act of hostility to religious belief. The right to believe and worship is established and respected, but among those who exercise that right there are individuals given to violent forms of expression, who appear not to understand that there is an equally sound right to doubt.

Atheist Need Not Be A Communist

CERTAINLY any person of sufficient education to wear the cloth and title of reverend must know that an atheist need not necessarily believe in communism and that it is possible for an atheist to live decently, deal honestly and defend the American form of government. It should be emphasized that freedom of conscience can be abolished by coercion from either side and that conversions or professions obtained under conditions which inhibit free decision are counterfeit. It it were true that persons who profess to believe in religion could therefore be relied upon for superior citizenship there would be a temptation to make some change. But, unhappily, profession and performance are not always consistent. Some men who are noted in their communities for their apparent piety are notorious for their dishonesty in public affairs at a time when public officers have an unusually solemn duty to conduct themselves in a manner which will maintain popular confidence in the American form of government.

No individual communist, at the present writing, can do more harm to that form of government than the public official who runs a corrupt machine and gives the victims of his misrule occasion to doubt that popular government can work.

Outward Piety May Hide Wickedness

IT IS ABSOLUTELY true that such a politician, for all his outward display of religious character, is not only a false Christian but a detriment to his religion. But it is equally true that people tend to accept profession and outward observance of religious form as signs of fitness and prefer a bad Christian to an honest man of established good citizenship who openly declares his inability to believe in God.

The atheist, just as an atheist, is not a church-burning, murdering terrorist. Some belong to societies for the propagation of their unbelief, but surely truth is not afraid to meet error in open conflict.

My reason for these observations is that some men who are using religion to create political power for themselves would like to impose on Americans the same compulsion to embrace religion that the communists employ to compel the repudiation of their faith by poor wretches who are not quite up to martyrdom. Once concede that religious belief is a required condition of American citizenship, and the next step will be to single out a particular religion.

Canada Organizes For War

Britain Asks Medical, Technical And Naval Assistance

By Our Ottawa Correspondent.

Ottawa.

CANADA is not yet gripped by any hectic war fever and the great majority of her people are still going quietly about their normal avocations, but there are in progress processes of transformation and adjustment in various spheres of the national life.

Except for the members of the cabinet, who are overwhelmed with many new problems and cares and kept busy at their desks from morn till eve, Ottawa is once more deserted by the politicians as the special parliamentary session, which ended on September 13, lasted only six days. But it is swarming with such a multitude of suppliants, either seeking jobs in some military or civil capacity or hunting war contracts that the accommodation of the local hotels is taxed as never before.

Men in uniform are now quite common in the streets of the capital and all the important centers, and women who are interested in organizations like the Red Cross and the Daughters of the Empire are giving up their social duties and amusements to do their share.

ON THE WHOLE, the King ministry, after some hesitations and delays, have given the country quite effective and vigorous leadership for the start of its national war effort and, although critics are not lacking, its prestige is decidedly higher than it was three months ago. Premier King has made a beginning with the reorganization of his ministry, for which there was a growing popular agitation.

He has not yet found a satisfactory successor from French Canada for Mr. Rinfret, the late secretary of state, but he has managed to induce Col. Ralston, K. C., to take the important portfolio of finance, which Mr. Dunning was compelled to resign through ill health. Col. Ralston, whose return to public life after four years' retirement has evoked general commendation even from the Conservative press, will bring a much-needed reinforcement of ability and varied experience to the cabinet. He had a fine record as a combatant in the last war and in his later role as a corporation lawyer of the first rank acquired a good knowledge of business and the confidence of the business and financial community.

Mr. King's chief cabinet problem concerned Mr. Ian Mackenzie, the minister of national defense, whose administration of the department of national defense has ever since the revelations of the judicial inquiry into the Bren gun contract been the target of a barrage of hostile criticism in the press, with a Liberal paper like the Winnipeg Free Press leading the attack. It has kept up since the war began, and so Mr. King has bowed to the storm and removed Mr. Mackenzie to the ministry of pensions and national health.

IN HIS place he has appointed one of his chief proteges, Mr. Norman Rogers, who was once his private secretary and has been minister of labor since 1935. While many people would have preferred Maj. Power, the minister of pensions and health, in the defense department, the change made is welcomed and will allay a lot of disquietude.

Maj. Power to make way for Mr. Mackenzie takes the office of postmaster general whose occupant Mr. McLarty becomes minister of labor.

The government had secured authority from Parliament to establish a new department of munitions and supply, but it has decided for the time being to keep it as a board without representation in the cabinet. Mr. Wallace Campbell, president of the Ford Co. of Canada and one of the ablest business executives in the Dominion, has been chosen as its head. He will have as his second in command R. C. Vaughan, a vice president of the Canadian National Railways. This board will work in close co-operation with a British mission headed by Sir James Rae which has arrived in Ottawa. Between them they will undertake the mobilization of the industrial and other economic resources of Canada for the benefit of the Allied cause. They are enlisting for this work the services of a contingent of experienced financial and business men who have offered to serve on a dollar a year basis.

MEANWHILE in other directions the government is going ahead with plans to fulfill its pledge to give effective co-operation to Britain and France. There has been a continuous interchange of views and information between Ottawa and London and apparently the Chamberlain ministry has intimated that it does not want any large force of infantry and artillery from Canada for the time being, but would welcome immediate reinforcements of planes, trained aviators, doctors, engineers and skilled technicians who could be incorporated at once in British units and that it would value some help on the naval side. The government has agreed to send a contingent of the type of men required overseas in the near future and arrangements are being made to speed up the training of aviators in Canada so that a steady flow of pilots and other airmen can be sent over to the British air force.

The personnel of the Canadian navy is also to be recruited to about double its present strength and the construction of a number of minesweepers and anti-submarine craft is to be begun in Canada.

Probably ministers would have preferred to delay the organization of an expeditionary force, as the British did not ask for it and they knew that it would not be a popular move in Quebec, but they had to face a growing agitation for it in the English-speaking provinces, particularly Ontario. They were also informed by their military advisers that the best class of young recruits were not likely to come forward freely as long as they had no prospect of going overseas.

So after prolonged discussions in the cabinet early this week, the decision was reached to proceed with the organization and training of an expeditionary force of two divisions, which will be kept in Canada until the British high command says that it needs it. The strength of each division will be somewhere near 20,000 of all ranks and in addition to these there will be kept on home duty a substantial number of troops guarding the coastal defenses and vulnerable points.

The decision about the expeditionary force is causing a good deal of grumbling and political unrest in Quebec, for many French-Canadians are fearful that it will lead to military conscription. But the government is hoping that its French-Canadian members with the aid of the leaders of the Roman Catholic hierarchy who are said to be in the main sympathetic to the government's policy, will be able to head off the development of any unpleasant agitation and the sort of racial cleavage that occurred in the later stages of the last war. So far, the French-Canadians, while not enthusiastic about the war, have been as sympathetic to the national war effort as anybody expected.

THE OTHER NON-BRITISH racial groups in the country are causing no trouble; most of the Canadian Germans who were overt devotees of the Nazi faith are being interned.

Leaders of the prominent German-Canadian organizations have made public fidelity to the British Commonwealth, while the spokesmen of other European groups have taken a similar attitude. The Polish and Czecho-Slovakian communities are offering to raise contingents for service against Germany.

THE GOVERNMENT has taken to heart some of the lessons learnt in the last war, and under the drastic powers conferred upon the cabinet by the war measures act passed in 1914 and retained on the statute books it has already put in force a number of far-reaching measures, which, when they come into full operation, will impose a fairly rigid plan of state control over almost every form of economic activity and will compel the business community to make adjustments of its methods and arrangements by no means generally palatable to it.

The decision has been arrived at that a firm control of foreign exchange is indispensable to the effective organization of Canada's war effort and to ensure that vital supplies are conserved for the use of Canada and her Allies and do not reach Germany. So there has been created a Foreign Exchange Control Board of five members headed by the governor of the Bank of Canada, which will function as technical adviser, banker and agent for the board, and it has been armed with plenary powers to regulate and control all foreign exchange transactions and also to regulate export and import trade by a system of licenses which the customs department will issue.

There has also been created a Wartime Prices and Trade Board manned by five high civil servants, whose duties will be to halt profiteering, prevent hoarding and insure a fair and regular distribution of the necessities of life. The press and broadcasting have been placed under a censorship, regulations of which are very severe. There is being organized a bureau of information and publicity which will keep the people informed about Canada's part in the war and try to guide public opinion and maintain the national morale.

Stories Conflict On Sea Battle Off Norwegian Coast

Copenhagen, Sept. 26 (AP).—The situation off the Norwegian coast for the last 24 hours or more remained a mystery tonight, in the absence of confirmation of reports of a naval battle.

The latest reported action was between noon and 1:40 p. m. (6 and 7:40 a. m. E. S. T.) today, off Lister Fjord in southern Norway. Inhabitants said they clearly saw three warships, two submarines and smaller warcraft and heard between 30 and 40 shots and the drone of airplane motors.

The mystery deepened when newspapermen at Farsund, near Lister, questioned by telephone from Copenhagen, said police had forbidden them to talk to any points outside of Norway.

The Norwegian admiralty discounted any connection between sounds resembling gunfire heard yesterday off Bergen and ships reported maneuvering offshore. An official statement said dynamiting in necessary works on nearby islands caused the explosions and concussions heard and felt in the area.

Nazis Fire On Holland Plane

Berlin, Sept. 26 (AP).—An official announcement late tonight said a Netherlands commercial airplane was shot at by German aviators but said the "regrettable incident" occured because the attacked plane resembled a type of enemy aircraft and had no distinguishing marks.

Swanson's Widow Asks Control of Estate Here

Mrs. Lulie Hall Swanson Monday asked the District Court for authority to administer the $45,500 Washington property of her husband, Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson, who died here July 7.

Mrs. Swanson was left the bulk of the Secretary's estate, which included property in Virginia appraised at $37,600. Secretary Swanson's will was probated last month in Pittsylvania County, Va. Mrs. Swanson's petition here asked the court to issue her letters as ancillary administratrix so that she would have legal control of the Washington property.

The only large bequest was a gift of $10,000 to the Secretary's stepson, Douglas Deane Hall. The property here included the Swanson home, at 2136 R street northwest, appraised at $27,500, $16,000 in cash, and furnishings valued at $2,000.

War Boom Controls

By Ernest K. Lindley

Export Curb Needed

THE NEUTRALITY laws of the last four years have had two chief purposes. The first is to prevent incidents which would stir emotions and lead to unnecessary controversies. The second is to prevent the growth of an economic stake in a foreign war, more particularly an economic stake in the victory of one side.

The new neutrality bill goes very far toward effecting the first purpose—farther than the neutrality acts of 1935, 1936, and 1937. It prohibits American ships from carrying either passengers or materials of any kind to any belligerent state (except Canada). It authorizes the President to keep American ships and citizens entirely out of combat zones. It requires that the full title to all goods shipped to belligerent nations shall pass to the purchaser before the goods leave our ports. It prohibts American citizens from traveling on the ships of belligerents, except according to rules set forth by the President.

These Provisions Can Be Improved

IN DETAIL, these provisions probably can be improved. For example, even after the Americans who now want to get home have been evacuated, there will be American citizens whose urgent business requires them to travel to and from belligerent nations. Under the new bill they apparently would be required to travel on the vessels of belligerents or other neutrals. Why shouldn't American passenger service be provided for their convenience? One ship a week probably would be enough. Even after they reverted to unrestricted submarine warfare in World War I, the Germans offered to assure safety from submarine attack to a limited number of American passenger ships sent to prescribed ports.

The new bill, nevertheless, attempts to eliminate the chief controversies with belligerent nations in which we engaged in World War I. It would eliminate the controversy with the Allies over contraband and blockade—a controversy which became serious at one time despite the conscious efforts of our pro-Ally State Department to play it down. It would eliminate the far graver controversy over the submarine, which was the occasion, if not the cause for our entry into war.

Those sections of the new bill amount to a complete repudiation of the policies of Woodrow Wilson with regard to the Allied blockade and to the submarine. They go even further than William Jennings Bryan proposed to go.

Toward effecting the second major purpose—preventing the growth of an economic stake in the war—the new neutrality bill is unsatisfactory. It contains only one safeguard, carried over from the earlier neutrality laws. That is the prohibition of loans to belligerent nations or their agents.

Temptation Exists To Extend Credits

THIS IS a weak safeguard because the Allies have cash purchasing power sufficient to give us a vigorous war boom. The experience of World War I indicates that once a war boom is brought about by cash purchases, the pressure to keep it going by extending credits becomes extremely difficult to resist.

There was no legislation against loans to belligerents in 1914. But in August, 1914, the State Department, with the approval of President Wilson, announced that "in the judgment of this Government loans by American bankers to any foreign nation which is at war are inconsistent with the true spirit of neutrality."

Within a year the Wilson Administration was trying to find a way around this solemn and sensible announcement. Why? Because a war boom had grown up. It was asserted that if we didn't permit the Allies to float loans in this country they would have to stop their purchases.

William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, wrote to President Wilson:

"To maintain our prosperity, we must finance it. Otherwise it may stop and that would be disastrous."

Robert Lansing, Secretary of State, wrote to the President:

"We are face to face with what appears to be a critical economic situation which can only be relieved apparently by the investment of American capital in foreign lands . . ."

Everybody Will Want War Boom to Continue

WILSON CAVED IN. A law is not quite so easily repealed as is a State Department announcement. But if we allow a great war export trade to grow up we can be sure that, unless the war comes to an end soon, all the arguments and pressures mustered to overwhelm Wilson will be mustered to overwhelm Congress.

Neither the Administration supporters nor the defenders of the arms embargo are dealing realistically with this vitally important aspect of neutrality. If the embargo were lifted, arms, ammunition and implements of war probably would make up only from 20 to 30 per cent of our war export trade. If a war boom is allowed to arise, wheat farmers, truck makers, munition makers, and, in fact, almost everybody will want to keep it going because everybody is for prosperity (even when it is the kind of prosperity which makes the country poor by draining away its natural resources).

Whether we export airplanes (which are classed as implements of war) or trucks (which are not so classed) is not important. But whether we let ourselves come to rely economically on a war trade is important. And that can be prevented only by setting up now a system of controlling exports.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

A Call To Reason

THE LESSON of Poland is that modern war is not primarily a war between men but between machines. It is won or lost according to the superiority of machine power. Public morale and personal heroism play little role. The Poles were incredibly brave. The continued defense of Warsaw belongs to one of the Homeric, blindly heroic acts of history. It is heart-breakingly courageous—this spectacle of a lost city in which all the inhabitants have become a suicide squad, when the government has fled the country and the army is defeated.

But brave men and women cannot hold out against the great heartless, bloodless robots of modern war.

The Nazis have known this. For six years, in preparation for this gigantic struggle, they have concentered the science, organization, finances and regimented work of a totalitarian nation upon the manufacture of machines for war. For this they bartered cameras and aspirin throughout the world in exchange for metals. For this they prolonged the hours of labor to the maximum that a worker could stand in order to create the machines with which mere men could not argue.

Inferior Air Force Good As Nothing

THE SECOND lesson of Poland is that if the air power of one of the combatants is seriously inferior, then it is as good as nothing. The Poles had an air force but the Nazis put it out of commission in the first hours of the war. The answer to the question of why the British did not send planes to Poland, if only for the moral effect, is that Polish airdromes were destroyed in the first attacks, and such airplanes as were not destroyed could neither land nor rise from the ground.

The strategy of the war is to destroy the machine power of the opponents, and the military objectives will be, above all, industries capable of replacing the machines destroyed. Machines and the materials to make the machines, and men capable of running the machines are what will decide the outcome of this war; not the blood and bones of millions of men hurled to slaughter.

This is the essential and crucial issue of the embargo. It is not whether England and France can draw upon the man power of this country. It is not whether we shall "send our sons to be slaughtered." It is whether the Allies, and particularly England, can purchase machine power in this country.

Now, if nations small in area and low in resources, which are primarily commercial and which depend for their existence on trade—are going to be shut out of normal markets at the moment when those markets are absolutely vital to them, such nations will either disappear or the most ruthless imperialism will have to be revived and colonies subjugated and absolutely owned. Otherwise it will not be possible for seagoing countries small in area and poor in natural resources, like Great Britain, to exist, except on the terms of great land powers which have all resources inside their borders. This concept of "neutrality" will simply mean the end in the world of freedom and good-neighborliness. For if freedom to buy is cut off from such nations in moments of most vital emergency, why cultivate good relations, why advocate the free exchange of products, why prefer a commonwealth to an empire?

U. S. Has Preached Against Imperialism

THE UNITED STATES, a great land power and a great sea power, has for years preached against monopolistic imperialism, advocated disarmament, asserted the rights of small nations and stood for the open door in China and elsewhere. But if the concepts of the open door and reciprocal trade are abandoned the moment both are matters of life and death to a nation, then the United States is a traitor to its own principles and the basic idea of economic freedom is lost.

This is what makes the stand of some Republicans on the embargo so intellectually incomprehensible to this column. Here is my friend Senator Vandenberg, who has preached economic freedom for years, with the warm support of this column, and who now wishes to strangle it as a basic policy at the most crucial possible moment.

Economic freedom, Senator, means freedom of the seas for nations that practice the free exchange of goods.

If it does not mean that, then it is a lot of political claptrap, and the extreme New Dealers like Jerome Frank, who believe the future world belongs to vast, continental, self-sufficient, highly regimented and controlled states, are absolutely right.

If it does not mean that, then the Nazis are right in their whole concept of economic organization and we propose to justify them and assist them to win this war.

Gen. Goering could announce confidently that he did not need the resources and machine power of the United States because the Nazi state has developed in the most meticulous detail the other way of life. Its resources—its "life room"—are within its own borders, and to increase them is its justification for extending those borders—by politics, terror, intimidation, revolution and, finally, war. The embargo is a justification of their policy.

Issue Involves Honor Of A Free People

AND THIS IS the real issue of the debate! It is whether nations that trust in freedom and have built their philosophies of life and their democratic systems on the concept of free intercourse between friendly nations are going to have the advantages of that policy or whether they are going to be penalized for it.

Since the days of Athens that policy has brought with it culture, prosperity and tolerance between races and between nations. If it goes, the very concept of freedom goes, too. And with it goes the breath of the spirit of the United States of America.

This is the issue before the United States Congress, and it is an issue involving the honor of a people who were born free and believe in the right to life and liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

These words will either be revived in this world tomorrow with new meaning, with a new, great, liberating and even revolutionary force or we shall one day sit interned upon this continent and find it is another little island—and no happy breed of men but a grim and regimented one.

Senator Vandenberg, some of us who have talked about freedom have meant what we said.

FSCC Acts to Aid Apple Exporters Robbed by War

The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, acting on reports that the European war had robbed United States apple producers of a large foreign market, undertook yesterday to take a large part of the exportable surplus out of regular domestic trade channels.

At conferences with Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington; Representative Hill (Democrat), Washington, and Irven King, master of the Washington State Grange, Milo Perkins, corporation chief, outlined a series of investigations that would pave the way for a large purchase program.

Schwellenbach said after the meeting that Perkins had pledged the resources of his organization to meeting the crisis, which, unless averted, would financially ruin many apple growers.

The Artist

("Hitler said he was not a politician or war lord, but an artist. He said he wished to end his days as an artist."—From Sir Nevile Henderson's papers.)

Ach Gott! How it disturbs me
To look around and see
How widely and completely
Folks misinterpret me.
They think I am a war lord
Whose passions boil and seethe
And don't perceive quite clearly
The artist underneath!

II

I loathe the sounds of carnage,
I am the peaceful type
Who loves an attic study,
His paint tubes and a pipe;
Some think I am ambitious—
This strikes me as so quaint—
They do not sense I'm yearning
To don my smock, and paint.

III

Some leaders think of power,
The British think of gold,
The French they think of conquest—
Such passions leave me cold.
For I am quite artistic—
I crave the twilight's hush
In sylvan fields where painters
Can do things with a brush.

IV

How can some leaders bellow
Of force and war and hate?
Give me the thrush at eve, boys,
And flower'd garden gate!
Mid autumn's gorgeous colors
How can men rage and fight?
Give me the peaceful music
Of nightingales at night!

V

A politician? Phooey!
Of such things I'm not proud;
I want to be a painter
Like Rembrandt and that crowd;
When in some mike I'm yelling
My heart's not really there . . .
I yearn to be out painting . . .
Corot was only fair!

VI

When bombing planes are roaring,
I'm very sick at heart;
I moon around my garret
And murmur, "It is art?"
I loathe the will to conquer,
And bloodshed makes me faint;
I hate the lust for power . . .
But, boy, how I can paint!

You Never Can Tell

Londoners mistook a flock of ducks for bombers and sounded the alarm the other day. Laugh if you must, but that's better than mistaking a fleet of bombers for a flock of ducks.

Both sides in the European war will do things on the crash-and-harry plan.

Mayors, Governors and other officials, who have been syphoning all the dough they could get from the Government Treasury for seven years, are now shouting from the housetops for the Government to build a big Army and Navy, come what may.

'Washington Has Me Stumped,' Says Traveled Girl Who Is as Lonely Now as When She First Came

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 26 years old, coming to you with a very serious problem. I am somewhat of a stranger in Washington, having come here only five months ago, not knowing a soul when I came. I had no job then, no prospects of one and no pull. But that is over now, as I am located in a position. But there is another difficulty that I have been unable to solve.

I am desperately lonely and although I have lived in strange cities before, Washington has me stumped. My circumstances, perhaps, are not those of the usual Government worker. I am a graduate of a university and have taken post-graduate work. Because of my father's work and a job I had after college, I have traveled a great deal. I have lived in Buenos Aires and in Rio and in different cities in the United States.

I am interested in music, books, good conversation, etc., but being a complete stranger to Washington, I haven't the least idea where to go to get these things. I have a room in an apartment now and I get up in the mornings, go to work, come home at 4:30 p. m., read and go to bed. If it weren't for office associations I wouldn't speak to a soul all day, because the only time I see my landlady is when I pay the rent.

If I could find a place of residence where I could really live—not just "stay"—I know it would make all the difference in the world. With your knowledge of Washington, could you possibly suggest such a place? I do hope you can help me. Very sincerely,

M. S.

Better Adjustment Can Be Made

DEAR M. S.: For a seasoned traveler, you seem to be showing a strange lack of resourcefulness in the matter of making a pleasant adjustment to life in Washington. Surely you know that home ties, or their equivalent, cannot be established overnight, or even in five months, by the person who comes without introductions to a new environment. I think your wall of defeat in this instance is definitely premature and largely without warrant. It is hardly to be expected that you would have accomplished any more than you already have, in the short time you have been here.

In my opinion, you are just about ready to give serious attention to the business of finding a desirable home. The usual approach—and one more often successful than you may suppose—is via the classified advertising columns of the Sunday newspapers, either through soliciting what you want, or by responding to notices published there. Also, the Y. W. C. A. maintains a room registry service, which helps out-of-town girls solve the problem of where to live.

Finding a satisfactory home in a new community is a job in itself—requiring an organized approach and tireless effort until the goal is reached. Those who succeed in pleasing themselves must possess sufficient initiative to move time and again, (if necessary), until the quest is happily ended. I have known professional women who blithely kept on moving every few months, for a year or two years, before finally overtaking the situation that met their requirements.

In the meantime, while looking for a pleasant place to live, you could do more than you have been doing toward making congenial social contacts. With your educational background, I should think you would be eligible for membership in the American Association of University Women, which has a clubhouse at 1634 I street northwest. You might also become a member of the women's City Club and the Business and Professional Women's Club. (Data on these organizations may be obtained from Miss Jessie Arndt, The Post's club editor). In any of these clubs you will meet women whose intellectual interests are comparable to yours, and some one of them might be in a position to lead you by the hand to the home you are seeking.

M. H.

What to Write On Photographs?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you please suggest something appropriate to write on a photograph for a niece and for a very good (woman) friend? Many thanks.

R. P.

An Open Message Should Be Conventional

DEAR R. P.: A suitable inscription on a photograph for a niece would be, "With love from Unkle Jake," (or "Aunt Susan," as the case may be). Or, if you wish to make the picture forever and ever hers, you might write, "For Sally, with love from Uncle Jake."

What to write on a photograph given to a close woman friend depends on whether the giver is a man or woman. If the giver is a man, the less said the better, I should think. The photograph alone would be sufficient, although if an inscription is expected, it might read, "Faithfully yours, Jonathan." Or, "Your devoted friend, John Brownstone."

If the photograph is given by one woman to another, the message—which many disinterested eyes will eventually read—should be restrained, rather than effusive. The conventional phrase is, "With love," followed by baptismal name or full name. Alternatives are, "Affectionately," or, "Cordially yours." In my opinion, any inscription is redundant on a photograph given to a friend. The fact that you are giving your picture implies recognition of special mutual regard.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Simple, Classic Footwear Needed as Foil For Elaborate New Dress Silhouettes

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

Because bustles, flares and intricate drapery are basic for the new silhouettes, shoes should be feminine too, but more dignified and quiet. It always has been garish to assemble a little of this, that and the other into one new ensemble and this rather sentimental season is no exception if harmonious costuming is to be achieved.

Here is such a costume, with the rich fox jacket and gathered jersey frock accenting the wasp waist and rounded contour of hips. Any additional detailing of the patrician shoes (shown on the model and in the insert above) would detract from a feeling of taste and symmetry. These suede stepins are simply designed with a timeless French heel, a walled last and neatly tailored bow. Autumnal colors featuring Schiaparelli's timely "storm" grays, greens and purply browns make this a new and exciting shoe despite its classic lines.

The famous maker of these pumps, in Washington for the day, brings back, along with his revival of the "Lady's" shoe for feminine frocks, the old-fashioned laced oxfords with shades of colonial inspiration peeping through. His back laced stepin for afternoon gives a quaint corseletted look to feet while for evening he revives old-fashioned fabrics like bengaline and moire. For ultra-moderns, this pioneer among boot craftsmen has evolved a real fairy tale slipper of glass fiber mesh with a glass heel for streamlined Cinderellas.

Ipswich Clam Chowder, Says John A. Remon

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

"Fish are up my alley. I especially like clam chowder, cold-boiled lobster and steamed Ipswich clams. The clams must be IPSWICH. I don't want my clam chowder ruined with a lot of tomatoes and celery."

Mr. Remon

John A. Remon, vice president, in charge of operations, Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., was talking of his food preferences which show the influence of his native State, Massachusetts.

Here was another businessman who did not consult a recipe book to tell how he like his food prepared. Mr. Remon knew what he wanted in the chowder—what he wanted left out. No tomatoes! No celery! No cream—just milk! And there must be chowder crackers—hard as nails! With these general directions for a chowder, Mr. Remon continued with a definite recipe which is as follows:

Clam Chowder

Fry diced salt pork in a frying pan with 3 sliced onions and cook for about 5 minutes, until brown. Add 2 cups sliced potatoes, 1 teaspoon salt, some pepper, and 1 pint Ipswich clams which have been washed, and the hard parts chopped fine. Cook until the potatoes are soft. Melt 2 tablespoons fat, add 2 tablespoons flour, and when smooth add 2 cups scalded milk. Stir until the sauce boils and then add to the first mixture. Bring to boiling point and serve hot. Just before serving add chowder crackers.

Mr. Remon gave some tips on lobsters, too. He says a lobster should be boiled alive for 20 minutes. Do it in the morning. Then take the lobster meat out of the shells, put in a dish, not near ice, as that spoils the flavor. He further admonished that one should never put any fish near ice, for it will lose flavor.

Mr. Remon knows not only about fish, but about successfully operating a busy telephone company, and about the ways of boats. Since he was a small boy in Salem, Mass., he has been interested in sailing. His father was a builder of boats. The success of the President's Cup Regatta is due largely to the efforts of Mr. Remon. He was the first chairman of the committee for this event, in 1933, and has been chairman ever since.

Although an enthusiast of boat races, he has not owned a boat for a number of years. However, because of his popularity he is sure of a ride whenever he wants one. Board meetings seem to be a specialty of his, too. He is president of the American Boat Association; on board of directors, American Security & Trust Co.; on board of trustees, Worcester Polytechnic Institute—his alma mater; Executive Committee, Washington's Community Chest; vice president, Metropolitan Police Boys' Club.

Improve Your Personality

POOR MARY! She says she likes to go off alone with a book—but nobody's fooled. She wants good times as much as anyone but she's a bad case of "ingrown personality"—has built an invisible wall between herself and other people.

And to think at the root of it all are traits that need only to be turned outward to be winning.

The shyness that makes her so stiff and standoffish—how easily she could transform it into a gentle charm. She has only to remember that often people are as much afraid of her as she is of them—they'd welcome a gracious smile, a friendly word from her.

And the books from behind which she has peeked timidly at the world—why in her bookishness Mary has a gold mine. Dozens of amusing anecdotes about celebrities must be stored in her brain. If she'd only tell a few she'd have a reputation as good company.

But she'd probably spoil her stories with her mumbled tones, self-conscious giggle. No, with a little attention to her voice, her laugh, she'll be a delight to listen to.

Men In Their Lives

MRS. SPRINK—You know I was in the dentist's chair all morning——

MRS. FLITTER—Who's your dentist?

MRS. SPRINK—Dr. Gougem.

MRS. BEETLE—Does he hurt you?

MRS. SPRINK—We-ll a little.

MRS. BEETLE—Say, you ought to try Dr. Drill. Honestly, you don't know he's working on your teeth.

MRS. FLITTER—Well, I guess everybody admits that Dr. Pullem is really the outstanding dentist in this town. I wouldn't think of letting anybody else touch my teeth.

MRS. PINEY—Oh, but Dr. Scraper has most of the really high-class trade. He's really a wonderful man. He did all of my bridgework.

MRS. SPRINK—Well, nobody can touch Dr. Gougem's bridgework.

MRS. BEETLE—Dr. Drill is simply marvelous. People have to wait hours to get into him.

MRS. SPRINK—That's just the way with my surgeon, Dr. Kutter. There are simply mobs in his office.

MRS. BEETLE—Oh, say, there's only one real surgeon in this town—Dr. Butcher.

MRS. PINEY—I don't think he can touch Dr. Hack. Do any of you know Dr. Hack? He has the most marvelous personality.

MRS. FLITTER—Well, as far as looks goes, my eye, ear, nose and throat man, Dr. Tinker, has everybody beat. All the women are simply insane over him. Besides that, everybody says he's a scientific marvel.

MRS. BEETLE—Well, I'd put Dr. Butcher up against any doctor in the United States. I met a woman in the beauty shop yesterday who said he had literally brought her back from the grave.

MRS. FLITTER—Say, who cuts your hair?

MRS. BEETLE—Jacques, at the Magic Mirror. He's really the most remarkable barber——

MRS. SPRINK—Oh, say, you ought to try Boris, at Swank's, once. He's really not a barber—he's a sculptor.

MRS. BROWN—Say, there's a Mr. Brown at Sailem's that I tell you can cut your hair better than anybody in town. He really understands your personality.

MRS. PINEY—That's the way with Andre, at Van Gilt's. Now he says it's not the shape of your head in cutting hair that matters so much as your inner ego—you know, the real you.

MRS. SPRINK—Well, I wouldn't let anybody but Boris touch my head.

MRS. FLITTER—Well, this Mr. Brown is a very unusual man. He's really very cultured.

MRS. BEETLE—So is Jacques. He's had a very interesting life. He intended to be an artist.

MRS. SPRINK—Say, what time is it?

MRS. BEETLE—Four ten, exactly! Oh, I've got to go. John's going to pick me up, and he's always furious if I'm a minute late. Though, of course, he always keeps me waiting hours.

MRS. SPRINK—George is exactly that way. And he always has a fit if I'm not home before he is.

MRS. FLITTER—If dinner's a minute late Ted's perfectly furious.

MRS. PINEY—Arthur never will tell when he's coming home. And with a telephone right at his elbow I think he could at least call up.

MRS. BEETLE—They're all that way. They simply won't call.

MRS. FLITTER—They never think of the other fellow.

Diet Can Provide More Than Losing Weight if So Wanted

MAYBE YOUR single idea in dieting is to get slim. If so, it's old-fashioned! You should expect a great deal more of a diet. It can make you feel better and look years younger. But you may have some other notions about reducing which keep you from getting the most out of your program.

First and foremost is the one about eating something to lose weight. What you eat does not make you thin. What you do not eat does that. When you go on a diet you take fewer calories than you need. You don't get along with fewer, but the deficit in your diet forces you to draw on your fat, which is nothing more than stored calories. Reducing is as simple as that! The calories you need, but do not eat, are the ones that make you lose.

Must Keep Well

But what you eat must keep you well. You have no effective reserve of vitamins, minerals and protein, and these must be supplied in the reducing menus. If they are not, your vitality will fizzle out and your disposition will be something to alienate your friends.

Anyone with 50 pounds or so to lose—like our typical reducer—will be on a diet for several months. In that case you should make doubly sure that the protective elements are included in adequate amounts in the daily menus. True, some Vitamin A and Vitamin D are stored in the body, but the reserve should not be lessened. It is a very wise plan for the reducer to supplement the low-calorie menus with one Vitamin A, B, D capsule daily.

Those are the vitamins most apt to be needed. The Vitamin A intake is decreased on the diet because of the restriction in butter and cream. The use of smaller amounts of bread and cereals cuts down on the Vitamin B intake. This is the time of year when we do not get sufficient Vitamin D from the sun.

Minerals Required

An adequate intake of the minerals is assured by the inclusion of fresh fruits and vegetables, skim milk or buttermilk, eggs and cheese.

Regardless of whether you are reducing, one-tenth of your normal number of calories should be taken in the protein foods which keep up your strength and take care of the body's repair work. Protein will be provided in sufficient amounts if you have daily one liberal serving, or two smaller servings, of lean meat, one egg and two glasses of skim milk or buttermilk, or one glass of the milk plus a serving of cheese.

One other thing that is very important in the reducer's diet is a sufficient quantitiy of bulk. Because of the decrease in the quantity of food, imperfect elimination often results. This can be overcome by using some bulk-supplying material such as psyllum seed, agar, etc., which do not contain calories.

A balanced menu containing from 1,000 to 1,200 calories, supplemented by one Vitamin A, B, D capsule, plus some additional source of bulk, makes a perfect diet by which anyone can reduce and improve the health.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New Toast of Manhattan Is Ann Miller, Tap Dancing Texan, of 'Scandals' Show.

New York, Sept. 26.

NO THEATRICAL season here begins without one cutie or another becoming the traditional toast of the town. This world-shaking event happened with the very first girly show of our fall, which was Mr. George White's "Scandals." And, as we might have expected, Texas did it again.

ALICE HUGHES

The young lady is named Ann Miller, who was born in the village of Chireno, Lone Star State, but was soon taken to the thrivng city of Houston. Now, at the advanced age of 19, Ann is one of the wildest tap-dancers extant, and practically stopped the show on opening night—an event which left her limp and startled. For up to now the Miller child has made no striking impression on the citizens at large. Today she is the best thing in her line to hit Broadway since Eleanor Powell, and that is saying a very great deal indeed.

She worked in pictures for a couple of years, making little more than eating money. Then she came to Broadway, where her best part was the ballet-crazy Essie in the comedy, "You Can't Take It With You." During her picture career, she basked briefly in the light shed by a star. Do you remember a cute girl who did a tap routine with Ginger Rogers in "Stage Door?" Well, that was Annie Miller!

Now, in her very first revue in New York she clicks resoundingly. And though her mother doesn't particularly like it, Ann tells reporters that she had rickets as a baby! When you see her cavorting in "Scandals," you'll find that a bit hard to believe. But it's true, says Annie. "Maybe I've had more than my share of luck," says the little Texan who came up the hard way. "But just the same it does seem that, the Lord has watched over me, doesn't it?" Whatever the devious cause, Ann Miller is the first big stage hit of 1939-40. And deserves it.

STYLE TIPS from designer Florence Gainor: She says that the war as a style influence is in very bad taste, so don't go in for military touches in your costumes. "Epaulets and capes are good fashion in peace time," she avers.

Gen. Trujillo in City For His Second Visit

Senora de Pastoriza to Give Luncheon For Wife of Dominican President on Saturday at the Mayflower Hotel

By Hope Ridings Miller.

The Post Society Editor.

IN TOWN FOR A SECOND VISIT is the former President of the Dominican Republic, Gen. Rafael Trujillo, who has joined his wife and children at the Dominican Legation and expects to be here until some time next week.

Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister, has issued invitations for a luncheon on Saturday in honor of Senora de Trujillo. About 50 women will be entertained at the fete, which will take place at the Mayflower Hotel.

Gen. Trujillo, who arrived in this country aboard his palatial 228-foot yacht, Ramfis, on September 17, was met by the Dominican Minister, Andres Pastoriza, and has been with him in New York since then. Senora de Trujillo and their two children, 10-year-old Ramfis, and a 3-month-old daughter, who was born in Paris, came in a few days earlier on the Ile de France and arrived in Washington several days ago.

Now anchored off the Navy Yard dock is the general's yacht, which, over the week-end, was the scene of a sailing party enjoyed by Senora de Trujillo and members of the Legation staff and their wives. Gen. Trujillo and the Dominican Minister arrived in Washington Monday evening.

The date for the former Dominican President's departure is not definitely set, but the latter part of next week he and Senora de Trujillo will leave by train for Miami, sending ahead their yacht, which will carry them from Florida to Santo Domingo.

Following a July visit in this country the general went abroad and joined his wife and children in Paris, where they spent several weeks.

CHANGING THE SUBJECT: As pleasant a time as I've had lately was yesterday at a very small luncheon given by Mrs. Donald Richberg at her new home, Hickory Hill, in Spring Valley. It wasn't a party; just one of those informal get-togethers that are all too rare in the Washington whirl.

Luncheon was served in the shade of an apple tree on the terrace, and later, guests strolled into the house, and at their own request made a tour of the spacious rooms where pastel-tinted walls and rose-beige carpets blend into a background for superbly tasteful furnishings.

The Richbergs recently returned from Rehoboth Beach, where they spent the summer. Their daughter, Eloise, will continue her studies at Cathedral School this year.

AMONG GUESTS yesterday were Mrs. Edgar Goodrich, another of the Washington colonists at Rehoboth Beach the past season; Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, who with her husband and daughter, Charmian, have just returned from a Southern vacation that included a long trip by plane and a visit to Florida and New Orleans.

A few hours earlier I had a long talk with Mrs. Oscar Rand over toast and coffee at the Wardman Park Hotel, where she and Maj. Rand are staying temporarily. Recently returned from Manila, where he completed a two-year tour of duty, they have been renewing acquaintances here. They will be at the Wardman Park until October 15, moving then to 4514 Connecticut avenue, where they have taken an apartment for the season.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mrs. Paul V. McNutt is expected to arrive in Washington today from Indianapolis to join Mr. McNutt in their apartment at the Shoreham . . . Mr. and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle will entertain at a buffet supper this evening in honor of the newly appointed Governor of Alaska and Mrs. Ernest Gruening.

Hebe Reynolds Will Be Wed to Capt. Milburn

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Charles R. Reynolds have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Hebe Reynolds, to Capt. Conn Lewis Milburn, jr., U. S. A. The ceremony will be performed at 4:30 p. m. Saturday, October 14, in Walter Reed Memorial Chapel and will be followed by a reception at the Carlton.

Maj. Gen. Reynolds and Mrs. Reynolds and their family have returned to Washington after a summer in the North and are at 2310 Connecticut avenue.

Miss Reynolds, whose engagement to Capt. Milburn was announced several months ago, is a graduate of the Spence School in New York. She was presented to Capital society several seasons ago.

Dr. W. B. Mullins Weds Miss Wills

The marriage of Miss Catherine Wilhelmina Wills, daughter of Mrs. William H. Wills and the late Mr. Wills, of Westernport, Md., and Dr. William Burton Mullins took place Friday, September 22, in Prince Frederick, Md.

Only attendants were State Senator and Mrs. J. Wilmer Johnson. The Rev. H. Kerney Jones, rector of Christ Church, officiated. Dr. Mullins is the son of Mrs. J. I. Gaston, of Shawnee, Okla.

Mrs. James Steele Visiting Ladds Here

Mrs. James Irvin Steele is the guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Gardner Ladd, at their home in Wesley Heights.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Balcom Will Be Attractive Additions to Washington Scene

TWO VERY attractive additions to the Capital social scene this winter will be Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Balcom. They are at the Shoreham for the time being while looking around for a house.

Mrs. Balcom is the former Millicent Rogers, and was married at one time to Count von Salm and later to Arturo Ramos. Famous for her chic, hers is a familiar face to readers of smart fashion magazines. For the last few years she has been living in the Austrian Tyrol, but sold her chalet there when the atmosphere began to get disagreeable for foreigners. Mrs. Balcom is a cousin of Robert Coe, of the State Department, and has visited him here several times.

THESE ARE busy days, as well as anxious ones, for Washington embassies, and none is more of a seething hive of activity than the British. There's so much to be done that several Englishmen who live in this country have volunteered their services and have been put to work in the chancery.

William Elmslie is one of them, having flown from Colorado Springs, where he was vacationing, to offer himself for duty. Mr. Elmslie, who was married to a sister of Joseph Pulitzer, came to Washington a year or so ago and last winter occupied Mrs. J. Borden Harriman's home on Foxhall road.

THE WAR, which has sent scurrying back to Washington many members of society, is keeping other popular hostesses from returning here. Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, is making no immediate plans to return to this country from her chateau in Belgium, where she went early last summer to spend the warm months. The countess is now doing war work.

Her son, Charles, has been mobilized. He left Washington a year or so ago to do his military service. Count van der Burch, son-in-law of the ambassador, also has been mobilized. His attractive wife spent several months here last winter as the guest of her parents at the embassy on Massachusetts avenue.

Mrs. Victor Mallet, wife of the Counselor of the British Embassy, has postponed her return from England for a while. She went aboard last summer for a vacation and to get her children settled in school. Mr. Mallet has been named Minister to Cuba, but does not plan to assume his new duties until around the first of the year.

There've been reports that Mrs. Edward Reed, wife of the counselor of our embassy in Rome, might be returning to Washington, her former home. But once an American arrives here, it's practically impossible for them to get back to Europe, as Mrs. Thomas Kincaid will tell you. Her husband is attached to our embassy in Rome, but she is encountering such difficulty in getting a passport from the State Department to join him that at latest reports she was planning to remain here.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY, and members of the Polish Embassy staff, are wondering about the fate of the former Minister of Poland here and Mme. Sokolowski. They were not mentioned in a recent dispatch on prominent refugees, many of them diplomats. Mme. Sokolowski left here several days ago to take a post in the foreign office, and his American-born wife had a house in the country this summer near Warsaw.

Friends of Winant Johnston, of Washington, say they haven't heard anything about his whereabouts in the last few weeks. He sailed last summer to open a museum in Dinard for Mrs. Paul Bartlett, widow of the sculptor.

IF IT WERE not for a scattering of pre-wedding parties, Washington would indeed be as dead as the proverbial doornail. Firends of Florence Harris and Donald Downs are getting together and planning a number of events for the couple, who will be married October 17. Mrs. Carlton Holdrege will give a cocktail party for them tomorrow at her apartment on Decatur place, and on Saturday, October 7, Mrs. Joseph Cecil will be hostess at a dinner in their honor. The following Saturday, October 14, Will Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, Fred Roy and Commander and Mrs. Jerauld Wright will entertain at a dinner, also at Chevy Chase. All except Mrs. Exnicios and Commander Wright are members of the wedding party.

Diana Rowland, who will be maid of honor, will give a party for Miss Harris and Mr. Downs on Sunday, October 15, and Mrs. Clifton Phillips, a bridesmaid, is also planning something. Mrs. Phillips has come from Philadelphia to spend a few days with her aunt, Mrs. Sidney Cloman. The latter will move the first of the month to an apartment at 2310 Connecticut avenue, having leased her home on Kalorama road to the Bolivian Minister.

Notes of Society

Mrs. Roosevelt, who returned to Washington yesterday from a Southern lecture tour, will hold a press conference at 11 o'clock this morning at the White House.

Associate Justice George Sutherland, of the Supreme Court, and Mrs. Sutherland have left Stockbridge, Mass., for their home in Washington.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg has been joined at the Wardman Park Hotel by his son, Arthur Vandenberg, jr., who arrived yesterday from Grand Rapids.

Mrs. Elonzo Tyner, of the Shoreham, is spending a few days in New York, where she is at the St. Regis.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Escavaille, jr., and their son, W. S. Escavaille, are in their new apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Wilson, of Washington, are spending a brief time at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York.

Robert E. Freer, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, and Mrs. Freer are vacationing at the Greenbrier in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Mrs. Freer was a luncheon guest earlier in the week at a party given by Mrs. McKay Van Vleet, of Nashville.

Others from Washington at the Greenbrier include Mr and Mrs. James A. Horton, Dr. and Mrs. F. J. Cullen, Mr. and Mrs. John Albright, J. Harold Stehman and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Wadell.

Capt. and Mrs. William A. Hayward, of Loda, Ill., are at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Francis Mallon, of Barbados, British West Indies, is at the Wardman Park Hotel with her family. Others staying there are Mr. and Mrs. William Hattie, of Honolulu, who arrived recently from New York.

Mrs. Alex Dittler, of Atlanta, Ga., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Behrend, at the Westchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Friedlander, of Fairfax, Va., are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son last Saturday at Columbia Hospital.

Congressional Set's Newest Member Has Scottish Burr

But Four Years Here Have Overlaid It With Southern Drawl

Just a touch of a Scottish burr identifies Mrs. Estes Kefauver, wife of the new Representative from Tennessee, as a native of the Land of the Heather. Her four years in Chattanooga, however, have added an engaging Southern drawl to that burr.

Although she has only visited Washington briefly in the past, Mrs. Kefauver is looking forward to her stay here with enthusiasm. She and the Representative are at the Mayflower Hotel.

The daughter of Sir Stephen Pigott and Lady Pigott was born and reared in Scotland. The family home is in Glasgow. Sir Stephen is director of the John Brown Co., shipyard at Clydebank. It was there that the liner Queen Mary and her sister ship, the Queen Elizabeth were constructed. Although Mrs. Kefauver has not visited her family since last year, she naturaly feels very keenly about the war.

Mrs. Kefauver has gained recognition as a portrait artist, "just amateur of course," she hastens to add. She studied in a number of schools in Paris and has had several exhibits in Chattanooga. Asked whether she had taken to the easel since her arrival she said no and added, "I haven't had a chance to catch my breath as yet." To date she confesses never to have gotten her husband to sit still long enough for a portrait.

Blue green eyes, wavy chestnut hair, a flair for artistic, rather than chic, clothes and a penchant for pearls go to make up a delightful addition to the Congressional set.

Danish Minister Rejoins His Wife After Chicago Trip

The Danish Minister, Henrik de Kauffmann, has joined Mme. de Kauffmann at the Fairfax after a brief trip to Chicago. They will remain at the Fairfax until the legation at 2343 Massachusetts avenue is in readiness for them. This was the former Austrian legation.

With the Kauffmanns are their two daughters, Tilda, 12, and Lisa, 9, who have been spending the summer with their grandparents, Rear Admiral and Mrs. William D. MacDougall, in New England.

Admiral and Mrs. MacDougall are expected to return to their apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue this week.

Ruth Hardesty Becomes Bride

Immediately after their marriage on Monday evening at St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church in Prince Frederick, Md., Mr. and Mrs. Ray Claude Munden left by boat for a trip to Florida.

The bride, the former Miss Ruth Eleanor Hardesty, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Hardesty, of Prince Frederick, and Mr. Munden is the son of Mrs. Dolly Mae Munden, of Tampa, Fla. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. Kearney Jones. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white transparent velvet with a tulle veil fastened with a coronet of pearls, and she carried a bouquet of white Killarney roses and lilies of the valley.

Her sister, Miss Mildred Estelle Hardesty, served as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Alien Williams, Blanche Bowen, Jeannette Trott and Gladys Cordell. The maid of honor wore a gown of gold colored crepe and carried bronze chrysanthemums, while the other attendants wore alternating shades of blue and ruby rose and carried yellow and white chrysanthemums.

William Munden was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Charles Hardesty, the bride's brother; Franklin Boyd, Donald Gibson and Paul Moffett.

Chief Justice, Wife Return

After a summer spent leisurely motoring through New England—a custom they established some years ago—the Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes returned to Washington on Monday.

Several days after the adjournment of the Supreme Court the Chief Justice and his wife left for their usual jaunt. They traveled through the Berkshire hills and mountains farther north.

Maj. Johnson and Wife Entertained

Maj. and Mrs. Bayard Johnson, of Maxwell Field, Ala., were honor guests for whom Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo L. Snow entertained last evening in the Blue Room of the Shoreham.

Major and Mrs. Johnson are in Washington for a visit with Mrs. Johnson's sister, Mrs. Richard S. Boutelle and Mr. Buotelle, who is with the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Also in the company last evening were Maj. and Mrs. Leland W. Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Boutelle.

Comdr. Gardner And Wife Hosts At Navy Party

Guests Received From 5 to 7 in Right Lounge At Country Club

By Elizabeth Henney

At this date in the Washington season, events are still being classified as firsts, and yesterday's dusk to dark party, given by Commander and Mrs. Matthias B. Gardner at the Army and Navy Country Club, comes under the head of one of the largest and finest Navy get-togethers this fall.

From 5 to 7 in the afternoon, Commander and Mrs. Gardner received their guests in the right lounge of the clubhouse. Mrs. Gardner, gowned in a viking blue floor length tea gown, fashioned with a fingertip jacket of the same material, wore a triple strand of large square pearls and matching earrings.

Most of Guests From Air Service

Most of the guests were from the Naval Air Service stationed in and around Washington. Heading the list of guests was Rear Admiral and Mrs. John H. Towers, the latter gowned in a most effective suit of lipstick red velvet, with a hat and snood to match. Admiral Towers, who has recently come here for duty, is the chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics.

Noted among the guests were Admiral and Mrs. Leigh Noyes, Commander and Mrs. A. E. Montgomery, Commander and Mrs. Samuel P. Ginder, Col. and Mrs. Fenlon Nicholson and Commander and Mrs. Stanhope Ring. Mrs. Ring has just come to Washington from Coronado.

In a cozy group were Lieut. and Mrs. P. D. Stroop, she in a black frock with a wolf trimmed red duveteen jacket, and a hat of matching shades; Lieut. and Mrs. James S. Russell, the latter wearing brown crepe with a new snood hat to match topped by three gay birds, and Lieut. and Mrs. William R. Smedberg 3d, she in black with white trim.

Mrs. Jasper Wilde Among the Guests

Also noted were Mrs. Jasper Wilde, of Norfolk; Lieut. and Mrs. Jack Wells, Lieut. Jack Koch, Lieut. and Mrs. Robert E. Dixon, Lieut. and Mrs. Jack Griffin, Mrs. Roy Pickford, from Coronado, Calif., and Lieut. and Mrs. Dorris Gurley.

Lieut. and Mrs. Bernard F. Roeder were receiving bon voyage wishes from their many friends, for in five weeks they will be off to the China station for duty. Others among the guests included Commander and Mrs. Earl Morris, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. A. B. Vossler, Lieut. and Mrs. Robert Quakenbush, Lieut. and Mrs. J. J. Crane, Capt. and Mrs. Elwood A. Cobey, Capt. and Mrs. Oscar Badger, and Commander and Mrs. Marshall R. Greer, who will leave soon for duty in Buenos Aires.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirkman J. Rhodes To Live Here After Southern Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Kirkman Jackson Rhodes, who were married last Saturday, will make their home in Washington after a motor trip through the Southern States.

The bride, the former Miss Elizabeth Agnes Crossen, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gail W. Crossen of Washington, and Mr. Rhodes is the son of Mrs. W. A. Rhodes of this city, formerly of Chattanooga, Tenn.

The couple were married at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, the Rev. J. Hillman Hollister officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin with a fan shaped train and a fingertip tulle veil with a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley, white roses, and orchids.

Miss Mary K. Chadwell, of Columbus, Ohio, cousin of the bride, served as maid of honor, wearing a cornflower blue frock with matching velvet hairbow, and carrying a bouquet of dahlias and chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids were the Misses Charlynne Rhodes, sister of the bridegroom, and Doris Long. They were attired in rose taffeta dresses, with hairbows of the same shade, and carried bronze and yellow chrysanthemums.

L. W. Brown, of Arlington, was best man, and the ushers were J. D. Calvert and Norman W. Laird, of Washington. A reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Crossen followed the ceremony. When she left for her honeymoon, the bride wore a teal blue wool frock with a brown fur jacket and brown accessories.

Japan's Weakness Exposed, Says Dr. Hu

Chinese Ambassador Contrasts Tokyo's Inability to Obtain Victory in 27 Months With Reich's Quick Triumph in Poland

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Post Club Editor.

Summarizing in three sentences, the 27 months of war in China, Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, yesterday declared the resistance of his country has "not diminished but, on the contrary, the morale has been strengthened; the weaknesses of Japan have been shown to be much greater than the world suspected, and international assistance has been greater than some of us had courage to expect before the outbreak of the war."

Dr. Hu also confirmed the recent statement of the Ambassador of Japan, Kensuke Horinouchi, that no nonaggression agreement had been signed between Japan and Soviet Russia.

Dr. Hu was guest speaker at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club, at the Willard Hotel. Ruby Black, the club president, who introduced him, paid tribute to him as a poet, philosopher, journalist and educator as well as a diplomat.

Can Hold Out For Ten Years

Dr. Hu contrasted Poland, whose capital after three weeks of war must be taken outside the country, and China, whose government at the end of 27 months is still functioning "without the surrender of an army or the diminishing of the new national unity. We have at least seven-tenths of our country in which to move about and we could go on for ten years without fear of moving the seat of government to another country."

By sheer force of guerrilla warfare, said Dr. Hu, from 800 to 1,000 Japanese men are killed each day along the 2,000-mile front. This means at least 360,000 a year without any major war, he pointed out, indicating how China wears out the enemy.

He cited the economic weaknesses of Japan. The cost of the first two years of the war, plus that of the Manchurian invasion is eight times that of the first Sino-Japanese war and the Russo-Japanese war combined, he said. The Japanese budget for this year is seven times that of 1931, and balance of trade is unfavorable because of the conversion of industries to the making of war supplies.

International aid has been given China by Soviet Russia in the form of credits, munitions, and an army on the Siberian border which has caused Japan to divert troops there, he said. Great Britain and France have helped by leaving open the "back door," British Burma and French-Indo China.

U. S. Assistance Perfectly Timed

The United States commercial credit of $25,000,000 given last winter at the lowest ebb of China's morale, said Dr. Hu, although not a great sum, had a tremendous effect because of the friendly spirit in which it was extended. It was perfectly timed to revive the sinkng heart of the nation, he asserted.

He expressed faith that the democratic countries would not betray China in a time of trial after her two years and a half of fighting the battle of freedom and democracy.

"I have faith," he said as he concluded his talk, "and very often it is by some kind of faith that we live."

Among the guests at the head table were the Secretary of the Chinese Embassy and Mrs. Kienwen Yu, Mrs. Edith Phillips, secretary to the ambassador, and Joseph Chang, Washington correspondent for the Chinese News in New York. Miss Clotilde Pujal, music critic and feature writer for the Havana Post and special correspondent for the Cuban magazine Vanidades, also was a guest. She is writing special articles on American women and is spending several days in Washington at the A. A. U. W. Clubhouse.

U. S. Help In War Held Not Wanted

Miss Muriel Lester, English Woman, Gives Attitude in Address

Miss Muriel Lester, an Englishwoman taking the unique position of not wanting the United States to help Great Britain in the present war, last night addressed an audience which filled Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A.

Miss Lester, representing the Fellowship of Reconciliation, of which she is an international secretary, declared there were thousands affiliated with the movement in England and elsewhere "who will not help, learn to help or obey any war office order."

Based on the conviction that "war settles nothing, never brings peace, but is a recrucifixion of Christ," the purpose of the movement is to demonstrate love such as was manifested by Jesus, as the one effective force for overcoming evil and transforming society into a creative fellowship. She explained it was founded 25 years ago, during the World War, and had adherents throughout the world, including 8,000 in this country.

Miss Lester, internationally known for her work at Kingsley House in the east side of London, said that even now her sister and other associates in the work there may be huddled together in a dugout, to avoid air raids.

"With England concentrating on war thinking, and eagerly waiting to hear you will come into the war, it is painful for me as an English woman to say I do not want you to help us," she declared.

Foreseeing the public disfavor with which such a stand would be met she drew a paralled between the attitude of the loyal followers of Christ at the time of the crucifixion and of those who today may experience martyrdom as a result of their convictions. Taking the long view of the situation, whatever they go through will be of minor consequence, she said, in comparison to the end they hope to accomplish—the awakening of the world to the futility of war and the power of righteousness.

Miss Louise Danforth introduced Miss Lester, who spoke from the floor rather than the platform. She came to the United States some weeks prior to the declaration of war and is remaining here for the present, devoting herself to writing and speaking for the fellowship.

Zionist Aid Is Urged by Mrs. Tourover

Chapter of Hadassah Hears Summary of Congress at Geneva

The immigration of Jewish refugees to Palestine is continuing despite the war and support of the Zionist movement is needed now more than ever, Mrs. Raphael Tourover told members of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah yesterday. Addressing their first meeting of the season at the Jewish Community Center, Mrs. Tourover, former president of the chapter, and its delegate to the World Zionist Congress in Geneva, described the congress.

The session was cut short as delegates were obliged to leave Switzerland before the border closed, she said. The Americans hurried home but those from the belligerent countries went back into the danger zone to assist in getting the refugees out and starting them on their way to their new homeland.

Although the congress had decided on vigorous opposition to the British White Paper, curtailing immigration into Palestine, this plan was set aside as soon as war was declared. The Zionists will do nothing against the British government, but will aid it, she declared.

Rabbi Isadore Breslau, who was the Washington Zionist delegate to the congress, spoke of the events which have taken place since the session and their effect on the fate of the Jew.

Mrs. Moe Offenberg, Hadassah president, presided at the meeting and announced a series of lectures to be given by Mrs. Tourover, on "Fundamentals of Zionism." In these, she will give further details of the congress. The program also included music by Mrs. Benjamin Rabner, who sang, accompanied by Mrs. Clarice Leiner Levy.

Mrs. Ramsey Attends Meet

Mrs. Ida W. Ramsey, State president of the District W. C. T. U., and other officers will attend the sixty-fifth annual convention of the national organization opening today in Rochester, N. Y., and continuing to October 3.

She organized the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union with a group of other women in 1874 and later became its president. In 1883 she founded the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union and thus became the first international organizer of women. The organization now has membership in 54 countries.

In addition to the celebration of her anniversary at the national convention there will be observances Thursday by State and local groups throughout the country, including the 26 unions which constitute the State organization of the District.

Those from here in addition to Mrs. Ramsey, who will attend the sessions in Rochester are Mrs. Jennie Esmond Wright, second vice president; Mrs. Belle Cutler Parker, District director of citizenship; Miss Clara Blystone, president of Central Iota Sigma group; Dr. Izora Scott, national director of legislation, with headquarters in the Methodist Building here, and Mrs. Emma Knaub, treasurer of Southeast Union.

40 for House Action on Bills, Says Schafer

Wisconsin Member To Press Lynching Bill After Oct. 9

A group of "40 House Republicans" was claimed last night by Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, to have agreed that the House should take up new legislation if the Senate has not completed action on the neutrality bill within two or three weeks.

Schafer yesterday reiterated an assertion he would call up the anti-lynching bill October 9 unless the neutrality question is before the House.

The "gentlemen's agreement" to bring up no new legislation and to hold no roll calls expires October 9 unless it is renewed by joint Democratic-Republican action.

Even after that date, Majority Leader Rayburn can undoubtedly prevent committee chairmen from reporting out any bills; but the anti-lynching measure has highly privileged status and can be called up by any of the 218 representatives who signed a petition to discharge the bill from the Judiciary Committee.

Dislikes Meeting Plan

The present House procedure of meeting only on Mondays and Thursdays was decried by Schafer as "stupidity and asininity." He asserted that about 40 other Republicans agreed that the House should cease "marking time" while waiting for the Senate to act.

A differing view, however, was expressed by one of Schafer's Wisconsin Republican colleagues, Representative Keefe. "In view of the fact that many Representatives may not be present October 9," said Keefe, "I think it would be unfair and ungracious to bring up the anti-lynching bill at that time."

Seek Parliamentary Curb

Frankly worried by the threat of opening up the special session to a legion of issues other than neutrality, some House Democratic leaders yesterday sought parliamentary means of stopping Schafer from bringing up the antilynching bill.

"Unhappily," said one of them after consulting the books, "it appears that if Schafer demands that the bill be called up, we will have to vote on the question of considering it."

If the antilynching issue can be deferred—and it appeared likely that setting a specific date in January for consideration of the bill might be necessary to forestall earlier action—influential members said the session would wind up by November 1.

Ringer Tourney Winners Take the Cake—And How!

The earthy hands of a dyed-in-the-wool horseshoe pitching enthusiast can be turned successfully to a daintier pastime, it was announced yesterday.

Prizes in the third annual Harry (Pop) Woodfield Horseshoe Tournament on the Commerce Building courts were, of all things, home-made cakes and pies turned out by the horny hands of Pop himself. Several winneds tasted their spoils immediately, and at a late hour last night no serious injuries had been reported.

Three-ringer throwers tied for first place over the field of 20. Each won five matches in the round robin event and droped two. Allen Burnham won a toss for the trophy, Luther Tabb won a set of pitching shoes, and Elmer Swartz took the cake—the one baked by Pop. Walter Haley and Ed Henry, tied in the next group with four wins and three loses, were given lemon meringue pies.

Education Aide To Close 50 Years' Service

MRS. ANNA L. BURDICK

Anna L. Burdick To Leave Interior Post Saturday

"Anna L. Burdick, Women Wage Earners"—this little sign, which has marked an Interior Department office door for 22 years, will come down Saturday.

Mrs. Burdick's retirement from the Office of Education, where she has been agent for trade and industrial work for girls and women, will mark the end of 50 years of continuous work in public education. In that time Mrs. Burdick has seen many changes, "but not as many as I should like to have seen," she said yesterday.

"The place of women at work is not yet recognized in our social order," she explained. "It has taken a tremendous realignment of attitude in this generation for women to have made the place they have."

"Women are inadequately represented in policy making bodies, which determine their future for them, and whose decisions they must abide by even when they have not participated in them," she said, explaining that women have too many administrative and not enough executive positions.

Public education has made a tremendous advance in the last 50 years in bringing compulsory free education through the high school level to the great majority of students, she remarked, but this is still not enough.

The full value of education comes when the student is self-taught, according to Mrs. Burdick. "Self-controlled emotions and self-directed activities are really the things we should strive for," she said, describing how she had noticed in Germany a tendency of people to "want to be led by others." Freedom in America must spring from each individual's capacity to lead himself, she said.

Mrs. Burdick was educated in the public schools of Burlington, Iowa, and took her bachelor of science at the University of Iowa. She also holds an honorary doctor of letters degree from Rutgers University. She has taught in elementary and secondary schools and colleges and held administrative and executive posts in schools before coming to the Office of Education.

"The return of my students and their pride in their success has been the most satisfying thing in my life," she said yesterday.

U. S. Listing Reserve of 10,000,000 for Job Emergency

By Alfred Friendly.

A huge "national human resources" program to set up a "civilian reserve" for Government employment and to establish a completely indexed list of 10,000,000 persons available for private jobs now or in time of deepened emergency is under way in several emer- operating Federal agencies.

The creation of the reserve list for Federal jobs is still in the planning stage, but is expected to reach the President for his approval this week.

The indexing of unemployed and relief workers, by their primary and subsidiary occupational abilities, already has started.

Details Still Nebulous

Both phases of the program, its planners explain, are highly desirable, even at the present time of only "limited emergency." Demands of industry on Federal-State employment offices have reached an all-time high and necessitate complete and extensive registers of people available and qualified for work. At the Civil Service Commission, at the same time, the need is increasing for more readily available lists of qualified persons and for a speedier system of locating eligible employes to fill vacancies or new positions.

Details of the "civilian reserve" program are still nebulous, but it is probable that the commission's 5,000 local examining boards will become the operating agencies in gathering information on hundreds of thousands of citizens who at the moment have no intention of seeking Gvoernment positions, but who would indicate their willingness to do so in a crisis.

One proposal calls for the boards to extend invitations to this latter group of citizens to appear at the time when general examinations are announced. They would probably not be required to undergo an extensive examination, but would be asked, at least, to get their experience, aptitude and educational qualifications on record.

Another method under consideration is to mail application blanks to every person who expresses interest in a Government job, and to keep the applications on file. If the qualifications appeared adequate on the face of the application, the job might be granted in an emergency without an examination.

Could Locate Workers

Plans for creating the "civilian reserve" are being preceded by a project to set up a machine punch card system for the almost 1,000,000 present Federal employes. All the pertinent details about each employe—his age, education, experience and other qualifications—would be coded and translated into holes on an individual card.

When complete, the system would permit the speedy location of any person now in the Government service with the necessary qualifications for any job which might open up. Duplicate sets of the cards of their employes may be furnished to individual agencies.

The commission plans to request an appropriation to carry out the project within the next year.

Creation of the list of available manpower for private jobs is the work of the Social Security Board, co-operating with the Federal Works Agency. When completed, the index is expected to be the most complete listing of the Nation's idle human resources ever compiled.

It will reveal the name, address, experience and industrial qualifications of about 3,500,000 present and past WPA, NYA and CCC employes and about 250,000 applicants for PWA jobs, as well as approximately 6,000,000 persons who at one time or another have registered as unemployed at the 1,700 State employment offices throughout the country.

Interindexing Comes First

The immediate job is to "interindex" the offices' existing cross files with cards for each relief employe, to be supplied by the Federal Works Agency.

Aside from the possible development of a critical period, when such a listing would be indispensable, Social Security Board experts feel that one of its primary uses at present will be to prevent mass migrations of labor. With information in each community on the number and location of specially qualified job-seekers, it is expected that calls for laborers will not be broadcast throughout the country and bring about great population movements and influxes of applicants far in excess of the number of available jobs.

The Post Is Now in Its Sixth Consecutive Year of Leadership in School Advertising

Each year since 1934, and for the first eight months of 1939, local schools have placed more of their display advertising in The Post than in any other Washington newspaper. This continued leadership can mean but one thing . . . school advertising in The Post gets results.

And because of this leadership, Washingtonians intent on furthering their education have become accustomed to looking to The Post for their school information. Whether you are planning to advertise your school, or are seeking the right school for yourself or your children, let the experience of others be your guide and use The Washington Post, first.

Ruhland Asks Surgeon at Glenn Dale

Advisers Approve Abandoning Use Of Toner and Allison Schools

Health Officer George C. Ruhland's advisory committee on tuberculosis yesterday considered appointment of a resident surgeon at Glenn Dale Sanatoria as an alternative to transferring major surgical cases to Gallinger Hospital.

A vacancy created at the District's tuberculosis institution several months ago when Dr. Daniel L. Finucane was promoted from assistant superintendent to superintendent has not yet been filled.

At the same time the committee considered a proposal by the health officer to transform the Allison and Toner schools into schools for crippled children. It is the intent of Dr. Ruhland to have the children at Allison, who are malnourished and under suspicion of having tuberculosis returned to regular public schools.

Applicant Is Interviewed

An applicant for the job of Gallinger resident surgeon has been interviewed by both Dr. Ruhland and Dr. Finucane. He is a graduate of the University of Rochester and has had experience in surgery.

The committee instructed Dr. Ruhland to draft a letter to the Board of Education requesting installation of rest rooms in all schools and transfer of the children at Allison and Toner school to regular public schools.

Mrs. Ernest Grant, managing director of the District Tuberculosis Association, was present at yesterday's meeting as a representative of the Board of Education. Mrs. Grant is a member of a special subcommittee on handicapped children of the board and called a meeting of her own committee for 10.30 a.m. today.

Crippled Project Submitted

Others at the meeting were Dr. Daniel Seckinger, assistant health officer; Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, director of school inspection service; Dr. Frank H. Towner, of the Tuberculosis Clinic; Dr. William H. Hough, Dr. William C. White, Dr. John L. Minor and Dr. Roy D. Adams.

Meanwhile, the teaching project for crippled children unable to attend school was submitted to the Federal WPA. A decision is expected tomorrow or Friday.

Mothers of the crippled children, who recently organized the Association for Education of Handicapped Children, will meet tomorrow night at the home of the president, Mrs. Odetta O'Hara, 615 2 street northeast.

Befriended Dogs, She Pays $30 Fine, Regrets Its Purpose

"I wish the money could have gone for some humane purpose," Mrs. Harriet Stuart, whose love of dogs took her into Police Court for the fourth time yesterday, said as she paid a $30 fine.

The mistress of nine dogs of her own, Mrs. Stuart has a penchant for sheltering stray dogs that wander near her home, 3007 Albemarle street northwest.

The result has been considerable barking, wrathful neighbors and trips to court for Mrs. Stuart. She appeared in court on June 5, 1938; July 15 and August 1 of this year, each time being granted delay in action or a deferred sentence.

Yesterday Mrs. Stuart was found guilty of harboring dogs that "bark, howl or in other ways disrupt peace and comfort of the neighborhood," after Corporation Counsel Milton Korman said "no material improvement" in the degree of noise was reported from her menage.

In fining her, Judge Hobart Newman said he had hoped it would not be necessary to do so. "I have the greatest sympathy for dog lovers," he said. "I own a dog I would not trade for anything myself, but the peace of mind and sleep of humans is more important, I believe."

Oct. 1 to Be Quiet 'Moving Day'—It's Sunday

The fact that October 1 falls on a Sunday for the first time in years seems to have taken some of the steam out of Washington's approaching "moving day," it appeared yesterday.

Moving men explained that people are changing residences from a few days to two weeks earlier this season, instead of waiting for September 30 or October 1, the custom.

"The rush this year began on September 15," one transfer official said. "However, we're booked up strong. Can't promise to move anyone before October 3."

"Generally everyone wants to move on October 1, but this year, with that date falling on Sunday, the result has been a slightly more even distribution," another transfer man said. "Even so, people are still calling at the last minute and expecting they can get a van on 24 hours' notice."

D. C. Man Missing Since June 16

District police yesterday were trying to locate Hartwell K. Hawthorne, 24, missing since he left Washington June 16 to visit his mother in Richmond.

An employe of the Pointer Wholesale Meat Co., Hawthorne left his work on June 16 for a two-week vacation. His mother, Mrs. Inez Hawthorne, reported she had received a letter saying he would arrive home on June 17, but he failed to appear.

Hawthorne was described as 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing about 125 pounds, medium complexion, brown eyes, and dark-brown wavy hair.

Armory Design To Allow Sports Urged

Planning Board Suggests Dirt Floor; Guard Opposed

Proposal that the new District National Guard armory be converted into a combination sports center and drill hall was advanced yesterday as the National Capital Park and Planning Commission asked modification of existing armory plans.

The commission wrote to the District Commissioners suggesting that a dirt floor be provided for the armory and that its potential seating capacity be greatly enlarged. Substitution of a dirt for wooden floor was proposed to permit horse shows, polo games and circuses to be held in the building, officials said.

It also was suggested that the plans be redrafted to permit the construction of a second balcony, if additional funds can be obtained from Congress. Present plans call for one balcony with a seating capacity of 4,600 and space for seating more than 6,000 on the main floor. The additional balcony would add about 8,000 seats, it was said.

National Guard officials, it was learned, have objected to the dirt floor proposal, declaring it would be unsatisfactory as a drill hall, and would make the armory unsuitable for inaugural balls and other such occasions. While sympathetic to the effort to make the armory a suitable sports center for the District, they insist that it be fundamentally an armory.

Dr. McClain Vice Chancellor Of American U.

The appointment of the Rev. Dr. Dayton E. McClain, pastor of Zion Methodist Church, Cambridge, Md., as vice chancellor of American University, was announced last night.

Dr. McClain, who will enter upon his new duties on October 1, is a graduate of Dickinson College and Harvard University, and has received the degrees of doctor of philosophy and bachelor of sacred theology at Boston University.

American University, the only college of the new Methodist Church in the United States under the jurisdiction of the General Conference, last summer honored him with the degree of doctor of laws.

Amateur Sleuth Ends Adventure Of Capital Twins

The 13-year-old Boarman twins, Joan and June, of 215 Fifth street southeast, were back home last night after an adventure in travel which was abruptly ended through the efforts of an amateur detective.

The girls, who look very much alike except that one bobs her hair while the other wears long locks, walked about eight miles and then were given a lift by a motorist to Solomons, Md., they later told police. There the two young ladies picked out a boat cabin and slept. The following morning they discussed their first night's adventure and talked themselves right into the arms of the law.

A passerby, on hearing voices, investigated, reported to the Prince Frederick magistrate, who called in State Police Corporal Charles W. Magaha, who in turn called for Washington police. The latter called for the twins.

Col. Chynoweth Ordered to Duty At Fort Meade

Lieut. Col. Bradford G. Chynoweth, military attache to London for the past three years, yesterday was ordered to duty with the Sixty-sixth Tank Regiment at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

Col. Chynoweth was on duty with the General Staff here from 1933 to 1936, and earlier was at the Army War College. A West Point graduate in 1912, he served as a lieutenant colonel of Engineers during the World War and transferred to the Infantry in 1919. He was relieved at London recently by Brig. Gen. Sherman Miles.

Capital News In Brief

Miss as Good as Mile

Edward D. Anderson, 43, of 1437 Corcoran street northwest, proved for himself that a miss is as good as a mile yesterday.

First he had to swerve his car at Sixteenth street and Arkansas avenue to avoid a car. The action dislodged a trowel, which struck Anderson in the face, blinding him momentarily and causing him to lose control of the car. The automobile jumped the pavement, missed several trees, dropped into a culvert. Anderson escaped unscathed.

Jews to Greet Sukkos Today At Sundown

Rejoicing in the Law To End Nine-Day Religious Celebration

Local followers of the Jewish faith will crowd synagogues and temples at sundown today to usher in Sukkos—their feast of the tabernacles.

Celebrated for eight days by Reform Jewry and for nine by Orthodox and Conservative groups, the feast ends with "Simchas Torah," meaning the "rejoicing in the law." It marks the completion of the annual cycle of readings from the Torah, the scrolls of the Pentateuch. The service symbolizes the unbroken continuity of Jewish tradition and loyalty.

According to a rabbi, the feast serves as a reminder of Judaism's unchanging belief in the divine government of the universe, in the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of men and the dignity of the individual personality."

In Israel, Sukkos marked the last of three festivals, when the faithful made annual pilgrimages to the temple to make thank offerings for the year's blessings.

Also designated as the Feast of the Ingathering, it commemorated God's watchful care over the Israelites on their journey through the wilderness.

E. C. Wynne Rites Tomorrow; Hull Expresses Sorrow

Funeral for Edward Cyrll Wynne, director of the State Department's division of research and publications, who died at his home early yesterday, will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the chapel at Fort Myer, Va. Burial will follow in Arlington Cemetery.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull in a statement yesterday expressed "deep sorrow" over Dr. Wynne's death.

He paid high tribute to Wynne's "splendid achievements" in disseminating the Government's policies in foreign affairs, and declared that his "indifference to his personal welfare was actuated by his complete devotion to his duties."

Mrs. Sarah Hayes Funeral Today

Our Town

D. C. Offers Lifetime of Play Activities

Horseback riding and bicycling in picturesque spots; tennis and golf within the shadow of the Monument; playgrounds for children, and fishing for man and boy—Washington has them all

By Christine Sadler

"Having a wonderful time. Took three ski slopes yesterday. Wish you were here."

The postmark need not be Sun Valley. It could be Washington, D. C.—no fooling. The Washington Ski Club is alive and skiing, not getting enough snow to suit it, of course; but they sometimes have the same trouble up at Lake Placid.

Amateur weightlifters, too, are flourishing in our climates—and come the middle of next summer anyone who wants to can get into a canoe over in Georgetown and paddle 22 miles straight up the old C. & O. Canal to Seneca, Md.

In fact, if you are not getting your recreation while sojourning in the District of Columbia the odds are you're the type who just lolls in a hammock during your two weeks off, anyway, and probably would not ride a horse even if you owned one!

Lifetime of Vacations Here

There is a lifetime of vacations right here in the shadow of the Capitol, one learns from National Capital Parks officials, and almost 1,000 people are working full time to make the local great outdoors the most attractive and to see that everyone who wishes to study crocheting has a teacher.

If you have a weiner to roast, there is no city in the world where it can be done easier—nor under better supervision. There are 132 picnic groves and more than 7,000 acres in Washington's 725 park reservations, and the weiner fires just about start themselves, the wood is so good.

Washingtonians use all 7,000 of the acres and spread out onto the Potomac. Golf, tennis, softball, bicycling, and horseback riding are their favorite sports, in the order named.

A half million games of golf were played here this summer on the municipal courses. More than 100,000 persons rented bicycles for park rides. Tennis games on park courts totaled above 500,000. Swimming was off a little, with only 350,000 plunges in the municipal pools.

But watercraft sports continued their boom upward. Three years ago there were practically no small boats on the waterfront, in comparison to the number today. Washingtonians won most of the prizes in the regatta sail boat classes this year, and National Capital Parks is abloom with civic pride because of it.

"It means a great renaissance. This town, like all the others we know about, goes over big for winners. There'll be a much greater turnout next summer," an N. C. P. official said yesterday. "It was that way, with hockey, with archery and with soccer, too."

Horseshoes are so much a favorite N. C. P. put in 16 new courts this summer and had them lighted for night playing. Classes in horseshoe pitching rarely have much trouble from drops in registration. Quoits, on the other hand, are "practically dead," and probably soon will be crowded off the 7,000 acres completely.

Croquet is one of the favorites in Meridian Hill Park and the marble courts get enough patronage to justify their upkeep. Polo is limited to the "Army gang" and visiting teams. Army players furnish their own ponies, which are stabled at Fort Myer. Only one out of about 500 regular horseback riders own their own animals, however—horses are such eaters.

Bird Walks on Sundays

From 15 to 100 Washingtonians, depending on the weather, go on bird walks in the city early every Sunday morning, except in the deadest of winter. They seldom walk more than a mile, but see more varieties of birds than would be seen almost anywhere else, according to N. C. P.

"Even birds from the Middle West detour through here on their way South," a park naturalist declared yesterday, advising everybody wishing to survey the 1939 warbler crop to get to their studying. They're coming through now in great bevies.

More than 200 residents go on the nature walks supervised by N. C. P. during most of the year. Trails along the C. & O., in Rock Creek Park, and over in Fort DuPont are the most frequented. In upper Rock Creek Park the marked nature trial is lined by 12 species of ferns, 37 varieties of trees, 24 different kinds of shrubs and 154 varieties of flowers, including 8 species of orchids.

Garfield Park has 104 species of trees, Lafayette Park in front of the White House has 92. Many of them are "introduced varieties," but the District is so located its native species are especially lush, being an overlapping of what grows much farther South with what does well much farther North.

Excepting National Zoological Park and the Capitol Grounds, all the park lands are under supervision of NCP. This includes the President's Park, which is divided into "inner and outer portions." The inner portion includes the 18 acres in the White House lawn. The outer portion contains 52 acres and includes the Ellipse, which is one of the most intensively utilized recreation grounds in the park system.

President's Park was one of the original l'Enfant ideas and has had a brilliant history. Other Washington and l'Enfant thoughts about parks were not followed so scrupulously, until during this century, The Park and Planning Commission for the last two decades has been devoting many an hour to ways and means of getting land back for park use—and grabbing up the unsettled before some store selected it.

This year, with co-ordination of recreational activities under the direction of Lewis R. Barrett, a unification of endeavor to put "the best playground system in the world" into practice is in sight.

Plan Called Perfect

The plan itself is called perfect. It visualizes a major recreational center within a mile of every District resident and small satellite playgrounds within a quarter mile of each child. The large centers number 26, in various stages of completion as far as land acquisition and physical equipment are concerned. They all eventually will operate on a year-round schedule. Money to keep them open during months when schools are not in session has been the great lack of recent years.

Growth of adult participation in recreational activities, including the crafts, has been one of the most phenomenal changes in the modern program. Richard Tennyson, an assistant director of recreation in charge of city-wide participation, said yesterday baseball, badminton, softball and indoor tennis would be on the adult plans for indoor tennis in order gymnasium program for the winter months. "We are making to make available to all the people of Washington the full use of the gyms through organized programs," he said.

(Tomorrow's article will deal with Brookland.)

Citizens Begin New Drive for Local Government

A move to unite civic organizations behind a new drive for an independent District government and representation in Congress was made last night by the Hampshire Heights Citizens Association.

Meeting at Barnard School, the association discussed a plan for District government drawn up jointly by its taxation and suffrage committees. The proposal, based partly on the Griffenhagen plan, was tabled for further consideration.

Officers of the association emphasized they "are going to be very realistic" about the situation and will make no such "Utopian" proposals as a demand for statehood.

As soon as the plan is developed to a suitable state, they said, it will be submitted to every organization in the District.

The meeting heard a talk on fire hazards by Fire Chief Stephen Porter, who warned members to beware of refuse and to check their heating equipment before winter begins.

A collection of fire alarm equipment was displayed.

Southeast Citizens

A list of 16 items proposing new schools, bridges, playgrounds and parks was approved at a meeting of the Southeast Washington Citizens' Association last night for presentation to the District Commissioners.

The association also adopted a resolution requesting that assessments for widening and rebuilding streets be eliminated and that assessments for laying new streets be cut in half. The gasoline tax should provide sufficient funds for the work, the resolution said.

The association asked the Navy Yard to allow more parking inside its gates. A committee headed by B. G. Ladd was appointed to investigate lack of community center activities. John V. Schmitt, John O'Connell and Ladd will constitute a second committee to discuss development of Fort Dupont with the National Capital Parks division of the Interior Department.

Box Bible Class Holds 17th Annual Fete

President Stackhouse Re-elected at Dinner At Emory Methodist

The seventeenth annual banquet of the Box Bible Class—one of the largest organizations of its kind in Washington—last night drew scores of men to Emory Methodist Church, 6100 Georgia avenue northwest.

They heard Maj. O. W. Coursey, Litt. D., in a patriotic message, contend that the history of America has been written more dramatically in poetry than in prose.

The class re-elected Howard C. Stackhouse president. Other officers chosen were Richard S. Clark, first vice president; John R. Gardner, second vice president; Marshall R. Baker, third vice president; E. F. Dick, recording secretary; James M. Kissock, assistant; Milton E. Lowry, corresponding secretary; Arthur F. Rohrman, assistant; Howard E. Russell, treasurer, and Archer R. Overby, assistant.

Stackhouse praised class loyalty and co-operation. He is vice president of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association and of the National Federation of Men's Bible Classes. Page McK. Etchison, president of the association and executive committeeman of the federation; George E. Harris, executive secretary of the association; the Rev. Paul R. Scheerer, pastor of Takoma Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Horace E. Cromer, host church pastor, also spoke.

Other guests included the Rev. William H. Hantzmon and S. P. Beery, two of the five class teachers able to attend; Perley M. Barrows, Edgar V. Crittenden, Victor M. Giffen, Frank L. Smith, Sherrard C. Tupman and Alden W. Hoage, leaders of Bible classes at Brightwood Methodist, Takoma Presbyterian, Takoma Baptist, Hamline Methodist, Lewis Memomial Methodist and Eldbrooke Methodist churches, respectively.

Harwood Hall, Wilfred Smith, Herbert Pate and Charles Beechler, directors of choirs at First Baptist, Emory Methodist, Calvary Baptist and New York Avenue Presbyterian churches, presented a vocal quartette number, accompanied by Gertrude Dyer Parsons, pianist and only woman member of the class. The National Brass Quartette and George H. Miller, former member of the Dakota Wesleyan faculty, also took part in the musical program. The Friendship Class served dinner.

Library of Congress Gets Frost Manuscripts

Five autographed manuscripts of poetry by Robert Frost, well-known poet, have been presented to the Library of Congress by the Optima Honor Society of Mount Vernon Seminary, it was announced yesterday.

The society is headed by Miss Dorothy Carpenter, of Wilmington, Del., who recently succeeded Miss Nan Moses, of Savannah, Ga., seminary officials said.

Designers See Building Rise As Trade Aid

'Crescendo' Coming, Key Figure Asserts As National Group Convenes Here

Increase in operations in the building industry with emphatic effects on national prosperity—"for building affects one out of every three persons on the street"—was predicted yesterday by Travis G. Walsh, of Cleveland, key figure at the convention of the American Institute of Architects now in session at the Mayflower Hotel.

"The most impressive crescendo in the construction industry should occur in the field of private enterprise. With a favorable stock market there should be a tendency on the part of individuals in the moderate income brackets to proceed with long-contemplated residential construction," said Walsh, who is vice chairman of the committee on industrial relations in the institute.

"Captains of industry should likewise be tempted to remodel and add to their plants and perhaps improve the housing conditions of employes," he added.

Assumes a Lengthy War

Against the background of European war, Walsh visualized the United States as "international commissary" in "quasi-isolation." His predictions on building activity in the United States were based on the assumption of a lengthy European war and on this country's adherence to a neutral policy.

Thomas S. Holden, of New York, vice president in charge of statistics and research, F. W. Dodge Corporation, speaking on "What the War May Do to Construction" at last night's meeting of the Producers' Council, an affiliated group of manufacturers of building materials, said:

"There is reason to believe that the preparedness plans of Government contemplate a closer and more genuine co-operation with business that we have seen in recent years.

"A far greater potential deterrent to continued private building activity exists in the possibility of rapidly rising building costs than in any war development of which we have definite knowledge," said Holden at the meeting at the Washington Hotel.

Carmody Forecasts Rise

John H. Carmody, administrator of the Federal Works Agency, addressed the institute briefly yesterday, predicting that "more will be accomplished in the next year or two" in building than for some time.

Edwin Bergstrom, of Los Angeles, treasurer of the institute since 1927, is unopposed nominee for the presidency. Other unopposed nominations, announced at yesterday's session, are Dean Walter R. McCornack, department of architecture, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, vice president; Charles T. Ingham, Pittsburgh, secretary; John R. Fugard, Chicago, treasurer.

In spite of glowing predictions from other sources, the report of the structural service department of the institute predicted that private enterprise will be even "more cautious" than in the past, because of the war in Europe, the state of "limited emergency" and difficulty of foreseeing developments.

Every reduction of $500 in the cost of a home increases the number of potential purchasers by 1,000,000 families, declared the report of this committee, which is headed by N. Max Dunning, of Washington.

Boy's Hand Mutilated By Cartridge Blast

Twelve-year-old Joseph Lambert, colored, of Colesville, Md., lost three fingers and part of a thumb yesterday when a cartridge he found exploded while he and a friend were playing with it. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital for treatment.

Extra Law Section

Opening of a fourth section of the freshman law class at Columbus University to accommodate applicants denied entrance last week was announced yesterday by Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, university provost.

Youth Has Itself Another Fling in Lively Picture

'Dancing Co-ed' Fine Antidote for War Gloom; Variety Club Plans Unique Outdoor Show; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THE BOYS AND GIRLS on the West Coast, who have been loading down the wires with their enthusiasms over "Dancing Co-Ed" as a zippy item of screen entertainment, seem to have been correct in their unanimous diagnosis.

For a quick analogy, I should say that this lively bit of musicalized whoopee belongs in the pigeon-hole with "These Glamour Girls." It possesses the same spirit of ebullient youth, attempts no heavy "message" and obviously was designed with no deeper motive than to afford its audiences more fun than has been provided them by some of the recent films they have seen.

BELL

The whole thing revolves—and sometimes rather dizzily—about a motion picture studio's attempt to "discover" a youthful feminine star for a film to be known as "Dancing Co-ed," through a cross-country series of collegiate dancing contests in which the "winner" has been cleverly "planted." You will be surprised at the way this combination of professional chicanery and scholastic bombast turns out. Not only has a surprise twist been given the plot, but in maneuvering this distinct innovation Hollywood once again has demonstrated that it is not above kidding the life out of itself.

The pivotal roles, as was true in "Glamour Girls," have been turned over to comparative youngsters. Lana Turner, Ann Rutherford, June Preisser, Mary Beth Hughes and Richard Carlson are in the top spots, with Thurston Hall, Lee Bowman, Roscoe Karns, Walter Kingsford, Leon Errol nad Monty Woolley supplying a bit of more adult ballast, but hilariously. Then there is Artie Shaw's Orchestra to pep things up still more toward the end.

As this merry masquerade was unspooled yesterday afternoon at the press preview, it was difficult to escape the realization that the blonde Lana Turner has yet to turn in a poor performance. It has been predicted by some that she will be "the Bette Davis of 1949." I wouldn't know about that. Whatever her destination, however, notable performances in "They Won't Forget," "Marco Polo," "Love Finds Andy Hardy," "Rich Man, Poor Girl," "Dramatic School," "Calling Dr. Kildare" and "These Glamour Girls" have given her a flying start toward it. And Ann Rutherford is practically treading on her heels at every step.

For those wishing to get away from the war, "Dancing Co-ed" will prove a convenient escape when it opens at Loew's Capitol on Friday.

Phil Lampkin, whose titillating tempos are stepping up the pulse beat of the Bethesda burghers at the Hiser Theater through today, will appear as guest conductor at the Hippodrome Theater, in Baltimore, for two weeks, beginning Friday, September 29. For his engagement, the Hippodrome management will augment the house orchestra to almost twice its normal size. Fork-handed Phil, in his fortnight in the Monumental City, will be playing opposition to the organization which he served continuously for 7½ years as "guest conductor" at Loew's Capitol Theater in this city. He came here, incidentally, under much the same sort of an agreement. One wonders if his two Baltimore weeks will stretch themselves out into the greater part of a decade.

So yesterday's New York Herald Tribune put this column in its place. After quoting a portion of our recent lament that the Playwrights' Company apparently had passed up the National Capital and its National Theater in routing the pre-Broadway tour of Paul Muni in Maxwell Anderson's "Key Largo," the H-T puts an ostensible period to the whole business in these words: "The Playwrights will not open any of their plays in Washington this season and may not include Washington on their itinerary at all."

Since the National is not booked through the Herald Tribune, there is an outside chance that our esteemed contemporary may be mistaken. At any rate, it is comforting to learn from unimpeachable sources that the first spot asked for, for the opening of "Key Largo," was the National Theater in Washington, D. C. It was merely unfortunate that the desired playing time was not available. The Playwrights' Company still is not canceled for the season in my book.

Thanks for the beer and the buggy ride, anyway.

One of Carey Wilson's best short subjects, "A Failure at Fifty," also was unwound at yesterday afternoon's screening. It outlines the early career of one of the sublime figures in history as a heartening example to a 50-year-old failure about to jump off the deep end to get away from it all. The face of the inspiring example of fortitude and courage is never seen until after success has come to him. And then, guess who?

The principal topic of discussion at the general meeting of the Variety Club of Washington on Monday night was the next pretentious out-of-doors event it will foster for the benefit of the club's welfare fund. This will take the form of a "Cavalcade of Thrills" that has been eminently successful in other cities. In Baltimore recently, for example, it played to approximately 60,000 people in two days.

This "Cavalcade of Thrills" is described as one of the most unusual hippodrome entertainments ever conceived. It enlists the services of 50 Hollywood stunt men and women, who present a rapid and unbroken succession of death-defying feats such as are seen, one at a time, on the screen in pictures of sensational action, and embraces also a complete Wild West rodeo. The show consumes two hour and a half and maintains its high pitch of excitement throughout that period.

It will be presented at Griffith Stadium—the papers are already signed, sealed and delivered—on Friday and Saturday, October 13 and 14. Night performances will be given both days at 8:30, with a Saturday matinee at 2. The price scale will be such as to come within the easy reach of every chap's purse and billfold. Tickets—100,000 of them—will go on sale at an early date.

Must you be told that there will be more of this later?

Yesterday's shot in the arm was from Dick Maney, one of the top-flight stentors of the better things of the theater, who dropped by with an armful of new pictures of his star and glowing tales of how "different" she will be found in her new play, coming to the National following the Lunts. Yes, the star is Helen Hayes and her new play a comedy she hugely enjoys after six or seven years of being a stage queen—"Ladies and Gentlemen," by her husband, Charlie MacArthur, and Ben Hecht. The title, if you haven't heard, refers to the members of a jury. See last line of paragraph above.

Oh-Mr.-Carnegie Note

Anyhow, it would have been a nice last line, if I could only remember what it was!

oomphatically one of the cinema's most provocative personalities, among the younger set of on-coming stars, who will be present in Washington this week-end to headline the stage bill, beginning Friday, at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 26.

NOEL STREATFIELD is one of the most successful juvenile authors today . . . A few years ago Bennett Cerf, of Random House, accepted her book, "Ballet Shoes," for publication. It soon will appear as a movie, for one of the Hollywood child-stars . . . After "Ballet Shoes," she wrote "Tennis Shoes," another best-seller—and then a third successful book, "Circus Shoes" . . . Yesterday Cerf sent a cable to Miss Streatfield, who is in London. The cable read: "Baby Needs a New Pair of Shoes."

DIXIE DAVIS finally has left New York. Officials permitted him to leave the jurisdiction . . . Paul Meltzner, the American artist who finally sold a painting to the famed Tate Gallery, in London, now cannot get them to accept it. The Tate Gallery removed all its paintings to suburban hideaways, and refuses to accept any more . . . Eugene O'Neill, who has been spending all these years writing a nine-play cycle, confides that he may take a rest—and write a new one . . . Seymour Nebenzahl, who produced "Mayerling" and "M," is leaving for Hollywood. He has had offers to produce two new follow-up movies to be called "After Mayerling" and "The Return of M."

"GOOD-TIME CHARLIE" Friedman, discoverer of Primo Carnera and present manager of "Silent Joe" Hill, announced to his professional colleagues that he had arranged for Hill to fight Johnny Risko—who was a heavyweight contender more than ten years ago . . . "And after he fights Risko," Friedman beamed, "guess who he's fighting next?" . . . "I know," Jimmy Cannon suggested, "he's fighting Jim Jeffries."

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT insulted one of his friends by calling him, "You glass of luke-warm parsnip juice" . . . Chas. Yale Harrison has joined the list of Foreign Affairs commentators. He'll broadcast for WEVD . . . Martin Starr has delivered to Warner Bros. the broadcast material he used when he covered the Spy Trials here, to aid the Warner defense of the libel suit brought by Fritz Kuhn. His material includes out-of-court discussions with the lawyers for the four convicted spies.

George Jessel rushed excitedly into the Plaza yesterday and told William Gaxton: "Did you read this report that Goebbels, Goering, Streicher, and the others have millions of dollars banked here in America? Can you beat it?" . . . "Sure you can beat it," Gaxton assured. "I hope it's all in the Bank of U. S."

WHEN C. V. R. Thompson, at his agent's home, signed with Putnam's to write "I Lost My English Accent," the only person available to witness the contract-signature was Richard Simon, of Simon & Schuster—who had published "With Malice Towards Some." Thompson's book is a reply to that one. In brackets, after his witness-signature, Simon wrote regards to all his rivals at Putnam's. The book, incidentally, has gone into its second edition . . . El Morocco's new main room will feature a Pigskin motif. The famous Zebra-skin background has been relegated to a rear room . . . Richard Himber, contrary to reports, did not disband his orchestra. He merely abandoned his "Pyramid Style" of music.

WHEN Bert Lahr rushed back to Hollywood for the premiere of "The Wizard of Oz," he was accompanied by his press agent, Mack Millar . . . . at 3 a. m., in their drawing room, Millar was awakened when Lahr turned on the lights. The publicist yawned, and glared at his client in the lower berth—his client who was peering through the window and the dark night, with his right hand shading his eyes like an Indian scout, muttering: "San Bernardino? Is this San Bernardino?" . . . "Hey, Bert," Millar shouted, "wotsamatter with you?" . . . "Sh," Lahr responded. "Sh. It's okay for me to do this. Don't your press releases say I'm a genius?"

DR. GEORGE Washington Carver, the distinguished Negro scientist of Tuskegee Institute, will have his autobiography published by Doubleday, Doran. Rackham Holt will do the ghost writing . . . The first issue of the new "Civil Service Leader" is a sellout . . . The 4 Ink Spots, who receive $1,500 a week at the Paramount, have been sold for a 10-week tour, at $2,500 . . . New Yorkers who have relatives in Portsmouth, England, have received letters from them reporting that their great pleasure is to visit the Portsmouth shipyards now and watch the Bremen being repainted.

The Gentle Art Of 'Hazing' Pesters Star

Andrea Leeds Pays Penalty of Revealing Her Engagement

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Sept. 26.—Falling in love in Hollywood has its serious disadvantages. If you don't believe it, ask Andrea Leeds.

She announced her engagement a week ago to young Bob Howard, son of C. S. Howard, the wealthy automobile distributor and race horse owner. Next morning she showed up for work on the Twentieth Century-Fox set of 'Swanee River," wearing a $25,000 engagement ring.

Miss Leeds was proud of that sparkler. She showed it to Don Ameche, who plays Stephen Foster, the song writer; to Sidney Lanfield, the director, and to everybody else in the cast. A couple of hours later a prop man, brought into the plot by Lanfield, distributed to everybody on the set, from lowliest electrician to hairdresser, a 10-cent store diamond ring.

All hands lined up and filed past the blushing Miss Leeds, each demanding that she admire his ring.

Bad Enough to Worse

"That was bad enough," she reported, "but next morning it was worse."

It was a lot worse. Tied to her dressing-room door was an old white horse, labeled "Dog Biscuit," in honor of the father-in-law-to-be's Sea Biscuit. The movie-maker informed Miss Leeds that he had given her the horse so she could become accustomed to such animals. Then her phone began to ring.

Messengers arrived with urgent notes. Motors backfired outside the stage and their operators demanded to see Miss Leeds. They all claimed they were the sad owners of whizzmobile straight eights (it wouldn't be advertising; it would be libel to mention the brand of automobiles Howard sells) and they wanted service. Not only that, they wanted their money back.

For Her Own Good

Miss Leeds laughed this off as best she could, but couldn't laugh off Director Lanfield, who found the time appropriate to shoot the scene showing her marrying Ameche.

He made her practice walking down the aisle and saying "I do" to the preacher. Then she had to kiss her make-believe husband.

"Kiss him again," Lansfield ordered. "You must get this right, not only for the picture, but for your own husband."

So she kissed Ameche again and when she demurred at doing it still another time, Lanfield assured her: "It's for your own good."

More Monkey Business

When Lanfield had married Miss Leeds and Ameche to his own satisfaction, he thumbed through the script and rearranged the shooting schedule again to meet the exigency. So Miss Leeds found herself immediately springing the news to her make-believe husband that she was about to present him with an heir.

Lanfield had her rehearse this half a dozen times, too, on the theory that the practice might come in handy later.

Miss Leeds did all this in a yellow hoop dress, so tight about the waist that it left her gasping. Between takes, she unhooked it down the back and breathed easier.

"And I'll breath easier still after I'm finally married and all this monkey business is over," she said.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 26 (INS).—Bette Davis is really having herself a time in the East and a vacation she richly deserves, for she made four pictures last year, a large number for an actress of her popularity. She has told her bosses she won't return for a few more weeks and because Hal Wallis is eager to get "We Shall Meet Again" started, he has given Bette another assignment. She will star in Somerset Maugham's story "Up At the Villa" and I have an idea that Edmund Goulding, with whom she loves to work, will direct her.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Hal has talked with Jean Arthur about doing "We Shall Meet Again," originally bought for Bette, and it is likely that Jean will accept for, as far as I know, Columbia has no story ready for her and that is the only thing that would keep her from the Warner studio at this time.

The red-headed Turner gal, who always attracts plenty of attention wherever she goes, will not stay idle at M-G-M. Her bosses will cash in on the publicity she received in "Dancing Co-ed" and start work within the next two weeks on "Twenty Little Working Girls." Mervyn Leroy took along a script of "Today's Girl" for Lana, but she will do "Twenty Little Working Girls" first. In Los Angeles, the title "Twenty Little Working Girls" means a group of socialites who are well known here, but M-G-M's plot has nothing to do with them. Their story is about a chorus of 20 night club girls and one of them, Lana Turner, studies to be a lady. The story is by Bradford Ropes, with the adaptation by Arthur Freed.

Hedy Lamarr proved herself a real heroine when the Gene Markey boat was stranded in Catalina along with the Frank Butlers, the John Fords, the Errol Flynns and others who were tossed about the sea by the terrific storm. Hedy stayed up all night making coffee for the seamen and cooked breakfast herself. All of the picture folk who were in the storm have an idea now what those poor people on the Athenia suffered when the ship was torpedoed. The Warner Studio was fit to be tied when Errol Flynn sent word that he and Lili were stranded at the isthmus on his sailboat and might not get back in time for the preview of "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex." Errol hates premieres! You don't suppose by any chance he could have conspired with the elements to keep him over there?

Chatter in Hollywood: One of Betty Grable's close friends hints that as soon as the blonde film actress is legally free from Jackie Coogan, she will wed Artie Shaw, the popular band leader. Betty met Shaw, the idol of so many of the younger set, after she and Jackie decided to part and it is really a romance, according to one of her intimates. She is now in New York keeping a stage engagement.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: David Niven leaves October 10 for England—not because he has been called, but because he wants to do his part; Rodin Rathbone, Basil's son, leaves early tomorrow morning for Canada to enlist. Mrs. Basil is going East to meet her niece, who is returning from France; Mickey Rooney turning the charm on Barbara Dougal, a new bud, at Victor Hugos; Fay Wray is expected back in town Thursday after a summer in stock; Andy Devine really went to town and bought his bride a sport car for their sixth wedding anniversary; Andy, mayor of Van Nuys, and Richard Arlen, mayor of Sunland, have sent out invitations to a big premier of "T[illegible] Fury." The whole of San Fernando Valley will turn out and there are promises of a parade with pretty girls and all the other valley mayors, including Hugh Herbert, Bing Crosby, Al Jolson and Mischa Auer on hand to greet the natives.

Meanwhile, I reckon the "Elizabeth and Essex" gala preview will have to go on without these valley luminaries. Tickets are at a premium for the Warner preview now that heat wave has subsided; they shot around Jane Bryan and Eddie Albert today while they, with Jean Parker and others, were trying to get back from the isthmus following the storm; the Don Ameche baby, born prematurely July 27, was able to leave the hospital today and be taken home, much to the delight of his older brothers; lots of interest in Ingrid Bergman, the Swedish actress in "Intermezzo;" William Gargan and Annie Sothern practice their Brooklyn accents by the hour for "A Call on the President;" that was Lois Earl with Charles Butterworth at the Del Haven; Brenda ("The Rains Came") Joyce has bought herself a new fur coat and can't wait to wear it.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 26.—The war had been on four days before Adrian and bride Janet Gaynor knew anything about it. They were still honeymooning in hills outside of Mexico City, where they'd gone to see gardenias growing wild. As they approached the village the natives ran towards them with huge old-fashioned bouquets of gardenias topped off with orchids. Which cost eight cents. Janet said: "In that case, let's go all the way—and buy two." They counted 64 gardenias in each. Adrian tells me that Mexico is all emerald green with rolling hills and looks like Ireland. They flew to Guatemala, where life is more primitive, but they were showing "The Man in the Iron Mask." It will be hard for Adrian to keep Mexican influence out of our clothes. They're so dramatic, with pride of ancestry. Adrian's now busy adding a sun room for Janet in his valley home.

HOPPER

De Wolfe Hopper's first play was "One Hundred Wives." He married six. But not from the original cast.

Ian Hunter and Henry Hull had an argument on the "Patsy" set the other day. Todo would follow Virginia Weidler, but it wouldn't Hull or Hunter no matter how much they tempted him. "Maybe he won't follow us because we're moldier," said Hull.

After 10 days at Coronado, Ann Rutherford came home with a Junior Lieutenant's Annapolis cufflinks—supposed to be pretty serious. But doesn't she know they have to wait several years after graduation?

Clark Gable bought the old fire truck from Metro. Moved it out to his ranch in case of fire. He's been using it on himself the last week.

The "Hunchback" location set is the worst in town. It's been 130 there. They improvised a sprinkling system and played water over the roof, but that caused steam which fogged the camera. Why it was so hot that Laughton's hump started to run. So now they're working nights.

I love Greer, "Mrs. Chips" Garson's summing up of Hollywood. "Last year I wasn't good enough for anything. This year, studio says nothing's good enough for me." And Greer is so delighted with her popularity, that she's answering her own fan letters.

Blase Hollywood! When Norska, exotic Carroll dancer, walked down Hollywood Boulevard carrying a paper parasol and wearing a sarong, not one person paid the slightest attention. But Norska tells me we don't know about sarongs in Hollywood. A real one reaches the ankles. That thing Dottie Lamour wears in the islands is called a "doti," a sort of prelude to the real thing. "Dotis," in case you're interested, are worn only by children!

Bill Gargan almost dropped when he saw the set for "A Call On the President." It was Henry street, in Brooklyn, where Bill was born.

The set Winnie Shehan showing place where he first worked as reporter, still stands at Fox Studio.

Garbo Starts Film In Cotton Hosiery

Garbo started her twenty-second picture in cotton socks. However, this wasn't the star's choosing. The script called for it. In "Ninotchka" she plays an efficient Russian woman commissar. The severe garb of Soviet women was worn, including a military-blue mannish coat and skirt, black cotton socks just like those men wear, and coarse peasant shoes.

Don Budge Ready To Quit as Pro For Executive Job

Red-Headed Star Decides to Leave Game After All Prospective Opponents Fail to 'Come Through;' May Make One More Tour

By Bob Considine.

New York, Sept. 26.—Seventy-five thousand dollars richer than he was a year ago, and by all odds the greatest player in the game, Don Budge is ready to give up pro tennis, take an executive position with a large sporting goods firm and confine his exercise to learning how to play the piano—he revealed to us today.

DON BUDGE

The war, the failure of Jack Bromwich to win enough amateur events to make him good pro timber, and Don's own horror of ever becoming a drug on the sports market, have brought about Big Red's resolution. The 23-year-old net champion has had enough, and net got enough.

There may be one more tour. "Vince (Richards) and I may go to South Africa this Saturday," Budge told us. "But that'll be all.

No Talent in View

"I don't want to sound swell-headed but there isn't a chance of another good pro tour in this country, I mean a real good one, and I don't want to play tennis if . . . well . . . if I can't play it in a big way. Why, it would be something like Paul Muni making a great hit and drawing a lot of people to a Broadway show for six months, then going over and putting the same thing on in Brooklyn," he said, with a faint note of indignation.

The South African tour, which is being held up because the promoters out there also want Tilden and Les Stoefen, is the only part of Budge's war-ruined tour which he will consider. He was supposed to go there at the conclusion of his English showing, about the time the war cracked, but friends told him that it would be a dangerous voyage on an English boat.

"I figure the war cost me 25,000 bucks," he estimated. "That is, the war and Fred Perry. Perry ran out on us at the start of our English trip and the various promoters knocked between 5,000 and 10,000 off my guarantees. The rest of the 25 grand went when we gave up the long tour through Egypt, India, the Straits Settlements, New Zealand, Japan and those places.

Tilden Still Hot

"But I can't kick. I made the 75 they guaranteed me when I turned pro. I wanted to make it 100 in one year, but I guess 75 is okay."

Budge finally got around to playing Tilden, in England. He's still impressed. "Nobody'll ever be able to convince me Tilden wasn't the best of them all," he said. "Just think, he's 47 years old and he's still a great player. You should have seen some of his matches against Vines . . . 10—8, 9—7, sets like that. Bill beat Stoefen four or five times more than Stoefen beat him.

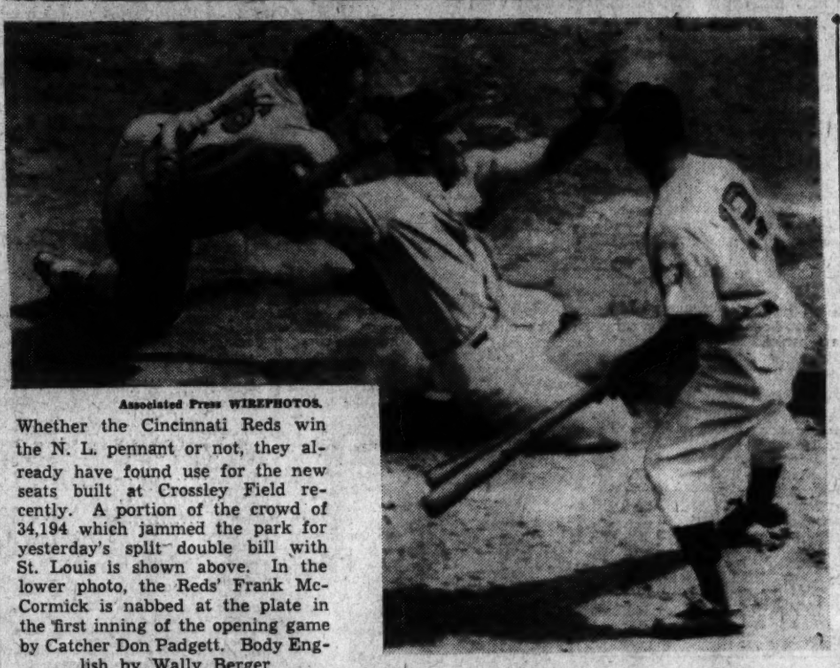
"The first four times I played Tilden I beat him pretty bad. So Jack Harris—he was running the tour—came to me and said he didn't think I should play Tilden as often as I played Vines. That was okay with me. But the next time I played Bill I guess I took things a little easy at the start. Anyway he got off to a lead, playing great tennis, and I never could catch him. Beat me in straight sets. What a guy!"

Budge can't see anyone in the amateur game today worth commercializing as a pro, except Bromwich. And he's not too sure that Bromwich will become the No. 1 amateur, because of a bad temperament. There are no young pros coming up either, he points out.

Don believes he turned pro at precisely the right moment to make a fine haul, and that this is the best time to get out of the pro game, take a "dignified job," and realize a lifelong ambition to play the "St. Louis Blues" on the black keys as well as the white.

Reds, Cards Split in Crucial Games

Not the World Series Yet—Just the Crowd at Card-Red Double-Header



Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

Whether the Cincinnati Reds win the N. L. pennant or not, they already have found use for the new seats built at Crossley Field recently. A portion of the crowd of 34,194 which jammed the park for yesterday's split double bill with St. Louis is shown above. Cincinnati Needs Only One Victory To Win Flag

34,194 See Redlegs Take Opener, 3 to 1, Then Lose, 6 to 0; Walters Hurls Today

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 2.—Little Billy Myers' big bat propelled the Reds to within one victory of their first National League pennant in 20 years today, his home run with two aboard defeating the St. Louis Cardinals, 3 to 1, in the first game of their crucial double-header, and making it relatively unimportant that the challengers came back to take the second, 6 to 0.

It was the first game that Manager Bill McKechnie wanted. When it was in the bag, thanks to Myers' big blow and some stout-hearted pitching by the freshman star, Gene Thompson, Bill relaxed and took a flyer on the nightcap.

It probably was a painful anti-climax for the howling crowd of 34,194 who paid their way into Crosely Field expecting the Reds to mop up and close the race, when Bill nominated Lefty Lee Grissom to pitch the second one.

Walters Goes Today

Especially after they saw the Cards knock Grissom from the hill in the first inning, score four runs off him and his immediate successor, "Red" Barrett, and ruin the game right there. But it didn't bother Bill. He had saved his ace, Bucky Walters, for tomorrow, and he expects Bucky to administer the knockout.

If the Cards had won the first tilt, McKechnie had intended to throw his overworked star into the second. But by gambling with Grissom, he was able to give Walters a full three-day rest before sending him out after his twenty-eighth victory of the season. That's almost a vacation for Walters.

Then, if by chance Walters should bow to the Cardinals' Fiddler McGee tomorrow, the Reds still would have the other half of their "big two," Paul Derringer, fresh and rested, to toss into the breach in the final with the Cards Thursday. It was conceded among the master minds that McKechnie had done some first-class thinking.

Today's crowd was the biggest of the season and the noisiest. Hours before game time they were fighting to get into the plant, and when the available space was exhausted, they were admitted to a new, unfinished section of the stand, where they sat contended on the structural steel.

Myers gave them the thrill they had come to see. In the second inning, with Ernie Lombardi and Harry Craft on base, he caught one of Curt Davis' fast ones on the nose and bounced it over the leftfield wall, the ninth home run of the

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

There comes to hand a dispatch from Mr. Ned Irish, minister of propaganda and public enlightenment of the New York Giants' football team, who would have it known that a young man named Eddie Miller will play considerable football against the Redskins on Sunday.

POVICH

Press Agent Irish, ordinarily a restrained sort of publicist inclining more to the subtle than the spectacular, grows positively lyrical about young Mr. Miller, to wit:

"I must tell you about a New York halfback who I think will outpass Ed Danowski, Sammy Baugh and Frankie Filchock on Sunday. In the eyes of G. P. Marshall, this is probably a burning-at-the-stake crime, but I personally think that little Eddie Miller, the rookie from New Mexico Aggies, is the hottest back to join the Giants since Tuffy Leemans in 1936.

"Miller completely stole the show from Davey O'Brien in Philadelphia last Sunday as Ray Flaherty will reluctantly agree. He is a cocky little fellow weighing 165 pounds, 20 pounds less than the next lightest player on the Giants' squad. He has all the assurance in the world and I don't think even the splendor of the Redskins' opening-day ceremonies on Sunday will feaze him."

Claims He's the Fastest on Squad in Years

Press Agent Irish then begins to cite exciting facts. "He is the fastest back we have had in years. He was timed by Howard Roberts, of the Chicago Daily News, at Superior, Wis., last month in a sprint the length of the field in full pads and uniform, and he galloped the 100 yards in 10 1-5 seconds."

That isn't all. "It's hard to believe that this little fellow can punt a ball with Ken Strong, Ed Danowski and Len Barnum, but he has been doing it. Watch him in the pre-game punting practice. He'll match them yard for yard, and he gets height, too.

"But his best point is his passing. He completed four of seven in Philadelphia in his debut and he played only 25 minutes. I wouldn't be surprised if the real passing duel on Sunday should turn out to be between Miller and Filchock instead of Danowski and Baugh.

"He throws a rifle-like pass, just as all those Southwestern boys do. He's a baseball player—played Class D ball with Clovis, N. Mex., last summer. He was born in Muskogee, Okla., but lived in Idaho for a while. For a 22-year-old kid, he's been around. He was at Texas Christian before he transferred to the New Mexico Aggies. What I'm trying to get across is: Watch out for that little No. 9 on Sunday."

Some Facts He Neglected to Mention

There are other facts which Press Agent Irish neglected to mention. He forgot to point out that the astute Steve Owen, coach of the Giants, actually thinks young Miller is a swell football players and is grooming him to fill the shoes of Danowski, who has announced his intention to retire at the end of the season.

And it was a stroke of luck on the part of the Giants that landed young Miller on the team in the first place. They were interested in a New Mexico Aggies player, but his name wasn't Miller. His name was Joe Yurcic, a strapping lineman whom Giant scouts had strongly recommended. But Yurcic wouldn't join the Giants unless they took his little pal along. So the Giants signed the pair of 'em and last week released Yurcic to their Jersey City farm.

Miller may, indeed, be the kind of football player the Giants' tub-thumper claims him to be, but for the present Coach Flaherty, of the Redskins, will continue to worry chiefly about some other performers on the Giants' team. Such tried and potent packages as Tuffy Leemans, Danowski, Ward Cuff and Ken Strong are now providing Flaherty with all the worries he can handle.

About the only worry Flaherty is not confronted with as the game nears is cockiness and overconfidence on the part of his Redskins. If there is any disposition by the Redskins to take the Giants lightly, Flaherty need only mention a certain 36-0 score by which the Giants won the last game between the two teams.

Giants Are Well-Heeled With Place-Kickers

Any time the Giants are in Redskins' territory and in possession of the ball, Flaherty will have reason to resort to crossed fingers. The Giants are better-heeled with place-kickers than any club in the league, what with Ken Strong joining Ward Cuff in the booting department this season. Strong and Cuff each booted a field goal against the Eagles last Sunday.

And in Tuffy Leemans, Coach Steve Owen has the finest break-away runner in the league. Leemans is the sort who is apt to go all the way. He shook off four tacklers in scoring his touchdown against the Eagles. As yet, the Redskins haven't come up with that sort of a ball carrier. Anything the Redskins achieve on Sunday must slide off the pitching hand of Sammy Baugh, who, incidentally, is not a bad sort to have around.

Archibald's Manager to Protest

Will Seek Authority To Decide When and If Tomorrow's Bout Should Be Stopped

A pre-fight squawk by Al Weill, manager of Champion Joey Archibald, was the chief development yesterday as Archibald tapered off his training for his featherweight title defense against Harry Jeffra tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium.

From his New York headquarters, Weill announced that he would demand that the District Boxing Commission give him full power to decide whether the bout should be stopped in the event that Archibald's left eye is reopened during the fight.

Although apparently foredoomed to failure in his demands, Weill will make his petition to the Boxing Commission today. The commission's regulations vest only the referee with the power to stop a fight, although the referee may call the commission doctor into the ring for advice.

Archibald's wounded eye, which occasioned a postponement of the bout three weeks ago, apparently is entirely healed. He has worn a large patch over the eye in training, and suffered no set-backs. Weill, however, is wary of what he calls "a sympathetic referee or an over-anxious commission doctor." Former Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard has been imported from New York as referee.

In Baltimore, backers of Jeffra

Army Is Drilled On Fundamentals

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 26 (AP).—Army's football coaches chose a rainy day to give the Cadet squad a long workout on fundamentals, stressing ball handling, passing and tackling in today's drill. Most of the time was devoted to individual instruction as each man was put through his paces on the wet field. The session wound up with a short scrimmage.

The tailbacks, Jere Maupin and John Hatch, both completed long and short passes during the scrimmage with Hudson and Yeager receiving.

The United States Golf Association was advised by the Ladies Glf Union of Great Britain that it had canceled all competitions during the war.

Three Nat Rookies Bombarded As Macks Take 15-4 Victory

By Shirley Povich.

Nobody was killed, but three of Clark Griffith's young pitchers were lambasted very thoroughly yesterday by the Athletics. Late in the game the A's were averaging five runs per inning. It all added up to a 15-4 defeat for the Nats.

The A's warmed up on young Early Wynn, late of Charlotte, and jolted him loose from five runs in the first six innings, but they didn't get downright obstreperous until the eighth when one Louis Thuman arrived on the scene for the Nats. That was when the A's moved six runs across the plate. They tapered off in the ninth with four runs against left-handed Bill Holland, another Charlotte product.

If it wasn't the Nats' worst performance of the season, it was at least a photo-finish affair. They heaped four errors on top of their horrible pitching. Morris Aderholt dropped a throw at second base that figured in three Philadelphia runs, and Buddy Lewis made a wild throw to first base that ushered two more runs across the plate.

Moses Leads Attack

All told, the A's collected 15 hits off the Nats' minor league pitching talent, with Wally Moses fattening his batting average nicely. Moses beat out a pair of bunts, slammed a single to center and rattled a two-bagger off the rightfield wall.

Bill Beckman, who shut the Nats out on his last appearance at Griffith Stadium, yielded ten hits yesterday, but by the end of the eighth inning he had an 11-2 lead. For six innings he pitched three-hit ball and all three of the Washington blows were tainted affairs.

For four innings it was something of a pitching duel between Wynn and Beckman with both clubs scoreless, but in the fifth the A's came up with a pair of runs with only one hit needed. Al Brancato drew a walk, Bob Johnson singled to center, and a pair of long sacrifice flies produced the runs.

They made it 5-0 in the sixth, packing four hits into the inning to a score of three runs. The big blow of the session was Moses' double off the rightfield wall.

Nats Score a Pair

Beckman was pitching shut-out ball until the seventh when the Nats finally stirred up a couple of runs on three straight hits. Aderholt beat out a bounder to Lodigiani. Bloodworth singled to left and Vernon doubled to left. Bob Johnson's error on Vernon's hit permitted the second run to score.

Eight Thirty, Leg Injured, To Miss Pimlico Dream Race

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 26.—A filled leg sent G. D. Widener's Eight Thirty into retirement for the year today and cut the copper-colored colt out of a chance to settle his 3-year-old title claims with Johnstown and Challedon in the Pimlico dream race November 1.

Trainer A. J. Joyner announced at Havre de Grace that the brawny son of Pilate had failed to train out of a slight injury suffered while working in Maryland 10 days ago and that he would be shipped to winter quarters at once to forestall possible permanent disability. The statement evoked a prompt reply from Alfred Gwynee Vanderbilt here in New York that the Pimlico fixture was thereby thrown open to possible drastic changes.

Vanderbilt originally polled turf writers for candidates to be invited to the third running of his special and received the nominations of Johnstown, Challedon, Eight Thirty 3-year-olds—C. S. Howard's Kayak II and T. B. Martin's Cravat. Vanderbilt and his associates subsequently determined on the first three choices to settle the 3-year-old crown.

Tonight the young squire of Sagamore said he could not reach a decision immediately, but indicated that the Special would be run either as a match race between Challedon and Johnstown, or that additional invitations would be mailed to Kayak II, Cravat and also to Howard's Sorteado, who set a new North American record for a mile and a half last week. If the latter three contenders are invited, Vanderbilt said the distance of the Special would probably be extended from a mile and three-sixteenths to a mile and a half.

Dodgers Split With Giants, Gain '39 Edge

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 26.—The Brooklyn Dodgers, by dividing a doubleheader today with their arch enemies, the New York Giants, managed a 12-to-10 edge in the intercity series between the two clubs—almost as satisfying as winning the league title.

The Giants won the day's opener, 9-5, but the Dodgers came back, with Luke Hamlin pitching a fine four-hitter, to win the seven-inning nightcap, 3-2. Darkness halted the contest.

In the first game, Cookie Lavagetto's homer with the bases loaded put them away to a flying start as they wound up with five runs in

Leonard on Mound; Ladies' Day Today

Manager Buckey Harris will surround Dutch Leonard with the best talent on his club today in an effort to assist the knuckle-ball pitcher to his twentieth victory of the season.

With the game designated as a special Ladies Day contest, Leonard will take the mound against the Athletics. In the Washington infield will be a full complement of regulars, with Rick Ferrel behind the bat. Harris is benching his rookies for the afternoon in his attempt to make the day propitious for Leonard, who has nineteen wins to his credit.

The Washington and Boston clubs have agreed to cancel the game for Friday and play it as part of a double-header tomorrow.

Tulane Ranked Tops in South

Alabama Is Rated in Second Spot in 1939 Southeastern Race

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 2.—From a prominent Southern football official today came a personally revised rating of the "big three" of the Southeastern Conference.

The gentleman admits that most of those on the ground rank Tennessee, one of last season's unbeaten-untied survivors, as likely top team of the conference, with Alabama second and Tulane third. But he calls an offaide to that one, and says:

"My choice would be Tulane first, with Alabama and Tennessee fighting it out for second place. Tulane has a great aggregation. They lost only 3 lettermen and returned 28."

This Dixie observer also puts the finger on probable individual stars. For the best backs, he tabs George (Bad News) Cafego, of Tennessee, and Jim (Sweet) LeLanne, of North Carolina, who won more than a little prominence in 1938, and Jimmie Nelson, of Alabama, a sophomore prospect from Live Oak, Fla.

Tennessee Conceded Third Honors in Grid Official's Pick

Outstanding linemen, he believes, should be Walt Merrill, Alabama tackle; Milton Howell, Auburn guard, and Bill Kirchem and Ralph Wenzel, who play tackle and end, respectively, for Tulane.

Tennessee is one of five teams that came through their last year's regular schedules without defeat or tie which begin their 1939 campaigns Saturday.

Wings Beaten, 7-0, in Junior World Series

By the Associated Press

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 26.—With Leroy (Bud) Parmelee serving up four-hit ball, Louisville defeated the Rochester Red Wings in the opening game of the Junior World Series here tonight, 7 to 0. The Colonels, going along on a 2-0 lead until the ninth, scored five times in the final frame.

PARMALEE

Louisville, representing the American Association in the twenty-first renewal of the series with the International Leaguers, contributed gilt-edged support and a rousing 11-hit attack to Parmelee's shutout. They played errorless ball and completed four double plays to nip Rochester scoring bids.

Sherlock, Louisville second-baseman, rapped a home run with a man on base in the fifth. That was all the scoring until the Colonels pounced on Mike Ryba, Rochester starting pitcher, in the ninth and continued against his successor, Elwyn (Preacher) Roe, for four hits, a walk and an error for five runs.

Every man in the Louisville lineup but Fred Sington, right fielder, hit safely, Sherlock, Morgan and Parmalee getting hits in pairs. Though they rapped Ryba for seven hits up to the ninth, only in the fifth when they collected three blows, including Sherlock's four-master behind Campbell, could they score against him.

Sherlock's second hit in the ninth followed a pair of singles, a sacrifice and an intentional pass, and it scored two runs, giving him four runs batted in.

DuVall, Terp Sophomore, Shines in Scrimmage With G. W.

Completes 4 Aerials in 7 Attempts

Triple-Threater Shares Spotlight With Wiliamoski, Hard Hitting Back

By Jack Munhall.

The handful of spectators which got wind of another secret football scrimmage at College Park between Maryland and George Washington yesterday got their first real look at the kid touted as the Terps' athletic find of a decade.

Although his injured ankle is still bothersome, Merle DuVall, the thriple-threat sophomore back who is remembered as Maryland's outstanding freshman athlete in football, basketball and baseball last year, really opened up in his brief appearance.

Before a knock on his bum ankle forced him to retire from the scrimmage DuVall completed four of seven passes, one for 40 yards to End Dick Shaffer, and otherwise conducted himself as befits the fellow around whom Coach Frank Dobson is building his offense.

This kid DuVall is not tall at 5 feet 10 and he isn't very heavy at 169 pounds, but he's a natural athlete and its doesn't require more than a quick look to know why Dobson sees in him a better forward passer than Chuckin' Charley Weidinger, the Terps' great quarterback of last season.

One Bad Toss

Already he is a master of the art of feinting one way and throwing another, the passing trick that makes one player a good passer and another a Sammy Baugh or an Ed Danowski.

With George Washington expecting a pass every time he took the ball because he couldn't run on his bad ankle, DuVall still hit the bull-eye's on all but one of his seven throws. His only bad pass was one released as two big Colonial linemen bore him to the ground. On another occasion he wasn't able to throw at all because of fast-charging linemen, but the other five times his heaves were beauties.

One traveled about 30 yards before it was caught and carried an additional ten by the fleet Shaffer. The next went to the other end, Francis Beamer, and was good for 15 yards. Beamer then dropped a perfect strike down the middle which would have been good for at least 15 yards before DuVall year for the town's favorite shortstop.

Lombardi Slugs

That was the ball game.

After walking in a Cardinal run in the third, Thompson settled down to scatter four hits over the last six innings and win going away. He had all the Cards beat except Joe Medwick, who banged two doubles and a single.

After bouncing Davis, the Reds could do nothing with his four successors, either, though Lombardi had a perfect game with a double, single and two walks.

Though it didn't much matter, after his teammates had staked him to such a big early lead, Cooper proved that the Reds could be stopped cold in the second bout. Of the four hits he allowed the near-champions, one was an infield fluke and the other sailed over the noggin of an outfielder who misjudged it.

Md.-District Ladies' Pin League Opens

Shepherd Park Five On Top as 20 Sets Of 500 Are Rolled

Exceptional scores marked the opening of the new Maryland-D. C. Ladies Bowling League last night at Indian Spring Alleys, all but four of the 24 sets rolled being over 500.

Shepherd Park Wine five turned in the high game, 572, as it also took down set honors with 1,655. It swept three matches with Liberty Wallpaper and Paint in the process. Lucile Young had an individual set of 358, to lead the charge.

In other matches, R. E. A. Cleaners took the odd game from Shaffer's Flowers, Gifford Ice Cream took two from Adell Beauty Shop, and Occidental Hotel won two from National Ale.

The 14 teams of the Ladies' Catholic League and the 10 teams of the Liquor Distributors' League opened season play at Lucky Strike. Margaret Smith, Holy Trinity, rolled a top game of 130 and a high set of 320 in the former league, while L. A. A. O., last year's champs had a high team game of 511.

In the latter league, Stanley Korman's 148 proved high game and Walter Osin, Try-Me, had high set of 373.

Elsie Lusher, of Linden, was high girl with 132, and Fred Hartung, of Spruce, was high man with 136 in the Forest Service Mixed League.

Ted Sheckels, of the Greenwood Market team, turned in high set in American League rolling at Silver Spring, 407. Team game went to E. C. Keys & Sons, who flattened 620 pins.

Coast Racer Wins On Track Here

Profiting by the crack-ups of two early leaders, Mel Henson, Los Angeles driver, in an Offenhauser, won the featured 30-lap midget auto race at Capitol Speedways last night, covering the distance in 8 minutes 18.36 seconds.

About 10,000 thrill-happy spectators jammed the stands for the first show under the direction of Ray Alvis, who took over last week-end.

Grid Contest Fans Predicting Win for Irish, Divided on Pitt

Washington's football-minded folks concede Notre Dame a victory over Purdue Saturday in the opening game for the Irish, but opinion is sharply divided on the outcome of Pitt's battle with the University of Washington.

It isn't necessary to pick the scores—merely the winners. The rules are few and simple. Merely check the winners, mail your entry to "The Football Contest Editor" of The Post before the deadline, and await results.

To each of the five winning contestants, The Post will present a pair of choice tickets to the first college double-header football attraction in Griffith Stadium history—the Georgetown-Roanoke and George Washington-Davis Elkins games scheduled for Saturday, October 7.

Red Raiders And G. W. High Meet Friday

Game Will Be Played Under Floodlights On Alexandria Field

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 25.—Safely past its opening test against a strong Fredericksburg High School eleven last week, George Washington High School's grid team opens its home floodlight campaign against Western High, of Washington, on Friday night at the G. W. Stadium. The kickoff is scheduled for 8 o'clock on the dot.

The home season will be inaugurated with appropriate ceremonies, and G. W. officials plan to have some nationally prominent sports figure on hand to toss out the first ball.

The Presidents came through their 12-0 victory over Fredericksburg without a casualty, and the full squad will be available for the Western tussle, barring injuries in practice this week. "Tarzan" Hicks, who was forced to miss the opener as the result of a slight ankle injury, has responded to treatment and will be ready for action, while several others nursing minor pre-season injuries also will be available.

2 Headgears Are Dented in CentralPractice

In an effort to arouse fear in the minds of Gonzaga High gridders, its opponent for Friday afternoon, Central High announced yesterday that two football helmets had been turned in with huge dents in the crowns.

The head pieces, according to the announcement, were the property of Benny Steiner, triple-threat backfield star, and Bob Belk, a reserve. The pair crashed head-on with such force in a first and second team scrimmage the almost undentable guards were well crushed.

Unable to boast such a fearful occurence, Gonzaga merely claimed a ticket sale of 800 for the 3:30 game at Central Stadium. It was about 300 above the original estimate.

A special assembly at Central yesterday morning was devoted to building interest in the interhigh champions' grid team. While Coach Hardy Pearce suspiciously searched the gathering for scouts from Gonzaga and St. John's, the latter the opposition for next Friday in the first schoolboy night game at Griffith Stadium, two fully uniformed elevens went through special plays on the stage.

second for a force play was muffed by Aderholt. Siebert singled to center and the third and fourth runs of the inning scored. Sam Chapman grounded out, but on Fred Chapman's grounder, Buddy Lewis took plenty of time and careful aim, and then threw the ball a dozen feet wide of first base, letting in the fifth and sixth runs of the session.

Holland got his in the ninth. He walked two batters, unleashed a wild pitch, served a single to Moses, a double to Johnson and, on the progressive system, a triple to Sam Chapman.

termed the published odds of 2 to 1 in favor of Archibald as "absolutely absurd." A Baltimore group which subscribed $2,500 to be wagered on Jeffra, declared that they had difficulty in getting their bets covered and were forced to accept 7 to 5.

Archibald did not box yesterday but he trained ten rounds on the light and heavy bags and at shadow boxing in Turner's Arena. Jeffra refused the pleas of Matchmaker Ahearn to work out in Washington yesterday, protesting that it would interrupt his training routine at Baltimore.

Max Waxman, Jeffra's manager, who has underwritten the bout for $10,000 in order to give his boy a chance at the title, consented, however, to Jeffra's appearance in Washington today. Challenger and champion will both hold public workouts in Turner's Arena. Jeffra will go into the ring at 3 p. m., after Archibald has finished his stint.

Tickets Move Briskly

At Baltimore yesterday, Jeffra boxed six rounds and trained for six rounds on the bags before 700 Baltimore fans at the Century Athletics Club. Three thousand Baltimoreans are expected to be at the ringside tomorrow night.

Tomorrow at noon, the fighters will present themselves at the District Boxing Commission's office for the weighing-in ceremonies. Neither will have any difficulty making the 126-pound featherweight limit. Charlie Goldman, trainer of Archibald, declared the champion would make 125 pounds, a half-pound more than Jeffra is expected to weigh.

Tickets were moving briskly at both the Washington and Baltimore fight headquarters and a gate in excess of the $10,000 guarantee to Archibald is foreseen by Promoters Ahearn and Turner. Most in demand have been the $5 ringside tickets. Box seats are selling at $3.45 and reserve grandstand seats at $2.30. There are unlimited general admission seats at $1.15.

Fine Recovery Gives Buckingham Medal in Columbia Golf

Par on 18th Bags 74; Nee, Bono Second

Martin McCarthy, Medalist of 1938, Fires 76; Match Play Starts Today

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Don Buckingham, one of the city's best "week-end golfers," brought out his best Sunday game yesterday to win the medal in the annual Columbia Club championship, with one of the best 4s of the season on the eighteenth hole.

E. L. Bono and Maury Nee were in the locker room with 75s, apparently tied as co-medalists, as Buckingham came down the homestretch. 4 over par for 11 holes. He went 5 over on the fourteenth, but dropped a birdie deuce on the sixteenth and needed par to win the medal.

His par 4 on the seventeenth was easy, but on the eighteenth tee he hit a long hook that finished out of bounds and virtually ruined his medal chances. But he proceeded to hit another booming tee shot, followed that with a fine No. 4 iron within 3 feet of the pin, and knocked the putt in for a 4 and the medal, despite the penalty stroke.

Bono was the first 75 to finish, and then Nee, one of the finest amateurs in the city several years ago when he was active in the tournament program, finished with a 75. Martin F. McCarthy, medalist and runner-up last year, made the grade easily with a 76.

Other 80 breakers were George Miller, Page Cornwell and R. H. Pickford, all with 79s. Don Kneesi had an even 80. Craig McKee came out of "retirement" and qualified with an 83, while Luther C. Steward, jr., played the last three holes in under par to get in one under the wire with an 84.

The seven flights will swing into the first round of match play today in the week-long event, with McCarthy meeting Billy Shannon and Nee playing Page Cornwell in the features.

R. W. Davis was medalist in the second flight with an 80, while D. R. Elmore and Hugh MacKenzie tied in the third with 82. R. W. McCreery's 84 won qualifying honors in the fourth flight, while Gen. Malin Craig, recently retired, was among the qualifiers. The 91s of Lieut. C. M. Durgin and Dr. W. Bruner led the fifth flight.

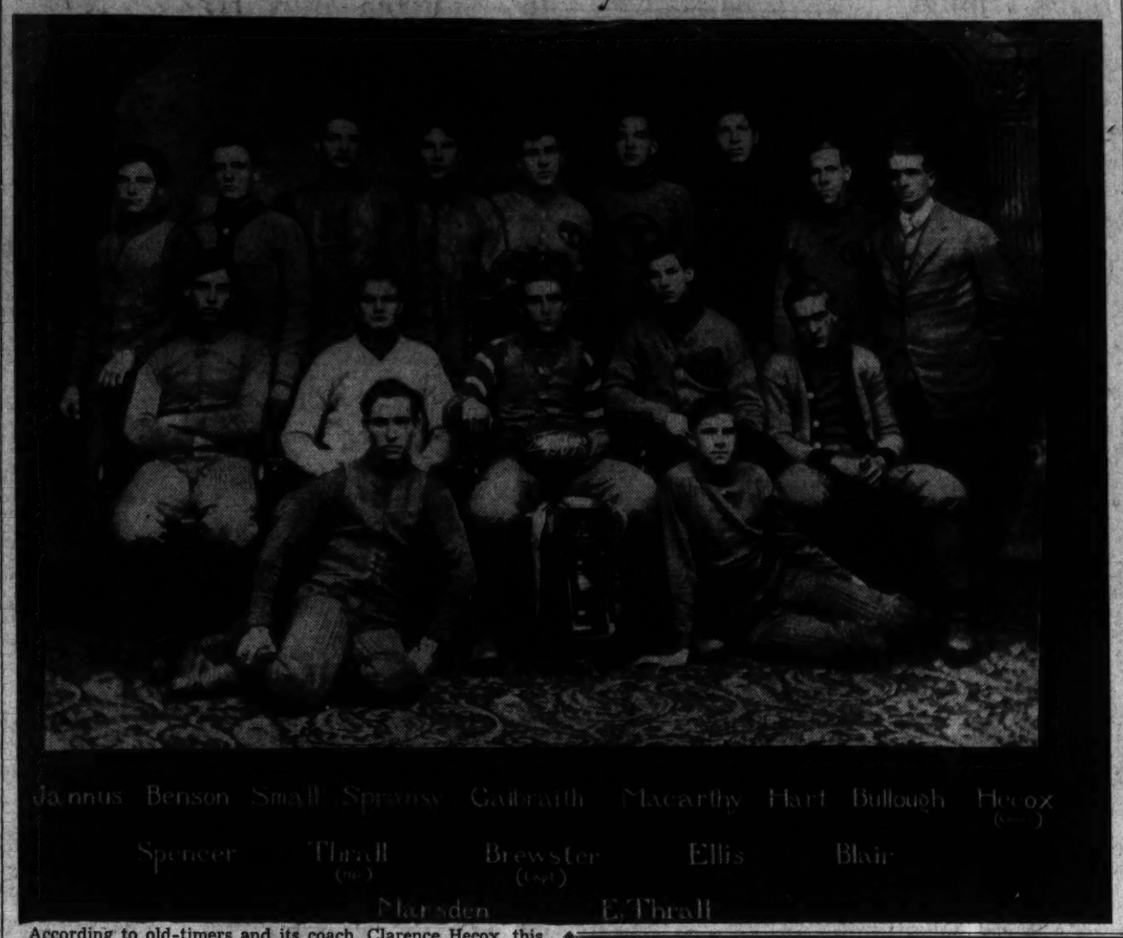
'07 Gridders at McKinley Called Greatest of All



According to old-timers and its coach, Clarence Hecox, this was the greatest football aggregation ever to rule the Inter-high ranks. It is Tech's champions of 1907. It came along midway in the longest grid winning streak ever compiled in the local public schools. Tech held the title from 1903 to 1910

Tech Started Record Streak in 2d Year

Recovered From Lacing in First Interhigh Grid Start to Hold Title For Seven Years in Row

By Bill Burnett

When old grads of McKinley High gather over a bucket of beer and talk over the old days of football, it isn't long before they mention the name of Clarence Hecox. He was the first Tech coach, though now he is shifted over to Central. (a move some old grads may consider rank desertion.)

Hecox came to Tech in 1903, ostensibly to teach mathematics or some such subject. Officials had something else in mind, however. Though the school had been organized in 1901, when the interhigh series had been canceled because Central was "too strong," it got into the 1902 scramble and got its ears convincingly pinned back. Central ground out a 23-to-6 decision, almost a repetition of the unfortunate Business High beating two years earlier.

Hecox, therefore, wasn't at Tech more than a few days when he was approach and "offered" the football squad with the terse order, "Beat Central." Hecox did just that. He whipped 'em that year by one touchdown in what must have been a "battle to the death." An unheralded backfield combination—Dick Senior, Gray Kennedy and Johnny Bell—turned the trick and went ahead to beat Western, Business and Eastern for the championship.

Only the Beginning

That was only the beginning. Under Hecox's able mentorship, McKinley captured seven straight football titles. And of all the greats in that era, Hecox calls his 1907 club the best.

"We beat George Washington and Maryland University, besides mopping up the high schools," the rugged veteran proudly boasts. "It took us only 15 minutes to run up a 17-0 score on G. W., and, if you remember, the immortal Curley Byrd was a star of the Terps in 1907."

Two games are outstanding in Hecox's memory of that great '07 eleven. The first was Tech's game with Georgetown Prep, and the second was the clash with Business.

Harry Costello and another standout backfield man, Fury, played with Georgetown Prep's club in anticipation of becoming eligible to play with the mother school, G. U. To add to the general muddle of pre-game predictions, rain started falling the night before in bucketfuls. The field was 8 inches deep in mud, and still the rain fell at game time.

Tech, on the short end of 3-1 odds, won the game. Its warriors glided over the sloppy surface with all the ease in the world, while Costello and Fury and other Prep stalwarts were bogged to the knees.

Phils Defeat Bees, 5-3, Before 200

Higbe Scatters Boston Hits, Drives in Run Which Breaks Tie

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—Steady hurling by Kirby Higby gave the last-place Phillies a 5-3 victory over Boston today and ended a six-game losing streak.

The game, played before 200 fans, was the Phils' forty-fifth victory of the season, the same number of wins scored by the National Leaguers in 1938.

Higbe not only bore down in the pinches and scattered the Bees' ten hits, but his hit in the fifth drove Morrie Arnovich home to break a 1-1 tie. Jim Turner held the Phillies to eight hits, but home run drives by Joe Marty and Letchas aided in his defeat.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson,
WJSV Staff Baseball Announcer

Jimmie Bloodworth and Al Evans were the least guilty Nats in the debacle against the Athletics yesterday and to them go the chief awards in the Man of the Month contest. Points were distributed as follows:

To Bloodworth, four points, because he made a single and double which figured in three of the Nats' runs and handled four chances flawlessly in his rightfield post.

To Evans, four points, because he collected two of the Nats hits in the early innings when his mates were going hitless.

To Jimmy Vernon, two points, because his seventh-inning double led to the Nats' first two runs of the game. The totals:

Browns Set All-Time Record— For Losing Games, Drop 109th

They Can't Break League Mark, However— Don't Have Enough Games Left This Season

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 26.—The Browns set a new all-time record for St. Louis American League Club defeats today when they dropped their 108th and 109th games of the season to the Detroit Tigers, 5 to 4 and 7 to 5.

The major league record for defeats is 117 by the Athletics in 1917.

The Tigers came up from behind to win both games, although Joe Gallagher, Brownie outfielder, was the star with three home runs. Two of them were in the short nightcap, called at the end of seven innings because of darkness.

Rudy York, Joe Grace and Hank Greenberg also hit for the circuit in the second game.

Slow Motion Comes From Behind to Capture 'Graw Feature

Last Message Runs Second, Pernie Next

Winner Pays Backers $6.40 Ticket; Comes From Last Place to Win Going Away

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 26.—An all-Maryland victory marked the running of the Hillen Road Purse, the outstanding event on today's program. Slow Motion, ridden by Jockey F. Kelly, trained by F. A. Bonsal, jr., and owned by J. W. Y. Martin, a trio of Free Staters, forged to the finish line a length in advance of his nearest rival to score over the 6-furlong course. Slow Motion, a son of the Maryland sire, Canter, came from last position to win going away and hung up good time of 1:11 4-5.

Last Message, representing the Tall Trees Stable, was second, a neck in advance of Mrs. Colin MacLeod's Pernie, a virtual co-favorite with the winner.

Slow Motion paid-a $6.40 mutuel to a good portion of the 7,000 customers, witnessing racing under the ideal conditions that have prevailed since the meeting opened.

Last Message and Pernie locked horns early in a front-running duel that seemed to point to one of them as the winner. Slow Motion was off sluggishly but Jockey Kelly finally got him into full stride. Leaving the backstretch, Pernie took a slight lead over Last Message but Slow Motion, aimed at the outside, was flying now.

Pernie continued to have a brief lead in midstretch and Slow Motion wore him down to bound away with the purse. Pernie found the long drive weakening and faltered enough to allow Last Message to nose him out of second money.

A lukewarm horse, Roncat won the first race from a limit field of juveniles and paid $12.90 while setting the stage for a $33.20 mutuel in the daily double. J. V. Stewart's Blare, a $4.20 favorite, put the finishing touches on the twin wager.

3 Life Agents Here Awarded C. L. U. Degree

R. L. Baldwin, Robert W. Castle and J. L. McElfresh WinDiplomas

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Among those eligible to receive diplomas from the American College of Life Underwriters at its regular conferment exercises in St. Louis, Mo., this week, are the following from Washington, D. C.: Roger L. Baldwin, general agent, Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co.; Robert W. Castle, Underwriter, Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., and John L. McElfresh, general agent, Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co.

This year's examinations of the college were held recently in 90 colleges and universities. Seventeen hundred and forty-six candidates reported for the chartered life underwriter (C. L. U.) examinations and 14 others took the examinations in life insurance agency management. These candidates represented 334 cities and towns in 42 States, the District of Columbia and Hawaii.

Of the 1,746 candidates who took the chartered life underwriter examinations, 114 passed completely, and having fully completed their eligibility requirements, will be awarded the C. L. U. designation. Diplomas of 36 others who passed all of the examinations will be deferred until the college receives evidence that they have satisfactorily met certain stipulated experience requirements. Certificates of proficiency are being awarded to four candidates and certificates in life insurance agency management to ten.

Objections of College

The American College of Life Underwriters, which awards the chartered life underwriter designation, was established by leaders in the life insurance vocation for the fourfold purpose of establishing an educational standard for the profession of life underwriting; encouraging and fostering training of students in educational institutions for the career of professional life underwriter; cooperating with educational institutions in general life insurance education and recognizing properly qualified life underwriters with a professional designation.

In setting up educational standards for the C. L. U. examinations which would win universal respect in insurance, professional and academic circles, recognition was given to the fact that life underwriters need to know more than the principles and practices of life insurance itself. Their calling deals intimately with economic and sociological problems, principles and psychology of salesmanship, private ad corporation finance, banking and commercial credit, thrift, investment, taxation, contractual relations of many kinds, wills, trust arrangements and managements of estates.

Familiarity with these subjects is highly desirable for life underwriters in order to qualify them for their negotiations with businessmen and others on a basis of mental equality. Accordingly, the five examinations given by the American College of Life Underwriters, as one of the prerequisites for the C. L. U. designation, cover all of these fields. It is quite evident, therefore, that candidates successfully passing these comprehensive examinations have an educational background of a high order.

Examinations in life insurance agency management recognize that capable management requires certain education and training of a distinctive nature which is not necessarily associated with large personal production or the rendering of professional service. The subjects covered are particularly related to sound agency development and administration.

Cunningham a Ford Manager

Maj. Henry M. Cunningham, a Washingtonian, has been appointed manager of the Alexandria branch of Ford Motor Co. Maj. Cunningham is one of Washington's pioneer automobile men, dating his connection with the industry back to 1910, when he was sales manager for Miller Bros., as that time the only Ford dealers in Washington.

Subsequently Maj. Cunningham went into the retailing of automobiles in his own behalf and continued to operate his business until the time of the World War. He was commissioned an officer in the Air Corps and served abroad in that branch of the service. At the conclusion of hostilities he remained in the Army for a period.

In 1924 he assumed charge of retail sales of Lincoln automobiles for Washington and vicinity and was promoted as Lincoln division sales manager, which post embraced sales responsibility for territory covered by the Alexandria branch, namely a portion of Maryland, a considerable part of Virginia and part of West Virginia, in addition to the District of Columbia.

Though not the largest in area, the Alexandria branch is one of the most important of the 34 operated by Ford Motor Co. in the United States. Maj. Cunningham succeeds Earl D. Bottom, who has been transferred to managership of the Louisville branch and assembly plant.

Thomson Re-elected

Eliot H. Thomson, publicity manager of Washington Loan & Trust Co., was again elected to the senior advisory council of the Financial Advertisers Association at the Toronto convention. William H. Neal, Winston-Salem, N. C., banker, was also included among the 24 members. Mr. Thomson has attended many conventions of the association and taken great interet in the discussions.

8 Months' Sales Of Autos 43% Ahead of Year Ago

New York, Sept. 26.—Retail sales of motor vehicles gained 43 per cent over the corresponding period of last year during the eight months ending with August, according to the Automobile Manufacturers Association. Total sales of 2,177,952 units included 1,816,179 passenger cars and 361,773 trucks.

Passenger car deliveries increased 45 per cent over the 1,249,105 individual sales reported a year ago, while commercial vehicles reflected a gain of 31 per cent over the 277,427 sales reported for the first eight months of 1938.

The August retail sales total was 210,138 units, including 166,070 passenger cars and 44,068 trucks. August was the tenth successive month of the current market advance.

Passenger cars were 34 per cent above August, 1938, while trucks were 30 per cent ahead. Compared with July, August revealed the seasonal decline which is almost invariable. Where passenger car sales were 28 per cent off in the month, however, truck sales declined but 14 per cent, reflecting greater relative strength in the field of business use.

U. S. Foreign Trade Expands During August

Exports Increase 9 Per Cent and Imports Gain 4 Per Cent

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department reported yesterday a gain in United States merchandise exports in August, the month before the start of the European war, which officials expect to enhance United States foreign trade still further.

August figures, available yesterday, showed that exports increased 9 per cent over July, while imports increased only 4 per cent.

August exports totaling $250,839,000 were $75,083,000 in excess of the $175,756,000 imports for the month. This brought the excess of exports over imports for the first eight months of the year to $437,136,000, compared with $781,832,000 in the same period last year.

The August export figure compared with $229,629,000 in July, while the August import figure compared with $168,925,000 in July and $165,516,000 in August last year.

For the first eight months of the year the United States exported $1,896,322,000 and imported $1,439,186,000, compared with last year's exports of $2,049,112,000 and imports of $1,267,280,000.

Although exports of farm products from the United States have lagged steadily this year, some slight improvement was shown in August, particularly in the case of cotton shipments to Europe. Europe bought $6,855,000 worth of American cotton in August last year and lifted this figure to $9,285,000 in August this year. This increase was partly offset by smaller shipments to Japan.

Food Exports Heavy

Although August shipments of foodstuffs valued at $8,384,000 were about 80 per cent larger than in July, they were still behind last year. For instance, August exports of 5,903,000 bushels of wheat compared with 9,900,000 in the same month last year, and August exports of corn declined from 12,647,000 in August, 1938, to 1,087,000 bushels this August.

Increased exports were reported, however, for scrap iron, semi-manufactured steel products, industrial machinery, motor trucks, rubber tires and airplanes.

Officials explained that the apparent increase in merchandise imports was more due to higher prices for the imported items than larger quantity.

Expectations of larger foreign trade for the United States growing out of the European war are based both on the possible purchases of supplies in this country by England and France and the likelihood that Latin America and other countries which formerly bought much merchandise from the belligerent nations will turn here for goods.

Demand for Railroad Shares Carries Market to New High for This Year; Rail Issues Also Lead Bond Advance

New York, Sept. 26.—Spirited bidding for railroad shares, which were slow getting under way when the war market started nearly a month ago, carried the stock market to a new high for the year today. The composite index touched 109.46, thus bettering the previous war mark made on September 13, and reaching its highest level since November 12, 1938.

Right up to the close of trading the railroad issues set the pace and their best prices came in late dealings. The new high for this group was the best since Nov. 12, 1937.

Popularity of this group is based on current figures showing a sudden increase in freight traffic and also the August earning statements, now being made public, which indicate a vast improvement over a year ago.

The general market averaged up 0.72 point for the day in trading of 1,712,670 shares. Metal shares were no more than steady and a number of the miscellaneous manufacturing issues also reflected profit taking but in addition to the rails there was good support for the equipments, steels and motors. Railroad bonds improved along with the junior securities.

Rail Traffic Gains

The rail market has been in the making for several weeks but when war was declared the first rush of speculators was into the stocks of companies which, it was thought, would benefit immediately from war orders. Actually there have been virtually no war orders let in this country, but there was a rush by domestic consumers to fill their needs and replenish their depleted inventories before higher prices, caused by the war, placed them at a disadvantage. This has brought about a sudden boom in railroad traffic and the current loadings are reported by some roads to be their best in ten years.

Helping the rail shares on their way have been statements from railroad executives of an optimistic nature. Rail equipment shares have done fully as well, for after years of permitting their rolling stock and other equipment to run down, the roads are now rushing orders. This has in turn contributed to the pick-up in the steel industry, which is now operating above 83 per cent of capacity.

New York Central was the most active stock today and added 1⅝ points, closing at a new high for the year. Pennsylvania was next with 1½ points gain, also at a new high. Of the 15 most active stocks, 11 were railroad issues and 1 as an equipment issue. Southern Pacific advanced 1⅜. Southern Railway 1¾, Northern Pacific 1, Great Northern preferred 1½ and Southern Railway preferred 4⅜. Less active Norfolk & Western starred in points gained, adding 8, which put it also at a new 1939 high. Atlantic Coast Line was up 3, Atchison 2, Nickel Plate 3⅜, Union Pacific 2, C. & O. 2¼, L. & N. 2⅜ and D. & H. 2⅝.

85 New Highs

Market statistics were almost as impressive as on some of the earlier days of the war market. Of the 897 individual issues traded in, 470 advanced. There were 85 new highs for the year, a good proportion of which were rails and the allied equipment issues. Industrials did not cut much of a figure, although du Pont jumped 3¼. Steel was up 1½ and Bethlehem about the same amount. Whereas in recent sessions the rails have accounted for only a small proportion of the day's business, they made up 28½ per cent of the share turnover in today's dealings and in the bond market the rails accounted for about two-thirds of the trading.

The Automobile Manufacturers Association announced that retail sales of motor vehicles for the eight months ended August 31 were 43 per cent above those for the same period in 1938. Steel prices firmed.

Trading in leading commodities showed a mixed trend. Light selling brought an early decline in wheat of as much as 1 cent a bushel, but there was a good recovery on short covering, the close being up ⅛ to ⅛ cent. Cotton was steady at the opening, but developed irregularly, closing plus 7 points to minus 4 points.

Rail Bonds Lead Rise

Listed bonds of all descriptions were in demand today, with low-priced domestic rails easily the leaders of the upswing. United States Treasury issues moved a little higher and needed no support. Foreign dollar bonds rallied from their recent lows. But it was the speculative group of domestic bonds which attracted most attention, gains in such bonds ranging to 6 points. Turnover amounted to $16,920,000.

The medium and low-priced American railroad bonds were in keen speculative demand, and possibly also under accumulation by some investors. Gains in our domestic economy appear sufficient to justify such a movement, which is gathering headway. Bonds of carriers like New York Central and Southern Pacific were in heavy demand.

Alabama Receives Heavy Steel Orders

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 26 (AP).—Rail and car orders amounting to more than $3,500,000 were placed today with Alabama plants already running at high speed because of war-inspired domestic orders. The Illinois Central Railroad ordered 750 all-steel hopper cars from the Pullman-Standard Car & Manufacturing Co. plant at Bessemer, and Southern Railway ordered 26,000 tons of rails and an unannounced amount of track fastenings and accessories from the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co.

Another carrier, the Frisco, was understood to be in the market for at least 15,000 tons of rail. Steel operations in Alabama hit 86 per cent this week, the highest figure since 1937.

Retail Advertising 2.6% Above Year Ago

Chicago, Sept. 26.—The rapid developments in the European war have thus far shown little influence on the trend of newspaper advertising placed by retailers in the leading cities in the United States, according to Advertising Age, today.

For the week ended September 16, this publication reports, retail newspaper linage in 78 leading markets was 2.6 per cent above the corresponding week of 1938, the linage figure this year being 21,288,621, as against 20,749,442 last year.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 26.—American and rail shares attracted a following in a stock market otherwise chilled by the forthcoming budget message. Kaffirs pointed lower and oils continued easy. Highlight of the British government bond division was a rise in the 4½ per cent conversion issue to £111⅛.

Paris—Price trends in the bourse were irregular today. Rentes ended unchanged to 1 franc up. Suez Canal lost 160 francs.

Liverpool—An abrupt run-up in cotton futures late today was mostly canceled at the finish. Closing prices were unchanged to 5 points higher.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Sept. 26 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—Prices advanced on a fairly active trade today in the finer Western grown wools. Wheat Prices Recover With Closing Rally

Earlier Losses of a Cent a Bushel Are Replaced by Gains

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 26.—The wheat market wiped out losses of about a cent a bushel today and in the last few minutes of trading advanced to net gains of ⅛ to ½ cent over yesterday's close.

Late buying represented short covering to some extent. Pessimistic reports from the hard winter wheat belt and ho promise of material moisture relief attracted attention. December wheat closed at 85⅞@86, and May at 86½@86⅝.

Earlier in the session wheat had been under light but persistent selling pressure induced by showery weather in parts of the grain belt, estimates of a record world supply of wheat and talk of peace efforts in Europe. However, with war developments and a Congressional decision in neutrality legislation awaited, market activity was restricted. Export business remained quiet but some Canadian wheat was sold.

Feed grains weakened with wheat but could not develop sufficient rallying power for a substantial recovery. Corn closed ⅛ to ⅜ lower, December 54¼@54⅜, May 57¼, and oats unchanged to ½ lower. Rye finished ½ to ⅞ cent net higher. Lard lost 13 to 27 cents.

Closing wheat prices were 1⅛ to 1⅜ cents over the session's lows. Trade reports indicated the Federal Crop Insurance Agency has been buying wheat in conenction with cash receipts for premiums. Unfavorable crop conditions have encouraged taking of insurance.

Cottonseed oil futures skidded lower in the wake of falling lard prices today. A late rally, paralleling the action of the competitive fat, carried the market up from the lows but final prices were still off 11 to 15 points.

Sales totaled 197 lots; October *7.20, December *7.34, January *7.04, March 7.55, May *7.64.

Steel Presidents Take Opposite Neutrality Sides

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—Benjamin F. Fairless, president of U. S. Steel Corporation, said today that as an individual he fully endorsed President Roosevelt's proposals for amendment of the neutrality laws.

He pointed out that Ernest T. Weir, president of the American Iron & Steel Institute, was speaking only as individual yesterday when he opposed revision of existing laws in a statement. "Weir had every right as an individual to state his opinion," he said, "but the matter has not come officially before the institute."

Fairless said he agreed with Weir that business interests should be put to one side in the hope of keeping America out of the war, but he thought the best way to keep America out of war was to revise existing laws as suggested by the President.

Fairless said he did not want to enter into any controversy with Weir on the subject and that he thought Weir was as much opposed to war as he was but there was an honest difference of opinion as to the best way to keep out of the conflict.

Fairless said that there had been no war orders received by his company from belligerents and no inquiries relating to what might technically be described as war materials. "There has been," he said, "a marked increase of legitimate export trade and domestic business has also been increasing rapidly.

"While employment has increased sharply in the steel industry, exact figures are not available."

Col. Birnie's Funeral to Be Held Today

Retired Ordnance Expert Developed Coast Defense Guns

Funeral services for Col. Rogers Birnie, Ordnance Department, U. S. Army, retired, who took a leading part in developing modern coast artillery, will be held at 4 p. m. today at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel. Burial will be at West Point, N. Y., tomorrow.

Col. Birnie died Monday night at his home, 1835 Phelps place northwest, after a week's illness. He was 88 years old, and had retired in 1915.

A native of Taneytown, Md., Col. Birnie served in Washington as assistant in the office of the Chief of Ordnance from 1886 to 1898. He was acting chief of ordnance in 1912 and 1913.

Col. Birnie graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1872 at the head of his class. He began work on guns while inspector of ordnance at West Point from 1880 to 1886, and later helped in the development of the 16-inch coast defense gun. While in Washington he was instrumental in securing legislation authorizing modern coast artillery defenses.

He was decorated with the Legion of Honour of France. He was a member of the Army Board of Engineers, the Ordnance Board, the Board for Testing Rifled Cannon, and the Board on gun forgings, until his retirement.

He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Ernest Graves, of Washington, and two grandsons, Rogers Birnie Horgan and Ernest Graves, jr.

An interesting part-score struggle is revealed in the bidding of today's hand. The deal was taken from the last round of the masters' pairs championship for the Von Zedtwitz Gold Cup. The eventual winners, Harry Fishbein and Robert Appleyard, sat in the East-West seats.

Fishbein and Appleyard finally came out on the winning side of the score slip, defeating their adversaries one trick at three hearts. Although the win amounted to only 50 points, it was important, as Fishbein and Appleyard probably would have been defeated at their bid.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
WEST DEALER

NORTH: ♠ A8532 ♡ 1074 2 ◇ 532 ♣ 2

WEST (Fishbein): ♠ None ♡ Q93 ◇ AJ87 ♣ AQ10954

EAST (Appleyard): ♠ QJ107 ♡ 64 ♡ 85 ◇ 106 ♣ J86

SOUTH: ♠ K9 ♡ AKJ6 ◇ KQ94 ♣ K73

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	1 ♠	Dbl	Redbl
2 ♣	Pass	Pass	2NT
3 ♣	Pass	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 7 ◇.

The psychological factor is of more consequence in the struggle for partials than elsewhere in the bidding. Precise decisions must be made not only concerning the limit of the hands but also as to how far the opponents will be pushed before they call a halt and take a defensive stand, usually with a double.

Fishbein started the bidding on a fairly light hand—some players would not consider it an opening. But there is an increasing belief among the experts that, particularly to establish a fighting line for a partial, weak hands with rebiddable suits must be bid at once.

The wisdom of North's overcall is extremely doubtful, but with South's rock-crusher the contract could have been made, had it not been fished out by Fishbein. North would win the ace and king of hearts, one of the diamond honors, the ace and king of spades and two club ruffs for seven tricks.

South's bid of two no-trump was meant to show his partner he had the strongest hand at the table. Fishbein overcalled with three clubs, apparently for psychological reasons of his own which we will not attempt to reconstruct. At any rate, South responded, climbing to three hearts in a last attempt to play the hand. Luckily he found four trumps lodged with North and the set was only one.

Fishbein led the seven of diamonds, a fine play. South could not pull trumps and ruff two losing clubs and the last diamond as well; so he lost three diamonds, a heart and a club.

NUTS AND JOLTS

Seasoned Timber

By Dorothy Canfield

Clifford, a small town in Vermont, is the scene of this story of Timothy Coulton Hulme, principal of the academy. He is a genuinely interesting person, but it is Dorothy Canfield's fine writing which reveals to you his mind and soul—and his love. The story opens on a September day which brings its routine, including working on the school budget, coaching a would-be tennis player, answering the doorbell and taking Timothy's Aunt Lavinia down the hill to Miss Peck's to supper. There we meet more of the real absorbing characters with which the book is filled. There is Miss Peck, taciturn and capable; Mrs. Washburn, the nonstop talker, and Mr. Dewey, an idealist and practical townsman extraordinary.

DOROTHY CANFIELD

SHE WAS launched. Her listeners knew from the cadence of her voice that the story would be long and took refuge in their own thoughts from the rainlike patter of her words. Mr. Hulme began to turn over in his mind the probable effects of a new teacher on reading in the third grade. He had been testing out for some years a hypothesis of his that the cause for the slovenly, dismally approximative reading of adolescent students with which he wrestled in the academy went back to bad teaching in the third grade. His heart sank at the thought of an untried person in charge of that class. Not because of this particular teacher, for he did not remember her name and had had nothing to do with her appointment. In Clifford, during the last century, as in many Vermont towns with old seminaries and academies, a tangled web of inconsistent relations had grown up between the privately endowed schools which were part of the State system. Clifford people took their system for granted, but repeated explanations often failed to make it clear to newcomers, who insisted on trying to find an over-simplified short cut by asking stupidly the one question which could not be answered with a yes or no: "Just tell me one thing—is the academy a public or a private school?" By the articles of incorporation of the academy, its three trustees were elected by the voters of the town. Yet the town officials had no authority over them once they were elected. The academy was run on the interest from its small endowment and its tuition fees; yet by a State law the town was obliged to pay a large part (but not all) of the tuition fees; and by tradition was bound to appropriate money at town meeting for the upkeep of the roofs, walls, and foundation of the academy, but not for repairs on the inside of the building. It was perfectly simple when you had lived all your life in Clifford, and your father and grandfathers before you. Why ever did newcomers profess to find it complicated? Why wasn't it perfectly natural that the local school board in charge of the elementary schools, jealous of its prestige, kept the matter of appointing the teachers for the primary rooms in its own hands; and yet expected the principal of the academy to serve, without extra salary, as local superintendent of schools?

The result, in fact, of this perfectly natural division in authority was, of course, that Mr. Hulme, as far as the primary school went, was obliged to do what he could with teachers he had not chosen and knew nothing about. But he was used to the situation and indeed had observed that like many other illogical arrangements evolved by time, it worked about as well as those contrived by reason. This girl would probably be no worse as a teacher of reading than any other. His lack of enthusiasm over Mrs. Washburn's news came from his dislike of having teachers work for their board. Local tradition, he knew, saw nothing amiss in it. But he did. He told people he disapproved because housework took time needed by teachers in their classrooms. The truth was that he had for various reasons rather a sore sense of the dignity of his profession and did not like to see members of it waiting on tables and washing dishes. It was not, he thought "suitable." He had inherited something from his British father, if not a liking for tea for breakfast.

". . . and my mother told that teacher straight out, that she would never let me set foot in school if it ever happened again," said Mrs. Washburn, stopping for breath.

Mr. Hulme cut in with a sharply put question, "Why does she work for her board? The salary's not bad. Why should she?"

Miss Peck had been paying as little attention as anyone else to the portrait of Mrs. Washburn as a sensitive child, and knew at once to whom Mr. Hulme referred.

"Orphan. Smart younger sister to educate," she explained.

The answer, he admitted unwillingly, neutralized the acid of his question.

Mrs. Washburn had recovered her breath and claimed Mr. Dewey's attention with a long Cliffordian research into the teacher's ancestry, punctuated with, "My idea about it is . . . I always tell people that . . ."

MR. HULME did not hear the end of that conversation. Without warning, the protecting drone of the dull talk thinned, and through it he heard the tolling of a bell to whose implacable warning he had been—he realized it—shutting his ears for hours. Those recurrent reminders of his age that had been thrusting at him—he had tried to ward them off. But he knew now the poison that tipped their points—it was the appalling fact that each man has but one life to live.

Like all men he knew by hearsay, but who ever believes unwelcome news that is only hearsay? He was horrified to have his protecting incredulity vanish like smoke, not to be able to defend himself at all from the deadly truth that a life once lived can never be lived over again, more richly, more bravely, more dangerously. If you have shot your bolt, you cannot shoot it again. Like a black sack thrown over his head from behind and drawn stranglingly about his throat came the premonition that—for him—this was all. He was not merely beginning one more insignificant commonplace year. Before him lay nothing but a dwindling succession of such years. The chance for anything else had slipped between his fingers.

Why in God's name should this obvious fact, familiar to him for years, now shake him like a premonitory pang of death?

Because it was a premonitory pang of death.

With what self-possession he could, he summoned his mind to his rescue, whistling it up, ordering it out for one of its skeptical explorations, commanding it to think of some ingominious physical cause for his suffering which might cast a tarnishing materialistic slur upon its meaning. But his mind knew the adversary to be unthinkably more powerful than itself. It whimpered and cowered down in fear, its panic warning him of worse to come.

In vain he rebuked it for betraying him when he needed it most; in vain he bade it make him rationally mindful of his good health, his useful profession, the clean mountain air he breathed, his pleasure in books, his little manual triumphs in refinishing old furniture, his skill on the tennis court, the constant contact with youth. "What more could a reasonable man want?" he asked his mind.

But in the darkness around him there was no reasonableness to echo these moralizing words. They died and were as though they had not been. His mind cowered more abjectly as huge doors swung relentlessly open into a primeval world where it could not follow its master. From the blackness beyond there tolled the dirge-like tidings that for Timothy today would be the same as yesterday, that the old thorn would grow out of the old stem, and mornings would be cold and evenings gray.

"Will you have some chocolate pudding?" Miss Peck asked of what looked like Prof. Hulme sitting in thoughtful silence at her table.

Manner-reflexes, trained in youth and practiced through many years till they could stand alone, inclined his head, held out his plate, remembered even not to extend the arm in the torn sleeve. The souffle was as superlatively good as the meat pie. He ate it with relish. His appetites, tranquil in their illiterate inability to understand a word of the complex speech of the mind and heart, suggested as he ate that much more could be done with them if he would but give them their due. But he put them scornfully in their place, refusing a second helping to prove to himself that he had not yet fallen into the middle-aged man's sad and sordid exaggeration of the importance of eating.

He pushed his empty plate away, reflecting acidly that he had enjoyed the pudding. He laid the lash of irony on his cowering mind, snatching up as he often did, consciously or unconsciously, a tag of quotation. "There can't be much amiss 'tis clear, to see the rate you drink your beer."

But no, the will, able to control actions only, could command not an instant of the resilient, irreverent mobility in which his mind usually delighted. That worse which it had forseen, now came to pass. It saw its master, helpless to resist the sweep of the secret current which had brought him to the doors of that ancient world in which there is no such thing as mind, carried away into an old darkness where he was not a teacher—not an active speculating intelligence—only a wifeless, childless, obscure and aging man, very lonely, whose flesh and heart had been cheated.

But although the will cannot stand against those crashing intimations of mortality, it yet can, he dryly reminded himself, control the facial muscles. There was no point in visiting on other people a bitterness that was none of theirs. He took thought, passed a hand over his face to rub off the bleakness, and selecting from among the accents under his control the one pleasant compliment, said to Miss Peck as he rose from the table. "My nightly prayer is that God will have a good kitchen range waiting for you in heaven," and to his aunt, "Well, Lavvie, m'lass, come saddle your horses and call out your men. It's time for us to be off."

HE HAD, however, but a few steps to go in that dark inner solitude and desolation—only as far as the outer door—before a summons from his profession called him back to the illusion of safety, power, and success. A stranger was mounting the front steps, an embarrassed middle-aged working man. He came to an uneasy halt halfway up and wanted to know would it be all right to ask Prof. Hulme was it true about last year's domestic science teacher at the academy not coming back, because his sister—she had graduated from Simmons and had been teaching for ten years in a Massachusetts high school only she'd had appendicitis this summer and her doctor wouldn't let her work where the classes were big—"My name's Lane. Johnny Lane. I work in the chair factory in Ashley."

Mr. Hulme's recall to outer reality had been so abrupt that he could not at once focus on the point presented. He strayed from it into two astonishments which Clifford life often gave him—the way in which plain families of working-people often managed to send a son or daughter to a good college, and the speed with which news traveled. There were times when he suspected a system of secret drums, passing the word along in throbbing code up and down the valley. Aloud he said yes that was so but however could you have heard it? I had the telegram from Miss Dawson only this afternoon.

There had been no magic, at least nothing but country magic. What had happened was that young Eli Kemp on leaving the principal's house had driven at once to Ashley to take them the news. "We're kind of related, the Lanes and Kemps, and he knew about my sister." Mr. Hulme had another familiar sensation of groping his way through the invisible meshes of a cobweb of relationships that filled the valley from side to side. He said, "Oh . . ." rather blankly.

"My sister's out here in the car," his interlocutor now said dubiously, as if apologizing for being pushing.

"Ah . . ." said Mr. Hulme, more alertly. His mind, recovering a little from the shock of finding what a pitiably small part it played in his life, ventured to suggest pertly that to have an experienced and sufficiently competent teacher washed up to him by the tide would amusingly confirm the Clifford theory that it is always a mistake to be brisk and prompt. He countered dryly with the reflection that something more than recent appendicitis was probably the matter with this candidate, or she would not be looking for a job in a poor country school. "Just wait a moment, Aunt Lavinia." As he walked towards the car he set his mind rigorously to the prosaic work of using his professional experience to read personality through the camouflage of looks.

IT WAS EASY reading. There was no camouflage. Stoutish, 40, plain, tailored, eyeglassed, self-respecting—successful experience had its not-to-be-imtated symbols all over her. Seeing principal approach, she got out of the car without hurry, and composedly introduced herself by name to him, with the manner of one equal speaking to another. By this, he knew she was a practical person who had learned how to take hold of life by the right end. In her uneager expression he further read that she probably had plenty of savings salted away, did not seriously need this job, and hence, as is the world's grim way, stood the more chance of getting it. By the time he had shaken her hand, he was ready to lead her in the domestic science room, give her an apron to tie around her comfortable middle, and begin to expand his ideas about the importance of teaching Clifford girls how to make better use of the raw materials to be found around them. She looked as though the idea would not be as surprising to her as to some of the teachers he had trained.

To Be Continued.
